

ALLEGED EFFORTS TO BRIBE MANNING TO CHANGE STORY CAUSE JUDGE TO BAR VISITORS FROM CELL

Maddox in Race, Making Bunco Issue Certain

FORMER CHAIRMAN OF POLICE BOARD RUNS FOR COUNCIL

Councilman Etheridge, His Opponent, Voted for the Majority Report on Bunco Probe.

STAND ON THIS ISSUE FEATURES MANY RACES

Registration Books Will Close Monday for White Primary to Be Held on August 31.

What is regarded in city politics as an outright challenge to sound the attitude of Atlanta's citizenry on the recent bunco and police department investigation developed Saturday when James W. Maddox, former police board chairman, announced his candidacy in opposition to Councilman W. M. Etheridge for the fifth ward seat in council in the white primary of August 31.

Adherents of Mr. Maddox issued a statement Saturday announcing that Mr. Maddox is making this race "yielding to the wishes of 150 citizens who have signed a petition asking him to offer for council." They stated that Mr. Maddox agreed to make the race over long-distance phone Saturday.

Position of Etheridge. Mr. Maddox was out of the city, and could not be reached for a statement, but Dr. Etheridge was acquainted with the development and was asked if he did not regard Mr. Maddox's announcement as a deft on the bunco and detective issue.

"I intend to make my race squarely on my record as councilman from the fifth ward," was Dr. Etheridge's reply, "but if the campaign is to be fought out on the bunco probe line I shall not hesitate to accept the challenge."

I voted for the majority report of council's investigating committee, and I have absolutely no apology to make for this vote or for any action I have ever taken officially or unofficially as councilman.

If Mr. Maddox pursues his campaign on the issue of the probe I shall meet him fairly and squarely on this point, and I have confidence in the fact that the voters will uphold me. I shall be glad to oppose Mr. Maddox on this or any other issue.

Figures in Many Races. In addition to this race the bunco and police investigation and report of council will figure in a number of contests for council and the board of aldermen.

Mr. Maddox has for years been prominent in city political activities, his career as a city official terminating early this year when Mayor Kipp addressed a letter to him asking him to resign as police commissioner.

It will be remembered that in council's election to choose either Mr. Maddox or Mr. Ellis Barrett as police commissioner, after Mr. Maddox had incurred public censure by the grand jury for putting up bond for detectives under charge of being implicated in the bunco ring, Mr. Maddox was the winner.

The result of an error in the count which gave him the lead when the vote was really a tie.

This caused a furor and Mr. Maddox's resignation was demanded from all sides. He refused to sign until Mayor Kipp requested his withdrawal, and after much hesitation Mr. Maddox retired and placed a compromise candidate in the field. This candidate was defeated by Mr. Barrett, who is now police commissioner.

With the municipal white primary only a month off, at which time three aldermen, eleven councilmen, two members of the board of education and several heads of departments will be elected, registration lists are swelling rapidly. The books will close Monday.

URGES REFUTATION OF UNWARRANTED PELLAGRA REPORT

South Carolina Congressman Asks President to Take Action Against Officers Responsible.

SOUTH NOT SEEKING CHARITY, HE ASSERTS

In Letter to Harding, Byrnes Tells of Great Production of Food Crops in Dixie.

Washington, July 30.—Representative Byrnes, of South Carolina, asked President Harding to "take action against the officers responsible" for the "unwarranted" report that the South was seeking charity, he asserted today.

Mr. Byrnes' letter was in reply to the president's letter of yesterday in which Mr. Harding said that if investigation developed that reports had misrepresented conditions, official refutation would be desirable.

Text of Letter. The text of Mr. Byrnes' letter to the president follows:

"I wish to thank you very much for your letter of the 28th. I agree that it is highly desirable that the bureau of public health service should continue its investigation as to pellagra, and I know that congress appropriated for this fiscal year $300,000 to enable the service to investigate the 'diseases of man' the representatives of the health service advising our appropriations committee that out of this sum they would continue their pellagra investigations. And there is no objection to the special investigation you have directed the health service to make. What I deeply regret, Mr. President, and what I believe the people of the south regret, is that before such an investigation has been made you were misled into stating in your letter to the president of the Red Cross:

"It must bring a shock to the American people to realize that a great section of their own country, which they are wont to think of as immune from such experiences, is actually menaced by famine and plague. For that is what it would be called if it should befall any other country, and we may as well give it its right name."

"It is of course a consequence of the war, and it demands instant and vigorous attention. Our people, the result of an error in the count which gave him the lead when the vote was really a tie.

This caused a furor and Mr. Maddox's resignation was demanded from all sides. He refused to sign until Mayor Kipp requested his withdrawal, and after much hesitation Mr. Maddox retired and placed a compromise candidate in the field. This candidate was defeated by Mr. Barrett, who is now police commissioner.

With the municipal white primary only a month off, at which time three aldermen, eleven councilmen, two members of the board of education and several heads of departments will be elected, registration lists are swelling rapidly. The books will close Monday.

At this election the voters also will pass on the proposed increase of the city tax rate. This will be to determine whether or not the people are willing to accept the measure passed by the legislature increasing the ad valorem tax rate in Atlanta from $125 to $150 on the $100, subject to approval of the voters.

Officials of the city administration declare that the adoption of this bill is of vital importance to the city's school systems, since it is virtually certain that unless it is ratified, city schools can not possibly open until January.

The following have definitely announced their candidacy for the primary: First Ward—Alderman James R. Seawright, who has announced to re-election. So far he has no opposition. It is understood that Councilman Etheridge, his opponent, voted for the majority report on Bunco Probe.

Stand on this issue features many races. Registration books will close Monday for white primary to be held on August 31.

FAILURE TO MEET SMITH-LEVER FUND MAY BRING BATTLE

Plan Under Way to Bring General Appropriations Bill Up for Action Monday Afternoon.

FARM DEMONSTRATION FUTURE THREATENED

Action Monday on Appropriations Bill Would Prevent Friends of Agents Getting Hearing.

BY MARION KENDRICK.

A movement is under way among certain leaders of the House of Representatives to force the general appropriation bill on the floor for action in the Monday afternoon session and to press it to final passage by adjournment Tuesday, according to reports Saturday night.

This action, it is declared, would prevent supporters of farm demonstration agents from securing a hearing on the committee's refusal to meet the Smith-Lever fund and forebode the greatest legislative battle of the session.

Chairman Tombs Dubois, of the appropriations committee, is out of the city, but Saturday was measure containing reductions in funds for practically all the state's institutions, has returned to Riga from Moscow, determined to advocate renewal of trade relations and perusal of the bill's passage, and developments in the long feud between this branch and the state college of agriculture lead to this conclusion.

After being defeated last week, the tax measure is expected to be passed on reconsideration Tuesday, according to Chairman J. W. Cullpepper, of the ways and means committee. The move against the agents and state institutions, however, may result in increased opposition to the bill's passage, and defeat Representative McMichael's amendment providing for a tax of one cent on each cigar selling for ten cents and above.

Should this amendment be adopted, approximately $800,000 would be added to the state's revenue, bringing the total derived from the gasoline measure to about $1,600,000, according to Mr. McMichael. This additional money would enable the state to continue its appropriations on the same basis as 1921.

Text of Reply. The text of the reply from Soviet Russia, made in the name of Leo Kamenoff, head of the non-partisan, non-political famine relief committee, is as follows:

"The Russian government, upon learning of the proposals made by Herbert Hoover in the name of the American Relief association, finds them quite acceptable, including the question of the release of American citizens."

"The Russian government considers it necessary to fix as soon as possible the exact condition on which the immediate relations are to begin."

"It is humane intentions guarantee the feeding, medical aid and clothing of the million children and invalids. For this purpose, the Russian government considers it useful that Director Brown, or any other person authorized for the negotiations should immediately come to Moscow, Riga or Reval."

"The Russian government expects a quick reply, stating the place and time for the negotiations. (Signed) 'KAMENOFF.'"

The American government representatives in Riga consider the note of Leo Kamenoff announcing acceptance of the American conditions for famine relief as constituting an answer to the demand made by Secretary of State Hughes for the release of the American prisoners in Russia.

OFFER MADE TO GORKY. The offer of Herbert Hoover, as head of the American relief administration, to see that help was given Russia's sick and starving was made in a telegram addressed to Maxim Gorky, in response to Gorky's recent appeal for aid. The prime condition was laid down that the Americans held prisoner in Russia must be immediately released. It was stipulated also that proper administrative conditions should be secured to attend.

Johnson's Position. Representative H. L. Johnson, of Bartow, expressed special regret that departmental and institutional politics have been allowed to so seriously threaten the destruction of this form of educational work.

"From my viewpoint, on account of the worst step backwards Georgia has ever made, in my opinion. We owe their services to farmers, and petty politics should not be allowed to run rampant in influencing legislators to lose the Smith-Lever fund."

United States Senator France, Back From Trip to Moscow, Brings First of Freed Americans.

Riga, July 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—Soviet Russia has agreed to release American prisoners and to accept famine aid from the American Relief association just at the moment that United States Senator Joseph I. France, of Maryland, has returned to Riga from Moscow, determined to advocate renewal of trade relations and perusal of the bill's passage, and developments in the long feud between this branch and the state college of agriculture lead to this conclusion.

Rudyard Kipling And Mr. McMichael Disagree on Weed

"Cigar Superior to Woman," Poet—"Tax Superior to All," Legislator.

BY PAUL WARWICK. It is wondered if Representative McMichael, of Macon, would get along very well with Representative Rudyard Kipling, of Mandalay and all points "east is east and west is west."

Mr. Kipling, when he drew back for that first slap of his at woman-kind, opined that "woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke." He further intimated that a harem of dusky beauties, fifty in a string, was a far better investment than "bondage bought with a ring."

Mr. Kipling, apparently, would be no champion of a cigar tax.

McMichael, however, feeling that the happy smokers of Georgia ought to aid the commonwealth in her financial bereavement, promises to tax at one cent on each cigarette the price of 10 cents.

He who strikes the match must also pay the freight, he contends.

Author is Smoker. It will come in the form of an amendment to the gasoline tax, which at once-at-once measure and representatives as per the earnest request of Governor Hardwick.

Mr. McMichael is a smoker himself. He counts himself willing to pay an additional red for each length of the weed he consumes. He smokes in Atlanta six months.

The friend of the tax will do well to see that Rule 24 is enforced by Speaker McDaniel during the debate on the amendment. Rule 24 forbids smoking, and no man going to tax a cigar.

It would be a sight of ingratitude. Kipling wouldn't approve.

COST OF CAPITAL REMOVAL SHOWN

Frank Hooper Issues Statement Stressing the Price People of Bibb Would Have to Pay.

In a statement issued Saturday by Attorney Frank Hooper, chairman of the committee on Capital Removal, it is shown that removal of the state capital would place upon the people of Macon a huge bonded indebtedness without the privilege on their part of voting on the question.

The statement resulted from the announcement that the senate committee on constitutional amendments will meet Tuesday afternoon for action on the measure introduced by Senator Wohlwendner providing for constitutional amendment authorizing capital removal to Macon.

Mr. Hooper expressed the sentiment of the committee in his closing paragraph, in which he states:

"In all candor, there has been enough time and money wasted on this foolish proposition. What do the people of Macon say?"

Hooper's Statement. Mr. Hooper's statement follows in full:

"Some of our Macon friends have expressed surprise at the statement that the capital removal bill now before the legislature will place upon the people of Macon a huge bonded debt without the privilege upon their part of voting on the question. It would doubtless interest the people of Macon considerably to read this bill, and also to read the letter of June 25 addressed to the general assembly by the so-called 'Georgia Capital Removal association.' In this remarkable letter to the assembly, paragraph 2 reads as follows:

"2. It will give to Georgia, without the added expense of a single dollar, if the people ratify the constitutional amendment, a new and adequate capital building and executive mansion that isn't 'a cow barn' as Governor Dorsey has termed the present mansion, and with good reason."

"From this it is evident that a new capital and governor's mansion in Macon will cost the people of the state nothing; that is, that it is not true. In paragraph 3 the explanation is given why it will not cost the people of the state anything. The old run down mansion are to be sold, and, according to Mr. Fowler, their proceeds applied to the bonded debt of the state. Now we have disposed of them and their proceeds are to be used for the new capital and mansion are to be built."

It would be a sight of ingratitude. Kipling wouldn't approve.

TECH'S PRESIDENT IN PLEA AGAINST FUND REDUCTION

Action of House Committee in Slashing Appropriation Threatens the School, He Says.

ADDRESSES LETTERS TO MEMBERS OF HOUSE

Matheson Details Needs of the Institution Due to Tremendous Increase in Enrollment.

In a personal letter to every member of the house of representatives written Saturday, President K. G. Matheson, of Georgia Tech, strongly brings out the financial distress in which Tech finds herself and declares that if the present recommendation of the house appropriation committee cutting the institution's funds for the next year from the $125,000 of last year to $118,000 be adopted by the house, Tech will be seriously crippled and her vital work threatened.

President Matheson had asked the legislature for an appropriation of at least $200,000, stating that it would be impossible for the institution to operate with a full enrollment on any less amount. Instead of giving any increase over the $125,000 of last year, the committee recommended that the last year's sum be reduced 5 per cent. This reduction was in line with the general policy of the committee to reduce all appropriations by 5 per cent.

The letter to the representatives outlines the needs of Tech in detail by showing the tremendous increase in enrollment and the improved condition of the school. It declares that the budget submitted shows clearly that at least $225,000 is needed to continue in a normal way.

The statement follows:

"The committee on ways and means and appropriations has recommended for next year a reduction of 5 per cent in the present maintenance appropriation of Georgia Tech. The school had asked an increase of $100,000 based upon the number of students which clearly demonstrated the need of an appropriation of $225,000. Without excitement and with no personal interests at stake, I feel it my official duty to call your attention to the following facts:

"1. In 1918, Tech had an enrollment of 734 professional students and a total in all departments of 1,117, at which time we were operating on an appropriation of $100,000 for maintenance. Today Tech has 1,515 professional students and a total enrollment of 2,753 students in all departments and is receiving only $125,000 with all the decrease in value of the dollar since 1918, and a tremendous increase in operating expenses due to an enrollment of nearly three times as many students. These 1,515 college degree students represent nearly twice the number of all the other state institutions combined, there being only 1,155 college degree students in the whole university system, including the university proper and all of its branches.

"2. Eliminating all summer school students, Georgia Tech has a total enrollment in all other departments of 2,459 and receives an annual appropriation of $125,000. Certain other state institutions with from one-third to one-half Tech's enrollment receive from $57,000 to $100,000 for maintenance.

"3. Each of the institutions referred to vitally needs much more than the amounts appropriated. How important, then, that Georgia Tech should receive a like ratio!

"4. It was clearly demonstrated at the last session of the legislature that the school must have the increase requested; the house voted $125,000 increase, and the senate $100,000, but in the closing hours of the legislature all appropriation bills were tabled.

"5. We went out and raised the $100,000 from friends; $40,000 in the north and the balance down here. It will be impossible to repeat this performance, as even friends strongly resent requests for the maintenance of a state institution.

"6. In the campaign for expansion, which has recently been waged, approximately $1,500,000 has been raised in Georgia and $1,000,000 has been conditionally promised by friends in New York. Not one cent of this money can be used for maintenance and unless the state supports the plant we now have, many donors have threatened to cancel their subscriptions for expansion. This would result in the trial had been conducted fairly. As to the next step he will take in an attempt to secure another trial, Mr. Underwood said Saturday night that he was undecided, but would announce his plans at the proper time. The appeal, it is understood, will be taken to the supreme court.

It will be remembered that eleven negroes lost their lives on the Williams farm, a number of their bodies being found chained and weighted together in two rivers near the plantation and others being unearthed from a shallow grave on the place.

When he faced the court of Newton county, Manning made a free confession of his part in the crimes and declared that Williams was the master mind of the conspiracy to remove the dead negroes so as to prevent them giving information as to the operations of the farm.

Manning now contends that Judge Hutcheson erred in admitting testimony with reference to crimes other than the murder of the negro for whose death he was convicted of murder and given a life sentence. On this ground he is seeking a new trial, but Judge Hutcheson refused this plea as well as several others of minor importance Saturday at Decatur.

The three sons of Williams, who were incriminated in the operations of the "murder farm" disappeared when warrants were issued for their arrest, and they have since remained unapprehended despite the fact that substantial rewards have been offered for their capture.

BOY IS BADLY CUT IN AUTO COLLISION

L. H. Fagan, of McDonald road, was arrested Saturday night and charged with being drunk and reckless driving after he had driven his automobile into a car driven by S. E. Hamway, of 363 Washington street, early in the evening. In the car with Mr. Hamway were a Mrs. Edge and her small son, the latter being severely cut by flying glass.

According to police, Fagan was driving out Georgia avenue close to its intersection with Pryor and was on the wrong side of the street. The crash with the other car was a head-on collision. The car belonging to Mr. Hamway was badly damaged.

No airplane in France is permitted to fly more than 200 hours. After the machine has served that long it is arbitrarily discarded.

Comedy of Errors Marks Reception Of Legislators

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 30.—(Special.)—Pressure of work was given as the cause of a misunderstanding today that resulted in a comedy of errors, in which the actors were the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, the Chattanooga Manufacturers' association, and the special legislative committee of the state of Georgia. Word was received in this city by J. P. Hoskins, cashier of the First National bank, from Senator A. S. Davis, chairman of the legislative committee, under date of July 28, that the committee intended visiting here for the purpose of making an inspection of the property owned by the state of Georgia in the city of Chattanooga.

The letter requested that Mr. Hoskins advise the chamber of commerce of the intended visit of the Georgia legislators, also the city fathers and other civic organizations.

Mr. Hoskins immediately complied with the request of the chairman of the Georgia committee and notified the chamber of commerce and the Manufacturers' association and requested that the chamber of commerce advise the mayor and city commission.

The Manufacturers' association took action on the matter at their meeting Friday and went on record as being agreeable to any plans to receive the committee from Georgia that the chamber arrange, and waited upon the chamber for instructions.

No instructions were forthcoming, however, and the legislature special arrived in this city at about 8 o'clock and deposited the delegation. After searching in vain for a welcoming committee the legislators betook themselves to the Patten hotel.

The committee inspected the Georgia state property this morning, and after the completion of the inspection went on a sight-seeing trip on Lookout mountain, leaving word that they would return to the hotel at about 12:30 o'clock.

The attention of the chamber of commerce was in the meantime called to the fact that the committee was already in town. A hurried consultation followed, and a number of members of the local civic clubs, the Manufacturers' association and the chamber of commerce, waited on the legislators in the hotel at noon.

After 1 o'clock, however, no legislators having put in appearance, the committee of welcome began to depart, with the result that at 1:30 o'clock when the legislators did put in appearance, only Scott Probasco, president of the chamber, and one or two others remained to extend the welcome of the city to the visiting guests.

The committee, according to Senator Davis, was of the opinion after the inspection of the state property that the N. C. & St. L. railroad is living up to the lease under which they occupy the Georgia state property. The property is composed of the Emory station and all buildings on the west side of Market street in the 900 block.

Liquor, Cow and Gun
Are Declared Reasons
For Hooker's Arrest

Liberal application of John Barclaycorn, possession of a revolver and a sudden feeling of aversion to an innocent cow, are the reasons, according to the police, why J. J. Hooker, aged 47, of 25 Dewey street, was slumbering in city jail Saturday night following a wild west scene on Stewart avenue early in the evening.

It was a peaceful community and quiet reigned everywhere. Suddenly there came a series of sharp reports and residents rushed out. They stared in astonishment at the sight they witnessed.

According to police, Hooker was just plain, ordinary. There was no camouflage in his actions. He held a revolver and was aiming at a cow idly grazing in a grass lot, they say.

But the whiskey was potent and his aim was bad and he missed each and every time. Then he took a decided antipathy to his neighbors, and it is alleged, began shooting promiscuously.

Officers appeared on the scene and the disturbance of the peace, evidently intending to have a real night of it, attempted to make use of a knife in resisting arrest, it is claimed.

MANDAMUS SEEKS TO FORCE PAVING

Decatur, Ga., July 30.—(Special.) A petition for mandamus and for an injunction was filed Saturday in the DeKalb superior court against J. T. Y. Nash, commissioner of roads and revenues of DeKalb county, by twenty-five citizens living in the western part of the county.

The petition seeks to compel Mr. Nash from spending any more money derived from the last DeKalb bond issue or from letting further contracts until he complies with a demand set forth in the mandamus that the county pave Boulevard DeKalb, as it is known, from the city limits of Atlanta to Joe's road avenue. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Homer C. Denton.

BADLY SHATTERED TURKS SEEK HILLS

Eski-Shehr, Asia Minor, July 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—The broken forces of Mustafa Kemal Pasha, numbering now less than fifty thousand men, have taken up positions on a range of hills about forty miles east of Eski-Shehr. Watching them vigilantly are several powerful Greek divisions ten miles distant.

The Turks have no prepared defensive positions at this point and it is not regarded here as likely that they will essay another offensive against the Greeks. Moreover their artillery has been greatly weakened by the loss of many cannons to the Greeks and their supply service is extremely defective, the transport consisting mainly of ox-carts.

The Greek soldiers are anxious to push to Ankara, the Turkish nationalist capital, finish the job as they deem it and return to their homes.

but the military experts believe this move would not be prudent and the army is expected to remain in Eski-Shehr three or four weeks before essaying another drive.

It is considered essential by the military leaders that the railroad from Kutais should be completed in order to make Eski-Shehr a strong base and that the army should be given a rest and time for the strengthening of the forces and the betterment of communications.

The Kemalists destroyed three important bridges between Eski-Shehr and Kutais, and it will take about forty days, it is estimated, to restore them. The nationalists were driven out so fast, however, that they had little time to do other damage to property. All the way from Unak to Eski-Shehr, a distance of more than 160 miles there is virtually no destruction.

The unifying and general condition of the prisoners taken by the Greeks does not indicate a high state of organization on the part of the nationalists. Not more than half the prisoners had any uniforms at all, and such uniforms as were evidence were in rags. The rest of the prisoners were clad in sheepskin to burp bags and most of them had no shoes. Their ages varied from 18 to 60, and they were deserters, prisoners said, had been shot by their officers.

Messages Sent From Mayflower By Carrier Pigeon

Washington, July 30.—Communication with Washington by naval carrier pigeon was maintained today by the presidential yacht Mayflower as she steamed up the Atlantic coast with President and Mrs. Harding aboard en route to Plymouth, where on Monday the president will speak at the ceremonies commemorating the tercentenary of the landing of the pilgrims.

Before the Mayflower left Washington yesterday, Lieutenant A. J. McAtee, director of the naval pigeon service, placed five carrier pigeons aboard. At 4:36 p. m. today one of the birds returned bearing a message from the president to the executive offices.

The pigeon had left the Mayflower at 11:30 a. m. today when the yacht was about 25 miles northeast of Cape Henry light, a distance of about 250 miles from Washington.

The president's message obviously was hastily scribbled, said: "Executive Office, White House: 'Fine voyage. All well. Mrs. Harding greatly refreshed. Making our schedule and excellent conditions. Inspection this morning revealed fine crew aboard the Mayflower. Greetings to all of the office force.'"

FARM CREDITS BILL CHANGES PERFECTED

Washington, July 30.—While the senate was recessed today, amendments to perfect the pending agricultural credits bill were worked out at conferences of republicans and democratic leaders.

The principal change in the bill said to have been agreed upon today was for elimination of the provision authorizing loans to foreign governments of any sub-divisions thereof. The pending bill proposed advances to foreign governments by the war finance corporation, but a powerful group of senators were said to be opposed to any more foreign loans for any purpose, at least until funding arrangements covering existing loans are negotiated.

Passage of the bill early next week was planned by the bipartisan group in charge of the legislation. Voting plans for yesterday was postponed because of the illness of Chairman Norris of the agricultural committee, but senators said if Senator Norris continued unable next week to attend the senate the legislation could not be further delayed.

SIX MEN KILLED AS CAR PLUNGES FOR 2,000 FEET

Grand Junction, Colo., July 30.—Six men were killed and six others injured, three seriously, when a tramway car cable slipped out of the swivel late today at the Schuyler Doyle shale company's plant, the car plunging to the floor of the gulch, 2,000 feet below.

SEARCH FOR BANKER CARRIED TO DETROIT

Chicago, July 30.—The countrywide search for Warren G. Spurgin, fugitive president of the Michigan Avenue Trust company, which was closed recently following discovery of a shortage estimated at $1,000,000, was directed toward Detroit today following receipt of reports by the police that the missing banker had been seen by a taxicab chauffeur.

The chauffeur, according to the police, said he had picked up a man answering the description of Spurgin and drove him to a Highland Park address. The name of the driver was withheld.

It had previously been reported that Spurgin was in the vicinity of Mobile, Ala., on a yacht in the Gulf of Mexico, and trying to escape across the Mexican border.

The San-Browne belt, which was worn by officers of foreign armies and Americans who saw service overseas during the world war, is now a part of the regulation issue uniform for officers of the United States army. Members of the bureau's corps and warrant officers are not permitted to wear the belt.

Washington, July 30.—Lord Northcliffe left for Toronto tonight on another leg of his journey around the world. The British publisher declined to answer any questions having reference to his controversy with Premier Lloyd-George or the interview erroneously attributed to him by a British newspaper in which King George was quoted as having told the premier, in a conversation concerning the Irish troubles, that he cannot have my people killed in this manner.

"London has no orders to give the dominions," was the comment of H. Wickham Stead, editor of The London Times, who accompanied the publisher to Toronto when asked whether he expected any such incidents as the cancellation of the British embassy dinner in Washington to which they had been invited, on the resumption of Lord Northcliffe's tour, which will take him through Canada, Australia and other parts of the British empire.

Stead misquoted.

The interview attributed to Lord Northcliffe in some newspapers abroad and which was credited to Mr. Stead's column in issue of The New York Times, from which it was taken, Mr. Stead, however, declared today that he was misquoted.

"The direct statements attributed to me I did not make," he said. "I could not have made them, because neither Lloyd-George nor the king told me what they said to one another. I do not know up to this day what they said to one another."

As to the actual facts of the Irish situation, it is a fact no one can contest that the possible settlements growing out of the treaty are directly accountable to the speech by the king at Belfast—a great-hearted, considered speech.

Times for Peace.

"It is also incontestable that King George feels for all his subjects an acute solicitude and not only so, but he has more than to see prospective peace in Ireland."

"The London Times has worked very hard for the last two years to promote the settlement in Ireland that the government seemed to be approaching, and we have given Mr. Lloyd-George's government the fullest support when it seemed to be treading the path of peace. We shall continue to give the Lloyd-George government the fullest support in all efforts toward a successful conclusion. No one knows that better than Lloyd-George, who for two years has had pertinent reasons to know how true it is. That and that alone was the sense of the quite informal talk I had with the representative of The New York Times."

Lord Northcliffe played golf on Long Island today with Thomas W. Lamont, New York banker who, the publisher said, defeated him soundly.

Paris, July 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—Lord Hardinge, the British ambassador, arrived in Paris this morning, that Great Britain willingly agrees to the proposals contained in the French premier's latest note relative to troop reinforcements for Upper Silesia. The British ambassador at Berlin has been instructed to join his French and Italian colleagues in a common demand that the German government facilitate by all possible means the transport of allied troops across Germany whenever the situation in Upper Silesia renders it necessary.

Marquis Curzon, the British foreign secretary in the note which Lord Hardinge handed Mr. Briand, proposes August 8 as the date for the meeting of the supreme council as the Italian premier is unable to attend sooner. Premier Lloyd-George will attend if the French desire his presence.

The British reply is extremely cordial, Lord Hardinge expressing satisfaction over the disposition of the recent misunderstanding.

ALLIED SKIES CLEAR IN SILESIA DISPUTE

AUDIT IS ANNOUNCED OF HIGHWAY BOOKS

Decatur, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—An audit of the books of the commissioner of roads and revenues of DeKalb county has added the following data:

Total outstanding warrants on January 1, 1921, were $285,429.33; total outstanding June 30, 1921, $181,124.45, or a net reduction for the period of $104,304.88.

From the road bond fund there have been completed, of asphalt road, 11.8 miles; graded and soiled roads, 13.3 miles; graded and soiled with six inch base foundation, 2.5 miles; resurfaced with asphalt, 3 miles; graded, 2.5 miles; total cost $494,608.15. Balance available for road work in DeKalb, something more than $200,000.

From the commutation road tax there was on hand December 31, 1920, a balance of $465. To this was added $339 since collected, making a total of $804.50. Of this amount there have been disbursements totaling $846.50, leaving on hand June 30, 1921, a total of $458.15.

The audit was made by Womack, Harper and Bamsely, certified public accountants.

Hughes and Geddes Discuss Disarming Conference Details

Washington, July 30.—Secretary Hughes and Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, spent more than an hour in conference today discussing it is understood, the details which must be arranged prior to the delivery of formal invitations to the proposed conference on the limitation of armaments and the Far East.

No official report of their conversation was afforded, but it was said that the British government probably would insist on the holding of a preliminary conference and would not interpose any serious objection to having the conference convened early in November.

It also developed during the day that the French government did not adverse to November 11, the anniversary of Armistice day, as the date for the first meeting and that unofficially Italy, Japan and China have indicated their willingness to accept that date. It had been suggested that the French desired a later date but that was understood to have been on account, largely, of the Silesian question, a difficulty which in the light of the Lloyd-George's statement today at Thame, England may be soon removed.

Satisfaction with the developments was expressed by officials and there were indications that the invitations would be sent out early next week. The unofficial, but nonetheless authoritative declarations that the United States opposes preliminary conferences and especially to parleys participated in by any number less than the full number of the invited powers are believed to have forestalled further efforts in this direction.

The United States government and the conference, determining to a certain extent the character of the agenda by means of an exchange of views made either directly by these diplomatic representatives or by communications, but the United States, it has been made plain, does not propose to be a party to any movement which has for its object the laying down of hard and fast rules. It is expected that the final definition of the agenda and the determination of the scope of the conference will take place at the early meetings of the main conference.

FOREST CONFLAGRATION CONTINUES UNCHECKED

Sydney, N. S., July 30.—Forest fires today continued to rage in northern Cape Breton, threatening the village of Ingonish, with its one thousand population, and other places. A heavy rain which fell there appears no prospect of checking the blaze.

Firemen flames have swept an area more than 20 miles long and 5 miles wide, destroying telegraph poles, bridges and culverts. Most of the timber burned thus far has been in crown lands.

RAILROAD PASSES PRECIPITATE ROW

Tabled Measure Allowing Sheriffs to Accept Passes to Come Up Again
This Week.

Although tabled after a hard-fought battle Saturday morning, a measure allowing Georgia sheriffs to receive passes from railroads, by Frutkin, will be the center of another fight this week when efforts will be made to bring it up for another vote.

Attempts were made to filibuster after it was seen that the bill was lost Saturday, but led by McMichael, of Marion, and Bowden, of Ware, the house tabled it. Around of Clay, attempted to have the house postpone action until Monday, but his motion was lost.

Speaker Cecil Neill cast the deciding vote.

"We do not want our sheriffs in Georgia to be authorized by law to place themselves and their families in the hands of the railroads," declared Mr. McMichael.

"There is no country in the state so poverty-stricken that it cannot pay the traveling expenses of the sheriff on official business. It is no argument in favor of this bill to contend that it will save the counties money. It will only argue that members of the general assembly should be authorized by law to accept free passage for the purpose of saving money for the state."

The house passed the bill by Representative Beckham, of Dougherty, authorizing the commissioner of game and fish to change the date for the open season for hunting various kinds of game and fowl so as to conform to the date fixed by a federal law, the object being to avoid conflict and confusion between the dates fixed by state law and the dates fixed by federal law.

Action on the Valentine kindergarten bill was delayed until Monday.

New Bills Introduced.

Among the new bills introduced was one by Mr. Culpepper providing the governor with authority to issue a maximum of $270,000 in bonds to be used in refunding certain bonds which fall due January 1, and for which the state has been made. These bonds were to be paid with the money expected to be derived from a sale of the executive mansion if the governor's bill had been passed. Monday the bill will be amended to reduce the amount since, according to statement from Treasurer Soper, there is a balance of $200,000 in the treasury credited to the public property fund, which will be applied to this bonded debt.

Proponents of the legislation to create in the state a second branch of the state court of appeals have decided that the bill will not be offered this year, but will be carried over to the first part of next session, and in the meantime, additional sentiment in its favor will be worked up among the state bar association. The purpose of the bill will be to create two branches of the court of appeals, and provide that one shall sit either in Macon or in Albany, each to have concurrent jurisdiction.

Both as a matter of convenience for lawyers of the lower part of the state and to relieve pressure on the present court.

Announcement was made that Governor and Mrs. Hardwick will give an executive reception to mem-necessary flesh, though all the while engaged in a line of educational work, J. H. Haire has returned to Atlanta and is again greeting his friends as the manager of the classified advertising department of The Constitution.

For fifteen years Howard Haire had been a resident of Atlanta, and had steadily climbed his way to the head of one of the important departments of this paper. Suddenly he had a longing for the "land of flowers," and six months ago took a position in a Florida city. Like practically all young men who have developed in the business atmosphere of Atlanta, he found a longing to return to this city as soon as he "wandered afar off." In consequence, when that time came in Howard Haire's career, there was ready and mutual pleasure both on the part of this paper and himself to see him once again head of the department he had left.

Mr. Haire is calling on his old advertising friends as of yore, and this paper bespeaks for him the kindly consideration his courtesy and ability deserves.

Double Sessions and Limited Debate This Week for Senate

Important Legislative Matters to Come Before Upper House as Session End Nears.

With only eight working days left before the legislature will adjourn sine die, the senate will go into its last full week under a ruling of the rules committee, which has been adopted, calling for afternoon sessions and limiting debate on all matters to ten minutes for each member. This was necessary on account of the large amount of work that is expected to be acted on.

As it is conceded that it is too late to get any bills on the calendar which have not been already acted on by committees, there will be little activity in committee rooms with the exception of the appropriation committee, which will have to work under forced draught when the appropriation and tax bills are sent over from the house. With the exception of this committee, most of the work of the upper house will be done in regular session.

It is expected that the bill calling for a discount of the rental of the Western and Atlantic road for the next five years, in order to meet the financial crisis in the state, will come up for passage early in the week. This bill has already passed the house and was recommended to pass the senate by the appropriation committee last week by a 9-to-4 vote. Those opposing it in committee were Senators Walker, chairman of the committee; Wohlwend, Lassiter and Womble.

Will Oppose Measure.

All four of these senators are expected to oppose the measure when it comes before the senate for passage. Senator Walker has announced that he will introduce a resolution to take the place of the bill in meeting the financial situation, by holding off the unpaid balance due the university and its branches and other institutions, which he declared could afford being choked for a while, and giving the money due them to payment of confederate pensions and running expenses of certain institutions and common schools. This step would tide the state over until more money can be realized, he claims.

When the general tax bill is sent over from the house, a strong fight is to be made on that provision putting a tax of $2,500 on grand opera. A number of influential members, including President Herbert Clay and Senator Frank Manson, have expressed their intention of waging a fight to have the tax taken out of the measure. It is expected that the fight will be begun in the appropriation committee, where the bill will first be handled.

Appropriation Bill.

As soon as the house finishes its work on the appropriation bill, the senate will begin to pass judgment on it. Elimination of the Smith-Lever grants for a period not to exceed fifty years. Nothing was carried in the measure to provide for a new mansion.

The income tax bill, so strongly advocated for immediate passage by Governor Hardwick, was gotten out of the rush of this summer's work by a resolution passed Friday authorizing appointment of a commission of fifteen legislators, ten by the speaker of the house and five by the president of the senate, to investigate the question of taxation and the present income tax measure and report findings back to the legislature of next summer. The resolution was passed as a result of a compromise between factions favoring the income tax without constitutional limitations on the rate and that opposed to passage without limitation. It was lost by putting the bill off until next summer and much information can be lined in view of the fact that, if the bill is passed, it cannot be ratified by the people until November, 1922.

During the last two days of the session of last week a strong and effective move was under way by friends of the measure proposing to abolish the tax equalization system to conduct a filibuster in order to prevent a vote being taken on the measure until this week. Those leading the filibuster were Senators Mix and Wohlwend, while Senator Johnny Jones, who opposed the measure, tried to break it up. Proponents of the measure declared that they wished to put off vote to allow the senators to talk the question over with their constituents during the stay at home during the week-end.

Spite Work Blamed When Vandals Wreck "Model Love Nest"

New York, July 30.—Police were searching today for vandals and thieves who looted and wrecked the "model love nest" at Malibu, Long Island, of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. White, who now are on their honeymoon in Yellowstone Park. The raiders not only stole the bride's trousseau but did their utmost to ruin a servanless type of house given to the bride by her father, a wealthy contractor. It was equipped with electric devices and all improvements designed to make housekeeping pleasant. Friends expressed the belief that spite was the motive for the destruction.

PLAN RESTORATION OF R. E. LEE MANSION

Upperville, Va., July 30.—A movement has been started here to restore the General Robert E. Lee mansion at Arlington to its former beauty.

At a meeting of the Welby Carter chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, it was announced an effort would be made to interest the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the undertaking.

The fine old home of the great southern general now stands in the center of Arlington National cemetery, a mere shell of its former grandeur.

Mrs. Henry W. Keyes, wife of Senator Keyes, and a native of Virginia, is one of the prominent leaders of the group of women who will attempt to obtain permission of the government to reclaim the historic old residence and make of it a shrine somewhat on a parallel with Mount Vernon.

Huston Optimistic.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 30.—A spirit of optimism concerning business conditions throughout the country was voiced here today by C. H. Huston, assistant secretary of commerce, who is here looking after personal affairs.

GUEST AT RESORT IN CALIFORNIA IS FOUND DYING

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 30.—A woman identified as Mrs. Charles Lawson, of New York city, a guest at an exclusive resort in Montecito, a suburb, was found shortly before midnight last night with a bullet hole in her right temple on a pleasure pier in front of a fashionable hotel. She died a few minutes later. Two men who had been standing on the pier said the woman was driven to the pier in an automobile which left immediately while she stood to the outer end of the structure. A moment later they heard a pistol shot.

SENATOR NORRIS REPORTED BETTER SATURDAY NIGHT

Washington, July 30.—Improvement in the condition of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, was reported tonight. The senator, who collapsed in the senate several days ago and whose condition has been a matter of concern to his friends, was able to take some nourishment late today, and it was said, was better in other respects. Whether he would be able to return to the senate next week was said to be still in doubt.

Upshaw Refuses To Speak Before Sinn Fein Rally

BY CLARK HOWELL, JR.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.
Washington, July 30.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—Requested to speak at an Irish republic rally in Washington, Congressman Upshaw has refused the invitation of the Abraham Lincoln club, stating that he would not do anything which would tend to break the friendship between England and America.
"The friendship between these two great English-speaking nations is essential to the highest welfare of mankind," said Mr. Upshaw.
Heard De Valera say here in Washington, of course Ireland sympathized with Germany in the recent war, because Germany was trying to destroy our age-long enemy. That outrageous declaration of sympathy with barbarism which sank hospital ships should make it impossible for any human American to give sympathy to the Irish republicans put out for the Irish republic.

Robbery of Train Brings Bandit Only One Watch

Pittsburg, July 30.—State police, postal authorities and railroad officers tonight had failed to find a trace of the four bandits who early this morning held up and robbed the mail car of the Manhattan limited on the Pennsylvania railroad and shot a mail clerk near Cassandra, Penn. A large force of men are continuing their search between Pittsburg and Altoona for the robbers, however.
Postoffice officials said the loss would be small. Shortly after the robbery one sack of mail was picked up near Altoona and this afternoon was found near Cassandra. Both were intact, it was said.
The watch of one of the mail clerks was picked up from the car floor by a robber as he left and this was said to be the extent of the loss.

Historic Building Is Badly Damaged By Augusta Blaze

Augusta, Ga., July 31.—The "White House," almost two hundred years old, one of Georgia's oldest and most historic landmarks, located here, was badly damaged by fire early Friday morning. The damage being estimated at $250,000.
The old structure, with its halo of tradition, is closely associated with Revolutionary history. During the time when Augusta was under control of the British, the building was used as headquarters by Colonel Brown, feared for his alleged brutal treatment of the patriots.
Tradition has it that thirteen American prisoners were hanged from the spiral stairway which winds its way upward, open to clear view of a room on the second floor which was occupied by the British commander at the time. Sick in bed at the time, according to the story, he had them hanged there so that he could witness the merciless execution. Several other prisoners were given to the Indians to be tortured, tradition asserts.

DEESE SEVERELY CUT WITH KNIFE; GRIFFITH HELD

J. L. Deese, of 137 Hemphill street, was taken to Grady hospital Saturday night with severe knife wounds in his side and back. Inflicted, it is alleged, by Benny Griffith, aged 17, of 229 Landmark street, following an argument between the two early in the evening.
Deese was in a critical condition, but it is thought he will recover. His left side was ripped open and a lung was rendered very weak. He gave the name of Griffith as his assailant. The latter was held by police and is being held pending police investigation.

GUIDANCE FOR YOUTH OF NEGRO RACE URGED

Rockmart, Ga., July 30.—(Special.) That the negro church, with its various parts, should insure the future welfare of the young people of the race by so directing them that there might be no question of what the negro race should do of what service it is in the various communities in which its members live, was declared by Richard D. Stinson, principal of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute, in a talk made at the convention of the Dalton District Sunday school.
"Our people," Dr. Stinson said, "are laying a foundation for character, education and citizenship." He said that it was a long time to lay the foundation for a race. He urged industry. "The idle person in the negro community is in great danger, therefore we must preach, sing and teach the gospel of hard work. We have thousands of friends among the white people in the communities in which we live," he added.

TRADE IN RUSSIA URGED BY SENATOR

must be made by Soviet Russia, including in fun the history of movement for the relief administration representatives.
The reference to a Russian reply to "the million children and invalids" presumably refers to the Russian relief administration, which he stated that the relief administration "would be willing to furnish the necessary supplies of food, clothing and medical supplies to a million children in Russia as rapidly as an organization could be effected."

At the present time, according to latest advices reaching Washington, there are eight or ten Americans actually in prison in Russia, while there are many others detained within the confines of the Russian frontier. The more prominent of these are Captain Ernest Kilpatrick, of Uniontown, Ala.; Red Cross worker, Royal Kelly, of Cincinnati; William F. Rice, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Dr. Weston B. Estes, of New York City. Photographers, and X. E. Nalamatiano, of Racine, Wisconsin.

RANGE ENTHUSIAST.
Senator Francis, who entered Russia several weeks ago skeptical of the advantages of the Russian situation, but believing that trade relations with the Russians would be an ardent enthusiast for both.

While American officials in the Baltic are endeavoring to effect the release of the prisoners and the entrance of the American Red Cross association into Russia will have in clearing up the Russian situation, Senator Francis declared that he was not a "backslider" in his new line of development in Russia, which "cannot backslide into radical communism."

Belittles Propaganda.
In reply to a question as to whether or not the Russians were trying to revolutionize the world, including the United States, Senator Francis said:
"I know nothing about the third international. But no man worthy of any attention ever believed that propaganda could start revolutions. Conditions are not propaganda, history shows."

The senator talked with both Lenin and Trotsky and was impressed by them.
"I found that the Russian government is handling the war in a state-of-the-art way," he said. "Lenin is much interested in American relations. The Russian factories have not all ceased operations; many are working well. They are short of raw materials, but they are working the lands and the farms are prosperous where they are not in the famine and drought belt."

Possible Product.
The senator mentioned furs as one of the possible products of trade with the United States and asserted that there would be plenty of exports when the factories were equipped with raw materials. He thought a commission of American experts would be welcomed, but he intended that Russia should have the right to send one to America also. "I am convinced that Russia will carry out any guarantee or concessions made in return for credit," the senator declared.

Describing his visit, he said he was free to move about and see what he liked, and the officials frankly admitted bad conditions where they existed. The senator secured Mrs. Harrison's release from prison independent of the Hoover and Hughes notes, of which he knew little. Mrs. Harrison was freed from the prison hospital only a few hours before the train left Thursday, and was surprised to find herself at liberty.

OFFICIAL WORD STILL LACKING

Washington, July 30.—Official word of the Russian relief administration's offer to furnish food to starving Russian children, conditioned on the release of American prisoners, and the state department's demand for their release still was lacking late today. The state department, however, was officially informed in the day of the arrival at Riga of Mrs. Marguerite Harrison of Baltimore, one of the American prisoners.
Beyond press dispatches announcing the relief administration's acceptance of the offer, and its willingness to free American prisoners, Secretary Hoover, chairman of the relief administration, was without a reply to his telegram sent last week to Maxim Gorky at Petrograd. Receipt of the telegram was acknowledged several days ago.

On the basis of press reports that the reply was being sent by the London officials, here declared that the answer might be expected at any time. The state department, on the other hand, suggested that no formal answer would be made to the demand of the Russian government for the release of its citizens held by the Russians, but if they were freed under the conditions of Secretary Hoover's offer, the Russian authorities would let the action stand as speaking for itself. Release of Mrs. Harrison was announced in a statement to the press, but it was said to indicate the possible adoption of such a course.

In the absence of an official answer to the Russian demand, the relief administration's offer, Secretary Hoover indicated, however, that relief work could begin within 48 hours from the time American prisoners were out of Russia, and representatives of the administration would be sent at once to Riga to negotiate the details of food distribution.

WOMAN FIRST FREED

Riga, July 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, of Baltimore, a newspaper correspondent, was among the American citizens held prisoner in Russia, has been released by the Soviet authorities, and arrived here this morning.

The release of Mrs. Harrison was secured through United States Senator Joseph L. Francis, of Maryland, who has been on visit to Soviet Russia. "Investigative conditions there, and it was under his escort that Mrs. Harrison reached here today," the senator having concluded his Russian visit.

Mrs. Harrison is pale and thin, but not in a particularly bad condition as the result of her imprisonment.
Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, daughter of the late Bernard S. Baker, of Baltimore, and a sister-in-law of Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, and for many years a brilliant news writer, went to Soviet Russia nearly eighteen months ago as the correspondent of the Baltimore Sun and the New York Evening Post. She wrote feature stories for those newspapers. She also sent cable and wireless dispatches to the Associated Press and for a time, up to last October, these messages were virtually the only news from Russia in the United States from the isolated capital of Soviet Russia.
Mrs. Harrison was taken into custody by the Soviet authorities in June, 1920, just as she was about to leave for London. She was not long afterward, but was released for the second time October 24, last, and arrived here. Several times efforts were made through official and private channels to secure her release, but in each instance up to the present these efforts were fruitless.

Since the death of her husband, Thomas B. Harrison, Mrs. Harrison has been engaged in newspaper work. She was a correspondent in Paris during the peace conference and was credited with being the first American woman to enter Berlin after the armistice.

Change Is Sought In Hunting Season Of Georgia Fowl

BY CLARK HOWELL, JR.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.
Washington, July 30.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—The extension of the hunting season for wild fowl beyond January 31 will be taken up by the biological survey of the department of agriculture, with a view to considering numerous requests from sportsmen in Georgia, including a petition transmitted by Thomas Purse, secretary of the Savannah board of trade. The question is being handled with the bureau by Senator William J. Harris, and today E. W. Nelson, chief of the bureau, in a letter to Senator Harris, said:
"The present regulations covering the open season for wild fowl shooting in the southern states, including Georgia, were made after careful investigation and conferences and communications with those interested in order that the desires of the majority of the sportsmen might be met if compatible with the safety of the birds."

"Within the last few months a number of requests have been made along the lines indicated in your letter, suggesting a change in the open season. This biological survey will give this matter careful attention and try and secure information from as many people in the southern states as possible for the purpose of preparing recommendations to lay before the migratory bird conservation commission at its next meeting which will probably be the next fall. All changes in the regulations must first be submitted to this board by the secretary" of agriculture before they are definitely acted upon. You may rest assured that every reasonable effort will be made to meet the desires of the sportsman when this can be done without serious interfering with the object of the migratory bird treaty, which is to maintain our supply of wild fowl in order that good hunting may be perpetuated.

In this connection I may say that the question of extending the season later than January 31 is an extremely serious one since in some of the southern states resident black ducks are known to begin breeding early in February and many others are mating at that time. The length of the open season for shooting wild fowl in any part of the United States is limited under the terms of the treaty to three and one-half months each year."

The bureau informed Senator Harris that many requests for changes in the seasons allowed for hunting were coming to the bureau, including wild fowl, snipe and doves.

M'PHERSON DELEGATE TO NATIONAL TAX MEET

Athens, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Dr. J. W. McPherson, professor of political science at the University of Georgia and a member of the tax commission of the state of Georgia, was appointed Friday by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick as a delegate to the national convention of lay associations to be held at Bretonwood, N. H., September 10 to 18.

For several years Dr. McPherson has been a member of the Georgia tax commission, and through his efforts many changes in the tax system of Georgia have been suggested, if not put into operation. He is a strong advocate of the simplified property tax, as opposed to the old general tax, and has offered some valuable suggestions in this direction.

Dr. McPherson is a native of Georgia and has spent much of his life in the state. He is a member of the Georgia Tax Association and has been active in its work. He is also a member of the National Tax Association and has been a delegate to its annual convention in 1919 and 1920.

ROAD TO SUSPEND SUNDAY MIDNIGHT

St. Louis, July 30.—Operation of the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad will be suspended at midnight tomorrow, an official of the defunct road announced today. The movement of business men to raise funds to continue operation of the road has failed, the official stated.

The physical properties of the road are valued at approximately $1,000,000. The road runs from Joplin, Mo., to Helena, Ark., a distance of 256 miles.

built in Macon. Where is the money to come from? Paragraph 3 of this remarkable letter from the mythical Georgia Capital Removal association, explains it:
"It will provide for the simple and straight swap by the state of two pieces of inadequate and run down property in Atlanta for the new and adequate properties in Macon, and the difference in cost of the proposed new properties—about four and a quarter million dollars—will be the value of the new properties, or maybe more—will be provided by Bibb county and the city of Macon. The state contribution will be the old properties in Atlanta."

What state will pay?
"So the state of Georgia has only to be taxed to the amount received from the sale of the capital square and the governor's mansion, and the difference, $3,000,000, is to be paid by the people of Macon and Bibb county."

Senate Bill No. 2, which provides for a constitutional amendment, enacted in Section 2, paragraph 1, that the capital shall not be located in the city of Macon until Tenth square or other suitable property is donated, and further provides that authority is granted to the county of Bibb to issue its bonds in the sum of three million dollars and pay the proceeds therefrom to the city of Macon, and a new capital and governor's mansion erected in Macon should cost ten million dollars, only seven million is to be raised by the people of the state generally. Bibb county is to raise the other three million. Section 3, paragraph 1, of this bill is as follows:

Bibb county is to raise the other three million. Section 3, paragraph 1, of this bill is as follows:

Section 3, Paragraph 1. Authority is hereby granted to the county of Bibb, through the county board of commissioners of said county, to create said indebtedness and issue said bonds, payable, principal and interest at a period of periods, of not more than fifty years from the date of the issuance thereof; and the said county authorities are required before the issuance of said bonds, to make provisions for the payment thereof as and when the same shall become due. Said authority may be exercised by said county board of commissioners without submitting the same to a vote of the people of the county.

"This section does not require the county commissioners of Bibb to create any indebtedness. It merely authorizes them at their discretion to do so. Furthermore it authorizes them to do so if they see fit without submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county."

"Now suppose, for the sake of the argument, that this bill should pass and the people of the state should ratify it and the present capital and governor's mansion in Atlanta be sold, and the proceeds therefrom be used to pay the interest on the bonds issued by Bibb county, and the principal of the bonds be paid by the people of Macon and Bibb county, and the difference between the proceeds of the sale of the capital square and the governor's mansion, and the difference, $3,000,000, is to be paid by the people of Macon and Bibb county."

Atlanta are sold, and the county commissioners of Bibb county should decline to hold this election or decline to assess the taxes: what would be the result? Atlanta would have no capital building, Macon would be the nominal capital, the state of Georgia would have raised its millions, but the county of Bibb could not be compelled to raise one dollar of the three millions it is to furnish.

Without Consent of Voters.

"Another remarkable feature is that if the county commissioners were fit to raise these three millions of dollars, they can do so without the consent and against the wishes of the voters of Bibb county, and in excess of the constitutional limitation of the constitution of the state of Georgia on the part of the commissioners of Bibb county, but that little difficulty is also relieved in the constitutional amendment as prepared, by exempting Bibb county from the general operation of the constitutional limitation of seven per cent of bonded indebtedness for section 3, paragraph 2, of this act reads as follows:

"Section 3, Paragraph 3. The bonds so issued by the county of Bibb shall be the binding obligation of said county fully and completely and for all purposes whatsoever, but the same shall not be included in the indebtedness which said county may incur under Article 7, section 1, of this constitution."

"What does this mean? Bibb county property valuation for last year was about forty-two million dollars. Its present bonded indebtedness is about five per cent of its possible seven per cent of bonds. Now, without the vote of its citizens, its county commissioners are to be allowed to bond it for nearly eight per cent additional. This would make the bonded indebtedness of the people of Bibb county 13 per cent. Now let the people of Macon add their state and county and city taxes to this and let them also add their income and other federal taxes, and they will see for the first time what their representatives in the legislature are seeking to put on their shoulders, and that without their consent.

"The last grand jury of Bibb county reported that the jail and courthouses were in bad repair but that they were unable to make the necessary repairs for want of money."

Proceedings Inconclusive.
These two propositions look a little inconclusive, do they not? But the Mulberry Sellers author of the letter to the general assembly can doubtless explain to the grand jury of Bibb county where they can raise the few extra millions to make these repairs and furnish the capitol and mansion.
"The purpose of this is to call attention not only to the people of Bibb county, but to the people of the state, to the utter foolishness of this whole proposition. Unless Mr. Fowler was possessed of an Aladdin's lamp which he could rub and raise millions, it is an absolute impossibility to do so and the height of folly to follow this pipe dream. The people of Georgia are in no condition or mood to be taxed a single dollar to accommodate the ambition of a few men, and certainly the people of Bibb county are very much more than willing to carry out this wild scheme, and if we know the people of Macon were very much more than willing to be taxed these millions of dollars without their consent—a consent that is vouchsafed to every other citizen of Georgia."

"In all candor, there has been enough time and money wasted on this foolish proposition. What do the people of Macon say?"

VALUATION CLAUSE HEARINGS PLANNED

Two Days Set Aside by Committee for Discussion Before Duties Are Taken Up.

Washington, July 30.—The questions of whether the American valuation provision shall be retained in the Fordney tariff bill and whether the dye embargo section shall be restored in the measure will be decided by the senate finance committee before hearings are held on the proposed duties. Two days, Monday and Tuesday, will be given over to discussion of the valuation provision and the dye embargo question will be considered Wednesday after which the committee will meet executive to discuss out its program.

Agreement as to the course on both of the controversial questions was reached today after a morning of discussion had made it evident in the opinion of committee members that the two subjects would drop up continuously and delay the hearings. Chairman Penrose had said earlier in the week that the committee probably would decide the policy on American valuation next week and the agreement today was made to include the dye ban as a measure of speeding up action.

Penrose Urges Speed.

Senator Penrose earlier in the day had warned that unless more speed was injected into the committee's work, the country would not have a new tariff before "considerable snow is on the ground." He added that 268 persons have requested hearings. As a result of the agreement, the second week of the committee's consideration of the bill is allotted none of the committee members would forecast the length of time which would be given to details of rates. ## TO DISCUSS RULES FOR RAIL WORKERS

Cleveland, July 30.—Heads of the four big railroad brotherhoods and the Switchmen's Union of North America, will meet a committee of the Association of Railway Executives in New York Wednesday to consider working rules and conditions.

Those who will attend as representatives of the labor organizations are Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the engineers; W. S. Carter, president of the firemen; W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen; and E. Sheppard, president of the conductors and T. C. Cashen, president of the switchmen.

The meeting is held at the request of the brotherhoods after the meeting of general railroad labor in Chicago July 1, which considered the order of the United States 12 per cent, effective on that date.

A letter mailed July 11th to members of five organizations by their officers instructed them not to carry on negotiations with the managers of any railway regarding working rules and conditions, pending conference with their chief executives with the railroad presidents.

The meeting with the railroad executives was said to have been asked to "clearly place the railroad on record as to whether they will request further decreases in wages and the elimination of time and one-half for overtime."

A referendum of the entire membership of the five organizations on the reduction in wages recommended by Secretary of Labor Davis today July 1 will be taken following a report of the brotherhood chiefs to the results of the New York conference.

Montgomery, Ala., July 30.—The Alabama public service commission today granted the petition of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power company, for 8 cent fare with 2 cents additional for transfers on all city lines. The fare at present is 7 cents with no charge for transfers.

Panacea for Ills

Of Nation Offered

By Labor Secretary

Chicago, July 30.—A more contented America, a richer nation and a model before the world of human machinery, which is being created as the result of a better understanding between employer and employee by Secretary of Labor Davis today at the opening of Chicago's pageant of progress.

Secretary Davis brought his message from Washington with the endorsement of President Harding, who was unable to be present, but who sent a message of greeting to Mayor Thompson. In Boston, Vice President Coolidge pressed a button which gave the signal for a salute of guns by a naval detachment and set whistles and sirens blowing in all parts of the city.

"No more effective means could be for awakening our country, when the whole nation seems to be dumb and despondent, than a pageant of progress," Secretary Davis said.

"No better time could have been picked for such an awakening. I feel sure now that all the mechanical readjustments necessary to our business recovery have been completed. We realize that the way to prosperity is to work back."

"From now on, I believe, the relations between those Americans who work and those who employ will be more cordial, more friendly, more productive of a happy life as well as a prosperous country."

Free of Cost.

In other words, Georgia Tech has done its tremendously vital and important educational work free of cost to the state. Can any other institution in Georgia or elsewhere parallel this record?

"10. During the session just closed the school really operated on a basis of a maintenance appropriation of $255,000. When the committee therefore proposes to reduce Tech's appropriation for next session $50,000, it is actually making a reduction of $105,000."

"11. In other words, Tech's great development in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties will be considered as a liability instead of an asset. No other institution has exerted itself to expend without cost to the state, and as Tech is the only one which it is proposed to penalize to the point of disastrous inefficiency, does not such action put a premium upon lack of effort to expand?"

"12. Unless Tech's appropriation is increased, as requested, its great development will cease and its usefulness to the state will be decidedly curtailed. The student enrollment will be decidedly reduced, and as many members of the faculty as may be necessary will be released. Such action will cause efficient teachers to eliminate contract considerations with Georgia Tech."

Natural Resources.

"13. The natural resources of Georgia are unsurpassed. The state geologist publishes that 34 minerals exist in the state in commercial quantities, and yet Georgia is doing very little to mine, develop and use these resources which could easily be made a source of boundless wealth."

"14. All experience proves, however, that only by technical training can efficient developments be made of natural resources. Without training, we have given to the state the second engineering institute in the nation. With the appropriation requested we can maintain present standards, and in addition we will present the state with a plant of which it may well be proud."

"15. In view of all these facts, will you not vote for the requested maintenance of $255,000? We need encouragement. If the people of Georgia are not concerned in this vital matter, why should sojourning teachers in Georgia be?"

"In conclusion, the fundamental idea is not to place the burden as it will produce a greater Georgia. The efficient industrial development of the state depends upon an efficient school of technology."

FAILURE TO MEET FUND

of the state's financial condition, each and every appropriation taken under consideration must be passed on by the legislature on its own individual merits and worth to the state, and cuts must be made where the least harm or no harm at all will be done," he said.

"I regard the Smith-Lever fund as a source of wonderful educational advantage to the agricultural class of our state, where and when it is efficiently administered, and where once it is taken down place it does, that is generally on account of the personnel of the organization or agents in the particular counties and not on account of the system."

"The general assembly cannot afford to find fault in the position of having petitioned Georgia to throw away or to lose the benefits derived from this fund. Nor can it afford to listen to whispers of prejudice or feeling on personal and individual politics. If that is going on, and thus defeat this appropriation, cannot afford to stop."

"The legislature cannot afford to hurt the state's great university by withholding from her the opportunity she has for good in the administration of this fund."

"If the appropriations committee fails to put it back in the appropriations bill, and bring it favorably reported to the house, I shall deem it my duty and my privilege to ask the house to place it back. I hope and trust the house will agree with me and other members who favor the position I take."

"For these and other reasons I believe the state should make an appropriation to match the United States Smith-Lever fund, and not actually lose to our people the benefit of a quarter of a million dollars in the form of an agricultural education which comes right to the doorstep of every farm in Georgia."

Hastings Attended.

H. G. Hastings, president of the Southeastern Fair association, declared that he was astounded at the proposal to remove the demonstration agents. If there ever was a time in the history of Georgia, he asserted, when these officials were more necessary it is now.

"My personal business as well as my connection with the Southeastern fair, has given me full opportunity to see the results of the work of these agents," he said. "In my humble opinion the money spent by the state of Georgia for this work has brought greater returns than the same amount of money spent for any other purpose."

"To cut out the county demonstration service at this time would be a crime against the farm population as well as the business interests dependent on safe and sane farming."

"In diversified farming as a fixed policy is Georgia's only financial salvation, and in only small degree have we diversified, as yet. Giving all due credit to the various agricultural institutions for their work, it is the county agent that takes the necessary information right to where it is needed most, to the man and woman on the farm. What measure of diversification in farming we have in Georgia today is largely due to county agents."

Add to Better Farming.

"The county agent is the initiating force for better farming in each county. He, or she, as the case may be, is the common sense adviser of the farm man or woman often struggling blindly for help."

"Giving all due credit to the various agricultural institutions for their work, it is the county agent that takes the necessary information right to where it is needed most, to the man and woman on the farm. ## TO DISCUSS RULES FOR RAIL WORKERS

Cleveland, July 30.—Heads of the four big railroad brotherhoods and the Switchmen's Union of North America, will meet a committee of the Association of Railway Executives in New York Wednesday to consider working rules and conditions.

Those who will attend as representatives of the labor organizations are Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the engineers; W. S. Carter, president of the firemen; W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen; and E. Sheppard, president of the conductors and T. C. Cashen, president of the switchmen.

The meeting is held at the request of the brotherhoods after the meeting of general railroad labor in Chicago July 1, which considered the order of the United States 12 per cent, effective on that date.

A letter mailed July 11th to members of five organizations by their officers instructed them not to carry on negotiations with the managers of any railway regarding working rules and conditions, pending conference with their chief executives with the railroad presidents.

The meeting with the railroad executives was said to have been asked to "clearly place the railroad on record as to whether they will request further decreases in wages and the elimination of time and one-half for overtime."

A referendum of the entire membership of the five organizations on the reduction in wages recommended by Secretary of Labor Davis today July 1 will be taken following a report of the brotherhood chiefs to the results of the New York conference.

Panacea for Ills

By Labor Secretary

Chicago, July 30.—A more contented America, a richer nation and a model before the world of human machinery, which is being created as the result of a better understanding between employer and employee by Secretary of Labor Davis today at the opening of Chicago's pageant of progress.

Secretary Davis brought his message from Washington with the endorsement of President Harding, who was unable to be present, but who sent a message of greeting to Mayor Thompson. In Boston, Vice President Coolidge pressed a button which gave the signal for a salute of guns by a naval detachment and set whistles and sirens blowing in all parts of the city.

"No more effective means could be for awakening our country, when the whole nation seems to be dumb and despondent, than a pageant of progress," Secretary Davis said.

"No better time could have been picked for such an awakening. I feel sure now that all the mechanical readjustments necessary to our business recovery have been completed. We realize that the way to prosperity is to work back."

"From now on, I believe, the relations between those Americans who work and those who employ will be more cordial, more friendly, more productive of a happy life as well as a prosperous country."

President Harding's message today said "it would be very much to pay a tribute to true progress in the city which deserves recognition as a true capital of progress."

During the Spanish-American war he commanded the 28th bridge, first division, after which he was retained as a major general.

GERMANY HOPEFUL ON PEACE TREATY

Berlin, July 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—The German foreign office expresses belief that the negotiations which have been proceeding for the last three weeks between Ellis Loring Dresel, the American commissioner in Berlin, and Dr. Rosen, the foreign minister, have progressed sufficiently to warrant the conclusion that a general working basis has been established for the conclusion of a formal peace treaty between Germany and the United States at an early date.

It is understood in well-informed quarters that the German government has assented to propositions submitted by the American state department through Mr. Dresel in the way of informal inquiries based upon the essential principles enunciated in the Porter-Knox peace resolution. None of these, it is said, had been opposed by the German cabinet, which is declared to be wholly in accord with the American attitude on the prerogatives and privileges and various rights under the treaty of Versailles to which the United States is entitled by virtue of America's participation in the war.

The informal proposals have not touched upon economic features of the proposed treaty, but have dealt with the cardinal points upon which the United States places emphasis in connection with its interpretation of the Versailles treaty. The conclusions reached as a result of Mr. Dresel's negotiations are being formulated in the manner desired by the Washington authorities and an official memorandum, it is forecast, probably will be ready for publication within a few days. Upon this memorandum, it is understood the formal treaty will be based.

OF PELLAGRA REPORT

less in the press of other nations. It is to these statements we take exception. We may be over-sensitive, but the average American dislikes to have placed in front of his nose a flag indicating the presence of a plague, when as a matter of fact there exists within his home nothing to justify that characterization. And likewise, where there is no famine he dislikes to be held up as the object of charity, and compared with the "unfortunates of other lands" for the relief of whose starvation and disease our people have so generously contributed.

"Upon reflection, I think you will agree that these statements are not warranted by the report as to the increase of pellagra in Mississippi. Even if it should develop that these statistics are correct, the indicated increase of pellagra in one state would not constitute a plague or a menace to the entire south, because the disease is not contagious.

"Certainly there is nothing in the telegram of the editor of the Spartanburg Herald to warrant either of the two statements in question. In that part of Mr. Hearon's telegram which you quote, he expressed the opinion that the health service should continue its investigations this year. Everybody agrees, and congress has agreed, that part of the telegram which you did not quote in your letter, and which bears directly upon the question, Mr. Hearon stated:

"Crops Excellent.

"There is, of course, nothing even approaching famine conditions in this part of South Carolina. Crop conditions are excellent and there is to be more food in this country, grown upon its own land, than ever in the history of the country.

"I call it to your attention because I am satisfied it is true generally of the south. The fact that cotton is selling below the cost of production has forced the south to the production of more foodstuffs. And I repeat that, while the south is appealing for assistance in marketing its cotton at a fair price, and for more liberal credits in order to hold its product until such fair price can be secured, its people are not menaced with famine and are not seeking charity.

"I write you again because of your statement that if investigation develops that there are misrepresented conditions an official refutation is desirable. I thought you should know that the people of the south do not question the accuracy of the statement that pellagra may have increased in some one or in several states, but what they complain of is the statement that the entire south is 'actually menaced with famine and plague.' If you will direct that the investigation include the accuracy of this statement and if the facts do not justify it, you will make an official refutation of it. It will be exceedingly gratifying to us. And I shall hope that in doing so you will take appropriate action toward the officials who, by misrepresenting conditions misled you into making the statement.

"I assure you again, Mr. President, that it is with great hesitation the people of the south have taken exception to your statement. They are conscious of the fact that your utterance was based upon information you believed to be reliable, and impelled by the highest motive that can prompt the actions of man."

Meat Is Offered.

The institute of American meat packers announced today that through its president, Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, 25,000 pounds of meat had been offered to Surgeon General Cummings, of the public health service, for use in prevention and cure of pellagra in any district the service might designate.

The telegram, from Mr. Wilson, added that the institute would be glad to co-operate if further quantities of meat were needed, and assumed in offering the donation, that the health service would "organize proper and effective facilities for distribution." The meat would be selected by experts, it said, on the basis of "adaptability to pellagra patients."

An old-fashioned sale with old-fashioned prices

Commencing tomorrow, Monday, August 1, we will inaugurate one of our famous, old-fashioned August furniture sales, and, best of all, we will give you our old-fashioned low August prices.

For many years prior to 1915 the American held these famous sales so that those who expected to move into new homes in September would have an opportunity to make their selections during a usually dull month, and in order to make August a busy month we always offered extra values to the August shoppers—in fact, we even made the manufacturers join us in giving special bargain prices to pass along to our customers, but after our sale in 1915 August sales went out of fashion, for it was almost impossible to secure merchandise for regular selling, let alone our August sales.

But now with conditions back to normal—with lumber, steel and glass prices down, the manufacturers of home furnishings have reduced their prices and we are again confronted with the old-time trade conditions. August may again prove a dull month, but not at the American, for here you will find the good old-fashioned August bargain prices on fine furniture made in the good old-fashioned way—here you'll find no furniture made of green lumber slapped together by incompetent workmen made to sell at the big war prices, for here we love our work and our merchandise and every piece on our show floors or in our warehouses must be the kind we would gladly give a place in our own homes.

Most of our stock is from Grand Rapids manufacturers, but we have some from other fine furniture makers as well.

G. O. P. COMMITTEE ON TAX REVISION

Washington, July 30.—Republicans of the house have today means committee conferred today for a development of views on tax revision. Many divergent opinions were developed, but no conclusions were reached.

Emphasizing that he was speaking solely for himself, Chairman Fordney said afterwards that the goal toward which he would strive would be a cut of $500,000 in the tax bill next year. His opinion was that by exercise of rigid economy the government could be operated for $2,500,000,000 in 1922 instead of the $3,000,000,000 estimated by the treasury.

Other members were less optimistic. They thought that with the enormous fixed expense including the interest on the public debt, the costs of maintaining the army, navy and the government merchant fleet, it would be impossible to get along with much less than $4,000,000,000 and consequently could see little prospect of any marked reduction in the tax burden.

Transportation Taxes.

Practically all members of the committee are in sympathy with the repeal of the transportation taxes, both passenger and freight, but they have not yet fixed upon a new source of revenue to offset the loss.

of $350,000,000 to the treasury that this would involve.

Chairman Fordney's idea is that if the repeal of the whole is found impracticable, a start might be made by cutting them in half next year and eliminating the balance the year following. Representative Longworth, republican, Ohio, has before the committee a revision bill proposing straightout repeal.

While committee republicans have reached no definite decisions on the proposed revision, it appears to be fairly well established that there will be no alterations in the normal rates on individual incomes or in the amount of exemptions allowed. There probably will be some shifting of the tax burden in other directions and Mr. Fordney is of the belief that some new sources of taxation will be found.

The chairman said today he was studying the Canadian system of taxing luxuries particularly in their relation to the so-called luxury taxes imposed by the present American law. Illustrating the difference between the two, Mr. Fordney said that in this country in the case of wearing apparel a luxury tax was imposed on the cost above a specified sum, whereas in Canada a tax was imposed upon the wholesale price where the cost was in excess of a given amount.

Asked about the repeal of what the treasury has characterized as "nuisance" taxes such as that on soda water, Mr. Fordney said smilingly that all the taxes in the bill were "nuisances."

Treasury and internal revenue bureau officials are expected to present some new recommendations to the committee Monday in executive sessions as well as renewing the administration proposal for repeal.

of the excess profits and higher surtaxes and increasing the normal income tax on corporations from 10 to 15 per cent.

Agree on Plan.

Chairman Fordney, Representative Longworth and many other members of the committee are known to favor this plan. Mr. Fordney said today it would make for simplification. He was of the opinion that the revenue would be substantially the same, but said that in any event he thought it was the general belief that corporations should not pay as much in peace time as in time of war.

There is a difference of opinion among members as to the time which will be necessary to frame the tax bill. Representative Frear, republican, Wisconsin, said today it might be September 1 before the measure could be made ready for this house. He declared the subject was

The new scale will become operative August 1, with a pit mining rate of $2.33 per one hundred bushels of material lifted inside labor $4.18 a day; unskilled outside labor $3.00 a day; day labor for skilled men, inside, $4 and $5.05.

Three Are Killed.

Pana, Ill., July 30.—Three persons were killed and a fourth seriously injured today afternoon when an automobile in which they were driving from Hillsboro to this city, was struck by a fast train of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railroad at Hillsboro, nine miles west of here. The dead are Leslie Smith, a merchant of Hillsboro; his wife, Miss Cora Robinson, and Miss Lucille Perkins, also of Hillsboro.

GENERAL AUTOMOTIVE EQUIPMENT

TIRE COMPANY IS NOW AT PEAK PRODUCTION

An indication of heavy buying, due to prices being readjusted to pre-war levels, is shown by the recent production figures of the Mason Tire and Rubber company. This was one of the first companies to adjust its prices in keeping with the economic trend of the time. The concern realized that the war was over and that business could be stimulated by quickly and thoroughly meeting the public's demand for tire prices based on present raw material costs. The result has been an increase in buying so heavy as to have stimulated production to peak capacity.

Buick Announces New Four-Cylinder Car

This new Buick "4" roadster will be shown here by the Buick branch this week.

The Buick Motor company has just announced the addition of a complete line of four-cylinder models. The four-cylinder line is to satisfy the demand for Buick quality in a car that can be purchased for less than the six-cylinder models.

A roadster and five-passenger touring in the open models and a coupe and five-passenger sedan in the closed models, make up the new line. Each of these cars is equipped with the Buick valve-in-head motor, multiple disc clutch, extra long and resilient springs, and other features which characterize Buick product.

The four-cylinder models are all on the same chassis, all equipped with cellular type radiators, ray-diffusing headlight lens, and are equipped with 214 cord tires. The open models are upholstered in genuine leather, with a seat arrangement which assures plenty of driving room and easy riding qualities. The enclosed models are also roomy, are splendidly upholstered in automobile cloth, with the usual lighting facilities.

The Atlanta branch of the Buick Motor company, Peachtree and Harris streets, will show open type four-cylinder models on their floor commencing Monday.

RAWLINGS HEADS PAIGE RETAIL SALES FORCE

Leslie Rawlings Made Retail Sales Manager for Universal Motors Co.

Leslie W. Rawlings, familiarly known to a large number of friends and to the readers of The Constitution, as "Les," has been appointed retail sales manager for the Universal Motors company, Paige distributors for Georgia.

Mr. Rawlings has been with this company only a few weeks, but his record both with this company and with former connections, including The Constitution, have been so complimentary that he was chosen to fill the post of sales manager, following the resignation of B. H. Newsome.

Mr. Rawlings is, as he puts it, "most enthusiastic over the new Paige 6-56 than any other single product with which I have ever been familiar." This chassis is far superior to any other product ever built by the Paige factory, and is creating probably more comment among dealers and owners than any recent model.

New Peachtree Building Occupied By Auto Firms

This new building, located in the triangle formed by Peachtree and West Peachtree at Balch street, is occupied by several well-known automobile firms, including the Capital City Tire company, the Hasler southeast company and the Reed Oil company. The Taylor Tire company, which was announced in The Constitution a few days since, is also located in the building. This firm is a new undertaking, but is headed by local men who are well known in Atlanta, and especially along auto row, where they have been associated for several years.

This building is located on one of the best lots along auto row, and the stores all have entrances both on Peachtree and West Peachtree streets.

Prichard's Lincoln Car Makes Unusual 680-Mile Country Run

To St. Simons Island and Return in Record Time With Unusual Economy.

James H. Prichard, local Ford dealer and an owner of a four-passenger Lincoln built Lincoln car, has just returned from a trip to St. Simons island, in which he established an unusual record for time and economy, for pleasure touring.

Mr. Prichard states that the trip was made for pleasure, and not for a record, either on gasoline consumption or speed. If it had been otherwise, an average speed of nearly 30 miles per hour for a distance of 680 miles would not seem unusual, for a high class car, such as the Lincoln. The gasoline average was better than 11 3/4 miles per gallon.

When these averages are considered in the light of the conditions, they are unusual. Mr. Prichard states that at the time the trip was taken that it rained on the party all the way to Savannah, thus greatly slowing down the speed and increasing the gasoline consumption. He also states that but a single adjustment was made on the car during the entire trip and that not so much as a puncture, or a rattle, developed to mar the pleasure of the trip.

The facts of the trip as supplied by Mr. Prichard are:

"Atlanta to Savannah, via Covington, Madison, Waynesboro and Savannah, 279 miles, made in 9 hours and 10 minutes, during rain over the entire trip.

"Savannah to Brunswick, 81 miles all over good road, in 2 hours and 15 minutes.

"Return to Atlanta via Jessup, Baxley, McRae, Eastman, Cochran, Macon and Griffin, 239 miles in 11 hours and 30 minutes.

"Total miles, 680. Total time, 22 hours and 55 minutes. Average time 29 1/2 miles per hour. Average gasoline consumption, 11 3/4 miles per gallon."

Mr. Prichard states that the road via Savannah is best for motor travel.

Mason City, Iowa, July 30.—Fatalities resulting from collision of two Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific freight trains near here yesterday, totaled three today with the death of the fireman and engineer of one of the trains. The body of Dave Slater, brakeman, previously had been taken from the wreckage.

PARDON IS GRANTED TO VIDALIA SLAYER

Governor Hardwick Saturday granted a pardon to W. L. Darby, of Vidalia, convicted in Tombs superior court in 1916 of killing a man by the name of Moore on the main business street of Vidalia. The pardon was issued on recommendation of the state prison commission, backed by recommendations from the trial judge; members of the jury, the county officers and a number of citizens.

FRANKLIN CAR CLIMBS MT. WILSON IN REVERSE

Car Carried Four Passengers and Made Ascent of 4,363 Feet in Reverse.

Pasadena, Cal., July 30.—Up Mount Wilson in reverse. Not just exactly the kind of stunt that would appeal to the nervous type of individual, but a stock Franklin car accomplished it the other day in the remarkable time of one hour and twenty-five minutes.

The road up Mount Wilson is a tortuous, winding, one-way affair with turnouts about every thousand feet, and a climb of 4,363 feet in nine miles. Originally built to make possible the installation of the famous telescope at the summit of the mountain, the road was hewn out of the solid rock, with hair-raising "S" turns aplenty, where a second's hesitation might result in car and occupants alike dropping from the road over the abyss several thousand feet. There are no concrete abutments, nor protecting rails along the nine-mile route to the clouds.

As may be gained from the foregoing, it requires a deal of caution and a steady hand and eye to negotiate the climb up Mount Wilson with the car pointed in the usual direction—forward. It requires a consummate degree of skill, iron nerves, accompanied by a reliable car and one that is easy to handle, to attempt the trip—backward.

George Sherwood, service manager for Ralph Hamlin, Franklin dealer in Los Angeles, was the man who turned the trick. Three other passengers, including representatives of the press, accompanied him on the trip which was undertaken to demonstrate the fact that the Franklin motor is not cooled by any forward rush of air, but is just as efficiently cooled whether the car is running backward, forward or standing still. The motor was not once stopped during the ascent, although the occupants alighted once to take photographs and to allow the driver to relax from his strained position.

The Franklin touring car which made the run up Mount Wilson in reverse is the same car that chalked up 23.5 miles to the gallon in the 400-mile Yosemite economy run last May, and the same car that recently made 34.8 miles on one gallon of gasoline on the Los Angeles speedway without coasting.

RHODES TO BECOME GAME HEAD MONDAY

Frank Rhodes, of Athens, has been appointed game and fish commissioner of Georgia by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, and will assume his new duties Monday morning. Clyde Mathews tendered his resignation to the chief executive Friday afternoon on account of ill health.

Free School of Health.

Robert Bryan Harrison, who has been attending the International New Thought congress at Denver, Colo., has returned to the city and will address the free school of health in the assembly room, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, on the subject, "A Joy Ride to the Top of the World." There will be community singing from 2:30 until 4 o'clock led by J. E. McRee and special musical numbers by the school's talented musicians.

Robert Strickland Honored by American Banking Institute

Robert Strickland, Jr., last year's president of the Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Banking, has been appointed chairman of the national membership committee for the coming year. His appointment is the result of the efficient work accomplished in Atlanta last year, when, as a member of the committee, he increased the Atlanta membership 228 per cent, a gain larger than that of any other chapter. Mr. Strickland is credit manager of the Fourth National bank. Thomas I. Miller, assistant cashier of the Central Bank and Trust corporation, of Atlanta, was recently ly elected a member of the executive council, the governing body of the institute. At present the institute has a membership of 45,000.

$1,000 IN PRIZES FOR TEACHERS

Automobile Industry Offers Funds for Class Room Lessons in Safety Education

One thousand dollars in cash prizes for grammar school teachers is offered for the best lessons in safety education, by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Announcement of the $5000 contest for the grammar school children's safety essay contest to be held this fall brought so many inquiries for material for safety education that the automobile industry has decided to offer these additional prizes to develop the best methods of teaching safety.

The awards in the teacher contest will be as follows:

First Prize—$500 Cash and a trip to Washington
Second Prize—$300 Cash.
Third Prize—$200 Cash.

Each contestant is to submit an outline of a plan or a class room lesson which will instruct children in how to avoid accident when on the streets.

Education Biggest Safety Factor.

The contest will take place during the fall. Details of the competition are being submitted to leading educational authorities; and notice of the conditions will be sent directly to the schools of the country.

The number of accidents in relation to the cars on the roads has been decreasing showing that the public is taking care of the traffic problem with increasing efficiency. The automobile industry believes, however, that the grand total of accidents can be made to recede considerably through safety education.

Children Have a Right to Play.

Along with the campaign for caution on the streets the N. A. C. C. is emphasizing the fact that "Children Have a Right to Play." More playgrounds are regarded as essential to road safety.

"Penalize the careless adult" is the third angle to this safety program. The millions of responsible motorists are constantly suffering for the sins of a very small minority. The N. A. C. C. favors heavy penalties where proof is shown of carelessness on the part of the driver; and believes that it is important to scrutinize carefully the records of applicants before granting licenses.

Hanson Motor Company Announces Drastic Cut in All Hanson Cars

Reductions From Peak Prices Run From $570 to Approximately $900 on August 1.

The Hanson Motor company announced reductions in all open and closed models and the addition of a seven-passenger touring car and a coupe. The reductions on open models is for $370, and is in addition to a previous reduction of $200. The sedan has been reduced approximately $900.

The seven-passenger touring car is now getting into production and a few of these models have been seen on the streets of Atlanta. The coupe, which is to be the finest of all Hanson jobs, to date, will be in production within a few weeks.

The announcement of reduction in Hanson prices was made by wire to their dealer organization at the various distributing centers of the entire United States, Thursday evening, and up to noon Saturday had brought telegraphic responses for immediate shipment for a large number of cars. Carload shipments being ordered from many points, brought the total sales for the month past all other months this year.

"Since the first Hanson Six, it has been the policy of the company to build a strictly quality product without regard to price or class, to fill the need of motorists who require the utmost service in constantly reliable performance, combined with that degree of riding comfort to which the best of automobile engineers aspire. The steady demand for Hanson cars," said Mr. Hanson, "has caused us to install a large amount of the most improved labor saving machinery so that the same high standard of workmanship might be carried on in quantity production."

The Hanson car is proving very popular over the entire country, and with the present reductions in effect, there is no doubt but that that business will be further stimulated.

The all-aluminum body construction of the Hanson, makes it one of the most popular light six cars where salt air, that damages the old type bodies severely, fails to attack the aluminum Hanson.

The Hanson Motor company has its own body-building plant, here in Atlanta, as a unit of its assembly plant. Officials of the company state that the saving effected by building their own bodies from the sheet aluminum and specially selected hardwood, makes it possible to produce the aluminum body at a price only slightly in excess of the old sheet metal bodies.

JOHN R. LANGFORD, 67 YEARS OF AGE, DIES AT HIS HOME

John Robert Langford, widely-known Atlanta and for 23 years assistant manager of the Atlanta branch of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, died Saturday morning at his residence, 24 Eggleston street. He was 67 years old and death followed a short illness of several weeks.

Mr. Langford was a native of Watkinsville, Ga., and has been a resident of Atlanta more than 40 years, during which he was active in various forms of church work.

He is survived by his wife, one son, Ralph W. Langford, of Davenport, Iowa; two daughters, Mrs. W. Stanley, of Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. Wilford T. Wilson, of Atlanta; one brother, J. J. Langford, of Conyers, Ga.; two half brothers, D. C. Langford, of Conyers and T. H. Langford, of Barnesville, and two sisters, Mrs. R. A. Almond, of Washington, Ga., and Mrs. C. W. White, of Millport, Ala. He also leaves five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon from the West End Presbyterian church, with Rev. R. F. Kirkpatrick officiating. Interment will follow in West View cemetery.

Mrs. Anna Slaght is assistant manager of one of the largest hotels in Chicago.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

INVESTMENT VALUE

When a man first looks at our "Glenbrook" Model he is captured by the exquisite finish and long, graceful lines. He realizes that it is an unusual art creation—a newer and finer conception of the five passenger vehicle.

And then comes a trial on the road—one thrilling experience behind the motor that accelerates from five to twenty-five miles per hour in nine seconds flat. That ride is never forgotten and it leads inevitably to proud, enthusiastic adoption.

Later comes indisputable proof of low gasoline consumption, long life of tires and care-free, untroubled mileage. And last—but far from least—comes the confidence and respect that only fine products command.

Here, surely, is amazing investment value at $1635.

Greatest Value in Europe and America, Say World's Motor Car Experts

If it were possible to take a census of public opinion in Europe and America, experienced judgment would overwhelmingly pronounce the Cadillac far and away the greatest motor car value in the world.

English, French, and Italian engineers have unhesitatingly admitted as much—the first American motorist you meet on the street, no matter whether he owns a Cadillac or not, will instantly register the same opinion.

There could not be such a solid body of conviction if every Cadillac did not deliver everything that is conceded to it by the motorists of the world.

It is the aim and the ambition of every manufacturer of good cars in America to secure a share of the overwhelming preference conceded to the Cadillac.

Yet the Cadillac ownership remains substantially unmoved; public opinion at home and abroad remains unconvinced; and the Cadillac continues to be considered by common agreement, the greatest outstanding motor car value in the world.

The simple reason is that the Cadillac case is proven—not once but tens of thousands of times, and by 110,000 eight-cylinder cars; not by a few years, but by eighteen years; not by promise, but by performance which is without peer or parallel.

Tours Country in Light Six Studebaker Sedan

H. Gabriel, a prominent jeweler of Mobile, Ala., and vice president of the Mobile Auto club, passed through Atlanta this week, after driving his Light Six Studebaker sedan more than five thousand miles, approximately two thousand miles of which were made during the past few weeks. He states that he has had no trouble of any kind with the car, and that it is still equipped with the original tires. Mr. Gabriel left Atlanta for Waynesville, N. C., where he will spend the remainder of the summer. Mr. Gabriel and his son are shown in the above photograph, which was taken in front of the A. F. Hill, Jr. & Co.'s office on Peachtree.

18 CONVENTIONS HERE DURING MONTH OF JULY CELEBRATES 50TH YEAR AS MEMBER OF I. O. O. F.

Registered Attendance of Meets Totaled 7,750 Delegates, Bureau Reports.

Thomas J. Buchanan, 73, Recalls History of Barnes Lodge.

Eighteen conventions were held in Atlanta during the month of July, 1921, with a registered attendance of 7,750 delegates, or an average of 430 registered delegates at each meeting, according to announcement by the Atlanta convention bureau Saturday. During the first seven months of 1921 Atlanta played host to 216 conventions with a registered attendance of 58,000.

Things of 50 years ago, as resurrector by Fuzzy Woodruff, appeal to us as something extremely ancient and savored with unmistakable obsolescence, but not so when one talks to our looks upon Thomas J. Buchanan, who last week celebrated his 50th anniversary as a member of Barnes lodge here of Odd Fellows.

THOMAS J. BUCHANAN.

Mr. Buchanan, the father of Councilman Claude Buchanan, is just as hale as he is hearty and completely belies the 73 years which he admits. Today he is just as active in fraternal order circles as he has ever been, and the members of Barnes lodge, I. O. O. F., give him much credit for the growth of that body. He says himself that he has been secretary of the lodge for such a long space that he cannot correctly number the years.

In addition to the presentation which was made to him of a handsome fifty-year veteran's jewel at a recent meeting of the order's chapter and in addition to the compliments which have been showered upon him by his brothers in the order for his untiring zeal and helpfulness, Mr. Buchanan has another honor in connection with fraternal orders. He was the first man in Georgia to be great sachem of the Red Men.

When he was initiated into the Barnes lodge, I. O. O. F., July 28, 1871, just six years after Atlanta was in flames from Sherman's torch. Therefore, in perceiving Mr. Buchanan we look on one of Georgia's youngest Confederate veterans. He saw the battle of Atlanta and was in the last troop to leave the city just prior to Sherman's entrance.

Interesting things are told by Mr. Buchanan with regard to the past fifty years. When he was initiated in 1871, he said, "the lodge room was on the top floor of a building that stood where Daniel Brothers' clothing store now stands on Peachtree street. It remained there for several years, then moved to the old Healey building in Marietta street, just east of the Empire building. From there it went to the top floor over Brown and Allen's store at Whitehall and Alabama streets, the site now occupied by the Connally building. After a long stay here the lodge rooms were moved down Whitehall just south of Captain W. H. Brotherton's store, where they were retained for several years. From there they were moved into their present location at the corner of West Alabama and Broad streets."

A number of the scouts who were in camp during the third period remained over for the fourth. The scouts at Camp Friendly each night take part in a wholesome, interesting and lively program. As soon as the twilight has deepened enough to make a campfire, Scout Executive Roland L. Shine calls the whole camp up to a convenient pavilion, where all can be comfortable regardless of the weather. Then occur the last of the features of the day.

Sunday night the intelligence of the camp had a chance to shine in an exciting effort. Here, Monday night Mr. Shine surprised the boys with an account of his experiences in the first line trenches in France. The dangers and horrors were so vividly recalled and told that trench warfare has a new meaning for the boys who heard that story.

The next night the scouts had summed up for them all the activities of the third period through Tuesday. This was in the reading of the bi-weekly "Camp Life," which has for two years been edited by Frank McCormack, of Troop 18.

TO RESUME SEARCH FOR BODY OF STONE
Calgary, Alberta, July 30.—Another searching party of Swiss guides was being organized today to recover the body of W. P. Stone, president of Purdue university, who plunged to his death from Mount Eamon July 18.

This information was received here today by the Calgary Herald from its correspondent who now is at Trail Centre Camp with the rescue party returning to Banff with Dr. Stone's widow. The educator's son is expected to reach Banff tomorrow and to press on to Mount Eamon in quest of his father's body.

Mrs. Stone today was resting comfortably in camp after having been carried over a rough stretcher for miles over a narrow mountain trail. She was recuperating rapidly and was expected to show no permanent ill effects from her trying experiences.

It probably will be a week or ten days, however, before she is able to resume her journey for she will have to ride 35 miles on horse back to Banff.

Stewart-Warner Introduces New Warn-O-Meter

Device for Registering Motor Temperature on All Cars.

The Stewart-Warner service station here is introducing the new Stewart "Warn-O-Meter," a device which registers the temperature of the motor, and is adaptable to either water or air-cooled cars.

The Warn-O-Meter is an attractive accessory and lends considerably to the appearance of the car when attached to the radiator cap. It is so arranged, however, that it may be attached to any part of the car. This operated by a reostat attached to the side of the motor block. The temperature is indicated by two lights, one green and one red, the green light burning all the time that the ignition switch is turned on, unless the heat of the motor becomes excessive, then the reostat automatically switches the current to the red light.

Ed Yancey, manager of the Atlanta office of this company, in enumerating the advantages of the Warn-O-Meter, mentioned among other things, the fact that it was just as easily "read" in the night as during the day, and that it gave the actual temperature of the motor itself.

The United States army air service is charting a system of model airways covering the entire continent for the use of operators or owners of aircraft. The plan calls for the first of the model airways between Washington, D. C., and Dayton, Ohio, with five main stations, ten subsidiary stations and twenty emergency fields.

NINTH WARD CITIZENS PLANNING NEW PARK

Alderman Williamson Asks Tentative Drawings of Walkways for Site.

Another beautiful public park for Atlanta is the plan citizens and Alderman Oscar Williamson, of the ninth ward, are working to develop. In 1911 the city purchased a tract of three acres bordering on Euclid and North avenues and named it Goldsboro park. No steps have since been taken to improve the grounds.

Saturday Alderman Williamson took up with the construction department the matter of furnishing tentative drawings of walkways and other improvements that go to beautify a park. It is proposed to build a swimming pool, establish a play-ground and tennis courts. Alderman Williamson will secure estimates of the cost and will ask the council finance committee of which he is a member, to authorize sufficient appropriation to get the work started. DeKalb county will be requested to aid also, since the park is in that county.

The tract is ideally located and adapted for park purposes, if it is said, and can be made one of the most beautiful spots of recreation in the city.

Coal Famine Warning

Montgomery, Ala., July 28.—Acting Fuel Administrator Roy H. Cox has issued a warning to consumers of domestic coal that unless they begin now to lay in a supply of fuel, a serious coal famine is imminent during the coming winter.

Failure on the part of the domestic consumers to buy when their needs can be easily supplied has created a situation equal in seriousness to that which the people of Alabama were confronted last winter.

OPPOSE USING GORDON FOR WOUNDED NEGROES

Mayor Key Saturday morning wired Congressman W. D. Upshaw in protest against the contemplated use of a part of Camp Gordon as a rehabilitation hospital for wounded negro soldiers, the plan of the United States public health service.

The mayor asked that the project be abandoned, stating that the location of Camp Gordon is not such as would make it desirable from a community standpoint for a hospital for negro soldiers. He urged the congressman's influence to have adopted General Pershing's suggestion that the camp be made a civilian military camp and a hospital site for white soldiers.

Congressman Upshaw's message to Mayor Key is as follows: "Public Health Service has decided to use about three hundred acres at Camp Gordon for building hospital for disabled negro soldiers having twelve hundred beds and distributing in Atlanta vicinity about a million dollars a year. Three other places including Nashville are bidding for this hospital. Call representative citizens together today and ascertain whether Atlanta will welcome or protest the building of this institution as a commercial asset. Have conferred with both senators. Entire Georgia delegation will back Atlanta's wish. Wire today if possible. As further information General Pershing favors retention of half camp for hospital and summer citizens training camp for white soldiers and minor mobilizations."

Announcing The New

"Four"

Here is a Thoroughbred Four Completing the Famed Buick Line

The new Four-Cylinder Buick, here announced, is a thoroughbred—a pedigreed car well worthy of its name.

Down to the very last detail, this new model possesses every quality of enduring serviceability, complete comfort, and distinctive appearance that have always characterized Buick automobiles.

The advent of this new Four makes the Buick 1922 line complete. It offers to purchasers of a car of this size all the quality and service that go to make up the name "Buick."

The Buick Valve-in-Head Engine—A Power Plant That Has Proved Itself

A Great Car—Prices Make It An Even Greater Value

The engine, of course, is of the time-tested Buick Valve-in-Head type. The year-after-year concentration of Buick's engineering skill and experience in building Valve-in-Head motors assures the highest standard of performance obtainable today.

Every other unit is of a quality equal to the power plant. The whole assembly constitutes a perfectly balanced chassis which is of typical Buick construction. The equipment of Cord Tires is merely evidence of the quality which characterizes the entire car.

Two open and two closed body types mounted on the Buick built chassis comprise the new series.

Even the most casual inspection of the details of design and workmanship will reveal that full measure of quality which motorists have learned to associate with Buick.

Obviously a high grade automobile—a genuine Buick production—the prices listed below make this great Four even greater. A value such as this is possible only because of the combination of Buick engineering skill devoted to the one ideal of quality, Buick production facilities developed over nearly a quarter of a century, and Buick's nation-wide distribution and service organization.

The Buick Motor Company is proud of the Buick Four. It has the faith of long experience in this newest addition to its line. It places upon it unreservedly the Buick guarantee carried by every Buick automobile produced. That its confidence is well placed is manifested not only by the keen interest with which motorists have awaited this announcement, but also the advance orders placed by distributors, dealers, and the general public.

cluded, Charles S. Robison, head of the house, has started and now has in full swing a big August furniture sale which promises to eclipse his recent big record.

Mr. Robison states that he was moved to do this because of the number of inquiries he has received from friends and patrons who were out of the city during the anniversary sale, but who are back in the city now, and wish to know if they cannot even yet avail themselves of his low prices inaugurated during the anniversary sale.

"During the month of August," said Mr. Robison Saturday, "we are going to duplicate the prices we quoted in our anniversary sale—a sale that was one of the largest and best we have ever enjoyed since we threw our doors open to the buying public nineteen years ago. In that sale we had everything in stock marked down to about one-third off regular prices, and our friends and patrons showed their appreciation of this effort of ours to save them money by a most liberal patronage. During August we are going to let them select from our large stock at the same big price reductions."

While much of the stock of the Robinson Furniture company was moved during their recent sale, Mr. Robison states that, with new goods arriving almost daily, he can offer to patrons choices from one of the largest and most complete stocks of house furnishings in the south. The malle are now carrying to Atlanta housewives and others thousands of beautifully printed circulars showing some of the best selections in furniture at the Robinson house and informing them of the big August sale. It is a large four-page rotogravure piece of printing in handsome colors and is bound to make a splendid impression on those receiving it.

New Durant Four Now in Production

This new Durant four-cylinder car, selling for $899.50, is now in production at the plant in Lansing, and if current rumors along auto row are to be relied upon, will be handled in the southeast by one of Atlanta's best-known automobile men. However, no definite announcement or statement has been received to this effect.

The car was conceived, designed and put into production by W. C. Durant in approximately four months' time, and it is stated that before a single car had been produced that requests for immediate celebrated murder cases almost twenty years ago, will be made within the next ten days by Attorney John E. Cooper, of Macon. The Georgia prison commission has twice recommended Rawlins for a pardon, but no governor has so far been found who would approve the recommendation. It is considered virtually certain that the prison commission will again make the recommendation, and Attorney Cooper hopes that Governor Hardwick will grant the pardon.

The plea for pardon will be based on the ground that Milton Rawlins is entirely innocent of participation in the killing of the Carter children in Lowndes county. The Rawlins case has been to the supreme court of Georgia three times and to the United States supreme court twice. J. G. Rawlins, father of the three Rawlins boys, paid the penalty with his life, and two of the boys, Milton and Jesse, were originally sentenced to be hanged, while another, Leonard, was given a life term. All of the boys later had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment, and Jesse and Leonard were eventually pardoned, though executive clemency was denied Milton. Milton Rawlins is now serving on the Mitchell county chain-gang.

NEW TRIAL DENIED NEGRO PHYSICIAN IN POISONING CASE

Macon, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Judge H. Mathews, in Bibb superior court, today denied a new trial to M. C. Mitchell, a negro physician, convicted of the poisoning of his nephew, Henry G. Mitchell, in order, it was alleged, to collect $24,000 insurance carried on his life. The case will be carried to the supreme court, according to attorneys John E. Cooper and W. O. Cooper, Jr. The nephew, Henry Mitchell, who was a former soldier, died December 31.

His body was examined in Dooly county a year later and a chemical analysis disclosed arsenic in sufficient quantities to kill more than twenty men, experts claimed. There were fourteen insurance policies on the nephew's life, which the state contended were secured by Dr. Mitchell by forging physicians' certificates.

NO UNDERSTANDING REACHED IN MACON BY TRACTION MEN

Macon, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—While repeated conferences between a committee representing the motor men and conductors of the Macon Railway and Light company and the officials of that company have failed to result in an agreement over working conditions for another year, it was not anticipated tonight that there would be a strike. Another conference will be held Tuesday.

The present working agreement provides for a wage scale ranging from 40 cents to 55 cents an hour. The men work slightly more than nine hours a day.

Stole for Sick Wife, Prisoner Tells Judge; Sentence Suspended

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30.—Because his young wife, ill in North Carolina, wrote that she was ill and in need of money, B. O. Mangum took enough jars of honey from a provision company to net about $5, which he sent to her, Mangum today confessed in criminal court. He submitted to the charge, telling Judge Nelson, he had served overseas and had been wounded four times and had never been guilty of theft until the appeal from his sick wife found him without funds. Court suspended a 30-day sentence.

RETURNS IN LAURENS SHOW KENNEDY WINS

Dublin, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—The consolidated returns of the special election for a third representative from Laurens county held yesterday were not completed until late this morning, because of slow returns from three rural districts.

The final vote shows Jerome Kennedy 1,131; L. O. Stubbs, 641; and A. McCook, 170. Kennedy's majority is 39 over Stubbs, the new highest candidate. Mr. Kennedy is a prominent farmer and business man of Dexter.

U. S. CHAMBER BACKS FEDERAL TURNOVER TAX

General Program for Taxation System Is Submitted to Congress.

Notification was received Saturday by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce of a vote by the membership of the chamber of commerce of the United States in favor of a general federal turnover tax on all business transactions. The business organizations comprising the chamber declared themselves for this form of sales tax in a referendum that has just been completed.

As a result of this referendum and a previous one on taxation, taken six months ago, the chamber has submitted to congress a general tax program, which included the following proposals:

Repeal of excess-profits taxes. Repeal of war excise taxes, both those on transportation and communication, and those levied in relation to particular businesses.

A tax on all turnovers to bring in such revenues lost through those repeals as the government's necessities require.

Decentralization of administration of income taxation. Ascertainment by the government of any tax based on income before payment.

A court or courts of tax appeals to be entirely separate and independent of the treasury department.

Net losses and inventory losses in any taxable year to cause redemption of taxation on income of the previous year.

An exchange of property of a like or similar nature to be considered merely as a replacement.

Gains realized from the sale of capital assets to be subject to lower rates than income received from business or other current activities.

Income from any new issues of securities, which lawfully may be made subject to federal tax, to be taxable.

Exemption of American citizens resident abroad from the American tax upon income derived abroad and not remitted to the United States.

A portable electric grinder, for the machine shop, designed to be moved over the work, has the power of one-eighth to one-half horsepower placed above the work out of the operator's way. The spindle is bored with a five-sixteenth-inch hole to receive an adjustable shaft for interior grinding and the use of interchangeable grinding wheels adapts the little machine to a wide range of work.

NEW GOVERNOR IS INAUGURATED BY PORTO RICANS

San Juan, Porto Rico, July 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—The new governor of Porto Rico, Mont Reilly, was inaugurated today with the customary ceremony. He took the oath in the municipal theater at 10:30 o'clock. The oath was administered in Spanish by Chief Justice Hernandez and translated by an interpreter.

MELON SHIPMENTS OF STATE EXCEED 13,000 CARLOADS

Macon, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Carload shipments of watermelons from Georgia for the present season today passed the 13,000 mark, which was 1,000 cars more than the estimate of last week ago.

There would be slight surprise in this section should the total for the season exceed 15,000 cars, heretofore the greatest crop of melons in the history of the state. The daily average shipments of melons this week has been around 350 cars for the middle Georgia section alone.

Asleep in Muzzle Of Gun, Lost Girl In Fortunate Escape

Port Townsend, Wash., July 30.—Louise O'Brien, 14, missing from her home all night, was found at day-break asleep inside the muzzle of a 14-inch gun of the shore batteries at Fort Worden. Other guns at the fort had been fired just before the girl was discovered.

According to military authorities she had gone for a horse to ride the previous afternoon. Far from home while she was dismounted, the horse ran away and she, following her way and weary of wandering in the darkness, took refuge in the long black muzzle of the gun that suddenly loomed in her path.

Officers at the fort said it was only by chance that this gun was not fired.

Dry Law Sentiment In South America Growing, Says Inman

Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 30.—Dr. S. G. Inman, of the committee on co-operation in Latin-America, stated in an address before the Southern Methodist missionary conference at Lake Junaluska today that the prohibition and anti-traffic amendments to the constitution of the United States have made a profound impression on South America. He said prohibition sentiment was rapidly growing in those countries and that South American labor unions were carrying on propaganda calling for the abolition of alcoholic beverages.

He added that the suffrage movement was aggressive in Brazil, and said the American missionaries were encouraging all such efforts.

MALICIOUS RUMORS SEEN IN BANK RUNS

Financial Institutions in Boston and Philadelphia in Good Condition to Satisfy Depositors.

Boston, July 30.—One hundred and fifteen deposits aggregating $2,500 were received at the Boston Five Cent Savings bank this afternoon, President W. R. Evans announced late today. The fact that these were from old depositors together with an easing off in demand, noticed before the bank closed at its regular hour of 2 o'clock led officials of the institution to believe that the end of the run which caused much excitement today was in sight. The bank, as usual on Saturdays, was open from 3 to 5 and 8 to 9 p. m. to receive deposits. President Evans said that $700,000 had been paid depositors and that the bank was prepared to meet all demands without assistance. The depositors who withdrew their money were principally foreigners.

Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen reiterated his assurance of the bank's integrity and added: "It has been reported to me that the withdrawals in the Five Cent Savings bank are the result of propaganda circulated systematically. This report is being investigated by the city and state authorities and if it is found to be true, the public may rest assured that every effort will be made to bring the perpetrators to justice."

BIG REWARD IS OFFERED.

AUGUSTA BUILDING THREATENED BY FIRE

Augusta, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Fire early this morning gutted the Grand hotel building here. The damage was estimated at $12,000 by local Fire Chief Frank G. Reynolds. The origin of the fire could not be determined, although it is thought that it might have been caused from spontaneous combustion. Captain Hoy, a fireman, was overcome by smoke and was saved from death in the building by a fellow fireman, who dragged him to safety. The Grand hotel, which consisted of thirty-two rooms, was unoccupied at the time of the fire. The bottom floor is used as store space. The water inflicted heavy damage there. The building is owned by G. Lloyd Preacher, a local architect.

The hotel was threatened by fire several weeks ago, and a small quantity of whisky was found there.

EMORY CHAPTER HOUSE NEARING COMPLETION

Emory University, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Work on the new Chi Phi chapter house at Emory is nearing completion, it having been under construction since the beginning of June. It is situated on the corner lot at the northern end of Fraternity row, and will overlook the campus. Gamma chapter of Chi Phi purchased the property when that section of the university property was designated as the site for fraternity houses, and put the construction contract in the hands of Thomas W. Connolly, of Atlanta.

New Models— New Prices

Here's the news you have been waiting for.

For months past the one query most often propounded in motoring circles has been, "What is Reo going to say—and when?"

Here's the answer.

New Closed Models—4-passenger Coupe and 5-passenger Sedan—are now available.

New Prices on Touring and Roadster models effective August 1st.

Story is too long to tell here. 'Twould take a page to tell you about one model alone.

Besides you will have to see these new Reos to fully appreciate.

Suffice to say, all Passenger Car Models have that wonderfully silent, sweet-running, amazingly powerful Reo Six Motor—the greatest motor in the world of its size and for its purpose.

In every genuine advance in automotive science—in all that makes for greater motoring satisfaction—this Six upholds Reo traditions of leadership and merits the title, "The Incomparable—the Six of Sixty Superiorities."

The epitome of Reo engineering experience—the last word in coach building.

In that mighty Reo Speed Wagon we now have something sensational to offer you.

Nobby Cord Ties all 'round and—a greatly reduced price—also effective August 1st.

This Speed Wagon dominates the Field regardless of carrying capacities.

Wherever Motor Trucks are known this Speed Wagon is known as the best.

It fits every business—meets every carrying need.

Range of usefulness is practically unlimited—most versatile as well as most dependable.

Always the lowest priced commercial car of its carrying capacity, this Speed Wagon is now a better buy than ever.

When you've seen these new Reos and heard the new prices, you'll say, Reo is today, more than ever, "The Gold Standard of Values."

Come in and see and hear the whole story.

Miss Ethel Moore Aram, lovely daughter of Mrs. F. K. Aram, whose engagement is announced today to Wylie Burwell, formerly of Atlanta, but now residing in Birmingham. Miss Aram is a graduate of Woodberry's school, and is also a talented pupil of Mrs. William Clark Spiker. She is unusually pretty and charming, a blonde, with exquisite coloring, and is very popular among a wide circle of friends. Mr. Burwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Burwell, of Atlanta, who was graduated from Marietta college. He is identified with the business world of the south, and represents the Mason Rubber company, in Birmingham, where he and his bride-elect will reside after their marriage, which will be an interesting event of the early fall.

Catholic Woman's Club Meeting.

The Catholic Club of Business and Professional Women held the first of their semi-monthly meetings with a supper program last Tuesday evening.

The tables were attractively decorated and covers were laid for 53 members.

The president, Miss Kate Lyman, presided. Miss Lyman sketched briefly the activities that have been carried on by the club and outlined the program for the coming year.

The members and friends of the Paradox club enjoyed one of the best dances held lately last Thursday evening at Segado's hall.

The Atlanta Masonic Club will give their first of a series of dances at Segado's hall Friday evening, August 6.

The following committee of entertainers will be in charge: Mrs. F. E. Vander Veer, R. W. Evans, R. N. Pickett, Jr., A. M. Fincher, R. M. Stanton, R. H. Elrod, R. H. Atkinson, C. S. Buford, J. D. Booth, W. H. Reardon, Marvin Conway, W. L. Kemp, W. R. Millican.

The leaders entertained the Gleaners at a lovely party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Swygert Tuesday evening. Miss Vinnie Bunn was hostess of the occasion.

The Leaders are a large class of young men, of which Miss Bunn is a member.

These are two of the leading classes of the East Point Southern Methodist Sunday school.

Junior Witches' Club.

The Junior Witches club will entertain their members and friends at a dance Tuesday evening, August 2, at Segado's hall.

League of Women Voters' Luncheon.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters will have as their honor guests at the league luncheon next Tuesday, the senators and representatives to the state legislature from Fulton and DeKalb counties.

This is to be the largest of the series of luncheons held by the league this summer and will be served in the city room of the chamber of commerce at 13:30 o'clock, when a large representation of the public-spirited women of Atlanta are expected to attend.

The object of this occasion is to give the Fulton and DeKalb county legislators an opportunity to come in touch with the league and its work.

The main feature of the luncheon is to be a discussion of the bill before the legislature which have been sponsored by the league.

Mrs. Elliot Cheatham will lead the discussion on the bill for the removal of the legal disabilities of women and the bill for raising the age of consent.

Mrs. Elliot Cheatham will speak on the primary bill and he woman's industrial bill.

Miss Rhoda Kauffman will discuss the children's code and the board of public welfare.

This luncheon comes as a climax to the series of luncheons which have been held by the league each Tuesday, and which have grown in interest and in size, in spite of the uninspiring weather which has made attendance at any midday affair an effort.

Members of the league are urged to make reservations for this luncheon as a large number of guests are expected and those without reservations may not be able to secure places.

The luncheon fee is 75 cents, and reservations may be made with Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, Hemlock 3308-J.

Some of those having already made reservations are: Mesdames Charles Love, J. H. Harris, Frances Whiteside, Glover, W. R. Willis, E. G. Hodgson, F. E. Andrews, Charles Osburn, J. S. McArthur, B. K. Culbertson, W. K. Dennis, W. F. Tremery, A. G. Helmer, Z. V. Peterson and E. K. Van Winkle.

Society Lured By Cool Waters Of Brookhaven

Society assembles each afternoon during the week to swim at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country club, with an interested and large audience seated at the edge of the lake to watch the swimmers. At Brookhaven one afternoon recently, Misses Grace Goldsmith, Catherine Sanders, Allen Carroll, Sarah Schoen, Charlotte Meador, Caroline Silvers, Mrs. Ulric Atkinson, Mrs. Haynes McFadden, Mrs. Esmond Falvey, Mrs. Charles Cornell and Mrs. Struble, were numbered among the most expert swimmers, and there were many others enjoying the water sports. The tea-dances at this club on Saturday afternoons, and the concerts on Sunday, are also proving attractive to the stay-at-homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Alston.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little, of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bonneyman, of Knoxville, Tenn., are in New York and will sail Wednesday on the Adriatic for Europe, landing at Southampton.

MISS PEGRAM TO GIVE LUNCHEON.
Miss Virginia Pegram will be hostess at a luncheon Monday at the Piedmont Driving club, in compliment to Miss Juliet Metcalf, of Memphis, Tenn., the attractive guest of Miss Louise Inman.

MISS DUNBAR TO ARRIVE.
Miss Miriam Dunbar, of Augusta, will arrive Wednesday to visit Miss Katharine Haverly at her home on Peachtree road, and Steve Hartley will be host at an informal dinner at the mid-week dance at East Lake on Wednesday evening in compliment to Miss Dunbar.

On Sunday evening Miss Haverly will give an informal buffet supper at her home in honor of this attractive visitor. Other parties will be announced later for Miss Dunbar.

MISS MENDENHALL TO WED DR. WHITNER.
Cordial interest centers today in the engagement announcement of Miss Mary M. Mendenhall, of Winchester, Ind., and Dr. Thomas C. Whitner, Jr., of Atlanta, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Whitner, of 74 West Fifth street.
The ceremony will take place in the early autumn and will be witnessed only by relatives and closest friends.
Miss Mendenhall is a graduate of Earlham college, attended lectures in the graduate chemical department of Johns Hopkins university, was a teacher of chemistry at Meredith college, Raleigh, N. C., for one year, resigning to accept a similar position on the Earlham college faculty.

Dr. Whitner is a native of Atlanta, a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology, and also of Johns Hopkins university, where he secured his degree, Ph.D., having been elected a member of the Hopkins faculty, and with his bride will make his home in Baltimore.

PIEDMONT DRIVING CLUB.
The Saturday dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club assembled last evening two usual large number of guests who weekly continue to patronize this popular center of recreation.
Dinner was served on the terrace, beginning at 8 o'clock, and baskets of lovely summer flowers adorned each table. The program of dance music was exceptionally fine, affording much pleasure both to dancers and hearers.
The largest party was that of Miss

Dorothy Haverly, who entertained fourteen guests in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Westmoreland and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Willet.
In Mr. and Mrs. Haynes McFadden's party were Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Williamson and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wardlaw.
Mr. and Mrs. Carol Woodford had as their guests Miss Lucy Boyce Taylor and Otis Mitchell.
Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Grant entertained Mr. and Mrs. Junius Oglesby and Mr. and Mrs. Shepard Bryan.
Miss Emily West and John Hill were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Macon.
Mr. and Mrs. Klatt R. Armstrong's guests included Mr. and Mrs. Will Spalding and Howard Hall.
Mr. and Mrs. Strother Fleming had in their party Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. John P. Denton.
A congenial party dining together were Miss Alberta Lewis, Miss Caroline Silvers, Forney Wyly and William McCarty.

With Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bettes was Mr. Julian Lewis.
In Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Nelson's party were Miss Emily Robinson and Howard and Rice Reeves, of Nashville, Tenn.
Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Black, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Black, Jr., Miss Julia Black and Grady Black composed a family dinner party.
Mrs. George T. Dodd entertained a party of five.
Others entertaining were E. M. Harris, who had three guests; J. Russell Compton, in a party of four; Spencer Turnell, who had five guests; Dana C. Belser, who entertained three guests, and many others.
WALKER-McWHORTER ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.
The announcement of the engagement of Miss Louise Walker, of Monroe, to Robert Lagon McWhorter, of Athens, is among the interesting news of the week.

Summer Resort Scepter Passes From the Women

Asheville, N. C., July 30.—Good roads and beautiful weather are making Asheville a kind of lodestone for all of the south. Business depression has no reflection here, because the best antidote for pessimism is right out in the "front yard," the golf course of the Asheville Country club, where the "click" or the "plump" of the little white pellets (according to whether you top them or hit them squarely in the middle) may be heard all day.
Business conferences also bring groups of men to the summer resort that offers physical luxury and a golf course. Executive committees of big organizations, shunning the heat of cities for their conferences, seek the cool of the mountains, and with brains cleared by the invigorating air, and golf as often as it can be squeezed in, they find that they complete their work as expeditiously as in a sweltering city and much more pleasantly.

Publisher's Association.
An executive committee of the Southern Publishers' association brought prominent newspaper men from all over the south to Grove Park Inn for a few days' conference last week. Insurance men here discussed new policies the week be-

Atlanta Miracle City in Growing Values in Realty

Monster Gains Shown in Sale Prices in Development of Tracts.

Evidence of the fact that Atlanta is the miracle city of the south so far as increasing value of real estate is concerned, is given by the coming August issue of The City Builder, magazine of the local chamber of commerce, which reviews the history of Atlanta realty and gives twenty-four concrete illustrations of the monster gain in individual tracts.

Fortunes have been amassed with Atlanta dirt as a foundation, profits that would stagger a Ponce have been made upon sound investments in realty here, and, according to The City Builder, the value of Atlanta tracts are still on the upward trend and offer one of the most sensible fields of business investment.

One of the most striking illustrations given by Henry B. Scott, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, who is author of the article in question, is the phenomenal growth of Ansley park, a residential section, which, during the past decade, has risen in value from the original purchase price of a few hundred dollars to a figure bordering on the million-dollar mark.

Like Fairy Story. The story of the development of this tract reads like a fairy story. In 1847 George W. Collier purchased land, known as land lot No. 105 and containing 20 1/2 acres, for $150. In 1894 Judge John T. Pendleton, as administrator for the Collier estate, sold to Hugh H. Inman, for $300,000, all of this land except two small lots. The property was developed by Edwin W. Ansley, for whom the park was named. Some of the lots sold as high as $250 per front foot, or $31,250 per acre. There is one block in this tract that is worth approximately what Mr. Inman paid for the whole land lot, and upon which are located the homes of five of Atlanta's wealthiest citizens.

Ansley park is only one among numerous such tracts. Sections apparently good for nothing, save perhaps farming purposes or pastures for grazing cattle, have turned out to be the centers of thriving districts, residentially suited for the most fastidious, the total values, enhancing constantly, aggregating millions.

An illustration of the wonderful transformations possible with a proper spirit of enterprise in building activities is manifested in the Druid Hills section. This tract covers approximately 1,750 acres, and is an exclusive residential section. Builders have worked with nature, and home sites were selected according to the contour of the land, regardless of the size of the tract, no two being the same. Every college is located in this subdivision.

Cost of Land. The land cost $700,000, to which the sum of $300,000 has been added in development and is under control of the Adair Trust company. It is said that promoters have already realized $1,500,000 from the sale of small tracts for home purposes and that there still remains about 1,300 acres, which are unsold.

Among the expansions pre-eminently conspicuous in development and value enhancement is North Boulevard park. On August 10, 1914, Henry L. Wilson sold to the Boulevard Park corporation, sixty-four and three-fourths acres for $77,812.50, a tract that had been lying dormant within two and one-half miles of the center of the city, cut off by a creek.

The promoters conceived the idea of connecting with the city by building a bridge, which was done, and the results show that "they built wiser than they knew." The property was subdivided into lots and sold at the rate of $10,000 per acre. About two-thirds of the property has been disposed of, and the remaining one-third is now being developed.

With each succeeding decade, real estate statistics show a marked enhancement of property. Communities have grown from ashes in remarkably short spaces of time; residential sections have sprung from dense growths of woods and coppice; inconceivably short lapses of time; and with a nucleus of 200,000 inhabitants, and with half as many more within speaking distance just across the line, all striving for the same objective, real estate men state that it is fair to assume that the increase in population will be much more rapid in the future than in the past, with a corresponding increase in values, and when Atlanta has doubled or tripled her population there will be a marked increase in values from the center of the city to the frontiers, and while this will necessitate additional property being brought into use to accommodate the influx, the value results will be incalculable.

Anna Pavlova and Reinhold Werrenrath. The appearance of Pavlova and her Russian ballet, and the concert by Werrenrath, the great baritone, will be two interesting features on Atlanta's concert program this season.

SEASON OF 1921-22 OF THE ALL-STAR CONCERT SERIES.

October 27, Sophie Braslau, contralto.

November 7, Frances Alda, soprano, and Gutta Casini, 'cello.

December 7, John McCormack, baritone.

December 19, Reinhold Werrenrath, baritone.

January 11, Sergei Rachmaninoff, pianist.

January 25, Cincinnati Symphony orchestra.

February 1, Anna Pavlova and her Russian ballet.

One series of Auditorium concerts, offering seven of the most attractive programs it was possible to obtain, will be presented this season in Atlanta, it was announced Saturday by Miss Nan Stephens, concert director of the Atlanta Music club, formerly known as the Atlanta Music Study club, and C. L. Salter, head of the Salter Musical Bureau.

The two organizations will co-operate in the conduct and support of the concert series, virtually all of the members of the Music club will hold season boxes or seats, and it is expected the concerts will be as brilliant from a financial standpoint as were those of the "Civic Series," presented in past years under the exclusive auspices of the club.

Two Series Combined. Scarcity of really great artists this season, since their migration to Europe, and the remarkable advance in the fees of those of reputation, led the officers of the Music club to accept the proposal of the Salter Musical Bureau that their interests and influence be combined in an effort to give Atlanta the most important concert series, without rivalry or conflict in dates. This will be directed by Mr. Salter and will continue under the name of the All-Star Concert Series, as for the past three years. The Atlanta Music club will continue, independently, its "Series Intima" at Eggleston hall and its series of morning recitals for its members.

Seven Attractions Announced. The attractions, seven in number, announced for the season follow: Sophie Braslau, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera, and one of the foremost concert artists, October 27.

Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan and a favorite here, several seasons, supported by Gutta Casini, violinist, November 7.

Reinhold Werrenrath, most celebrated of American baritones, December 19.

Sergei Rachmaninoff, Russian composer-pianist, January 11.

Anna Pavlova, most celebrated of Russian dancers, with her ballet of 45 and orchestra of 30 musicians, February 1.

The sale of season seats will open at the Cable Piano company's store on Monday, September 12, and continue through Saturday, September 24, with prices, per seat, as follows: $12, $10, $8, $7.50, $6 and $5, plus the war tax. Boxes for the season may be had at $14 the seat. Handsomely illustrated folders, giving seating diagrams and the program, will be forwarded on request to the Salter Musical Bureau, 1000 Peachtree street, N. E.

Are American cities unlike cities of other nations? Are the forces at work to better the conditions in our cities making any headway? What is to be the place of Christianity in determining the future development of the city?

These and other equally significant questions are discussed in a most interesting manner by Dr. John F. Purser, president of the home mission board of the Southern Baptist convention and executive secretary of the Atlanta Baptist association, in a series of articles to appear in The Christian Index.

There will be three papers in this series. The first article has just appeared. In this article Dr. Purser introduces the reader to the development of cities and prepares the ground for the second paper which is to appear next week, in which he will present the forces now at work in our modern cities, both for good and for evil.

Robinson Invents Sure-Death Fluid and Wants Distributing Device.

Here's your chance. Quit dreaming about how wonderful it would be to own a million dollars and begin figuring on the "comparatively simple" task that will put such a fortune in your grasp.

W. J. T. Robinson, well-known Atlantian, has invented a fluid which he says is sure death to the terrible boll weevil. He figures that if a device is suggested that will make its application an easy and inexpensive item, the fluid will net him around $5,000,000.

Mr. Robinson only wants four of the five million in question. Whoever invents the distributing device will get the remaining million.

Saturday Mr. Robinson brought his secret liquid to the editorial rooms of The Constitution and demonstrated its effectiveness on a score of luckless weevils which he had in a tin cup. When the insects touched the fluid they immediately curled up and began their "last long sleep."

"The weevil," declared Mr. Robinson, "is as good as exterminated if I can get a distributing machine. Whoever invents the machine wins a million. Go to it, boys."

ATLANTA WINS 1922 CONVENTION OF THE GIDEONS

C. W. Hatcher, official delegate of the Atlanta chapter of Gideons, notified the Atlanta convention bureau Saturday that the national Gideon convention will be held in Atlanta in 1922. The session will be for four days, beginning Thursday before the fourth Sunday in July.

Mr. Hatcher recently returned from the national convention held in Sioux City, Iowa, and was assisted in presenting Atlanta's claim by C. T. Bailey, another local delegate. The men stated that it was a hard fight, as there were four strong contestants in the race.

The convention bureau announced that this is the fifth national convention already booked for 1922, and that more are in view.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR WORLD WAR HERO

Funeral services for Edgar C. Smith, world war hero, who died of wounds received in action overseas in November, 1918, were held Saturday afternoon at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Smith, 27 Ashland street, with burial in North View cemetery. Mr. Smith was a member of company C, 31st infantry, at the time of his death. Besides his parents, he is survived by a sister, Miss Mary Lou Smith.

Funeral services for Colonel Robert C. Irwin, of Marietta, for 36 years insurance clerk in the state comptroller general's office, who died of a heart attack, will be held Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Union chapel, near Marietta. The interment will follow in the Marietta cemetery.

Colonel Irwin, who was the son of Judge David Irwin, was 78 years old, and one of the oldest employees of the state. After serving throughout the civil war, he practiced law at Marietta. In 1888 he was appointed insurance clerk by Comptroller General Wright, and remained at that office until his death. Surviving him are his daughter, Mrs. Everett Irwin, of Marietta, and two nieces, Mrs. J. M. Davis and Mrs. M. M. Bank, both of Atlanta.

COLONEL IRWIN WILL BE BURIED THIS AFTERNOON

Funeral services for Colonel Robert C. Irwin, of Marietta, for 36 years insurance clerk in the state comptroller general's office, who died of a heart attack, will be held Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Union chapel, near Marietta. The interment will follow in the Marietta cemetery.

Surviving him are his daughter, Mrs. Everett Irwin, of Marietta, and two nieces, Mrs. J. M. Davis and Mrs. M. M. Bank, both of Atlanta.

The new company will lease to the grocery concern the warehouse and it will be used for the same purposes as now. The main purpose of the L. W. Rogers Realty and Trust company will be to take over the real estate holdings of the L. W. Rogers company, but the charter gives it a right to do a general real estate business and to buy and operate almost any kind of business.

Officers of the company are Harold Rogers, president; Scott Allen and R. J. Hudson, vice presidents; E. R. Padgett, treasurer, and Edgar Craig, secretary.

The case for the company was presented to the securities commission by Attorneys Edgar Craig and Neal Goes. Mr. Padgett also appeared to make any explanations necessary. He will act as fiscal agent in the sale of the stock.

Barber's band will render a fine musical program at Piedmont park Sunday afternoon, 3:30 o'clock. Featuring the program will be Peachtree Blues, written by Mr. Hatcher, a member of the band. The complete program follows:

March, "Washington Grays," Gruffalo. Overture, "William Tell," Rossini. Selection, "Gems of Tchaikowsky," Arr. Clark. Pot-Pourri, "Laurentian Echoes," Laurent. Serenade, "Rococo," Heilmann. Overture, "The Star-Spangled Banner," Galt Barber, director city park music.

"On to Chattanooga" Ceremonial Is Held By Kibla Temple

Kibla Temple, No. 123, Dramatic Order, Knights of Khorassan, on Friday evening held its "On to Chattanooga" ceremonial. A large number of tyros were awaiting a caravan to take them across Khorassan's desert plains to the cooling springs that repose beneath the temple's domain. The master of ceremonies, Captain Lee F. Therrell and W. R. Heston, as well as the degree team and the diva, deserve great credit for the success of this ceremonial.

It is expected that not less than 500 votaries, together with Kibla Temple's drug corps and the degree team, including the diva, will go to Chattanooga on August 7 and there for the entire week attending the session of the imperial palace of the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan.

LYRIC CLOSES DOORS FOR SUMMER MONTHS

The Lyric theater gave its last performance for the summer Saturday night. Manager Marty Semon stated that it will open the first of September, by which time many improvements will have been made in the interior of the house. The Atlanta house enjoyed the distinction of being the last of the S. A. Lynch vaudeville houses to close for the summer season.

Plans are being made to give the theater-goers unusually good performances during the fall season. Many new-to-Atlanta features are being brought here.

Our Anniversary Sale Prices CONTINUED IN OUR BIG August Furniture Sale

We have had so many inquiries from friends and patrons—many of whom were out of the city during our Nineteenth Anniversary Sale—asking if they could still have the advantages of those WONDERFULLY LOW PRICES, that we have decided to put on a BIG AUGUST FURNITURE SALE.

Our Same Low Prices Will Be Continued—Which Means 1-3 Off on Practically Everything in Stock

This is by far the greatest furniture event in years! In spite of the fact that furniture prices were one of the very first to reach bedrock and regardless of our inability to replace much of this furniture at anywhere near such low prices as we are now quoting, we throw our great stock into this sale at a continuation of the big reduction in prices so recently offered.

Hundreds of folks have been saving up money to furnish their homes in a manner in which they can take pride and comfort. They have been awaiting the time when furniture prices would be at the lowest possible point. And now that time is here at this store! In a great many cases we are quoting prices that are much LOWER than you can buy similar merchandise for today at wholesale!

This Is the Greatest Opportunity in Years to Buy Furniture, Rugs, etc. Convenient Credit Terms as Usual!

No matter what you need in the way of quality home furnishings, from a single chair to the most complete home outfit, you can buy it here during this great sale at the lowest prices in years! Not only that, but in order to enable the largest possible number of people to profit by this sale we announce that our usual convenient credit terms can be had on any purchase!

You will find wonderful offerings in this sale! Act quickly, as the choosing is at its very best right now!

August Furniture Sale

$150,000 of Fine Furniture at Prices Approximating Half of Last Year's, and 20% Under the Prevailing 1921 Prices

THIS may or may not be the best of all possible worlds. But it is a better world today than it was a few years ago—than it was last year.

WE base our statement on the fact that the homemaking instinct is once more reasserting itself. A trip about Atlanta, urban and suburban, will reveal that we are rapidly returning to "normalcy"—and that under the inspiring influence of love and woman, the great conservative and balancing forces of life, hundreds of homes are being built. The ring of hammer, drone of saw and tinkle of trowel are everywhere heard.

THE Furniture in the Rich August Sale is the only kind worthy of a moment's consideration for such homes. That is to say, it is good Furniture. If grand old William Morris, the masters Chippendale and Sheraton, were to revisit the earth and glimpse these wonderful displays on the fourth floor, we are sure they would say, "It is well," and return to eternity happy in the thought that the examples they left in honest, craftsmanlike cabinet making, in purity and beauty of design, were not lost!

THIS August Sale has scope, reach and compass. It is big, and it is done in a big way, revealing Rich's at the height and pitch of its performance of its service to the community.

HOW shall we sketch for you its broad outlines as they occur to us? $150,000 worth of good, better and best Furniture to sell for approximately $100,000. Furniture for every conceivable need. The variety is almost bewildering. A startling circumstance is the fact, true in hundreds of cases, that prices are half of last year's, with the constant condition of 20% savings on the lowest 1921 prices!

—Selling begins tomorrow and continues throughout August. Only hints are given here!

Starting Monday at Rich's---the Famous August Linen Sale

—The horizon described by the rim of a dollar has widened. Once more Uncle Sam's unit of money has the dignity and power of ancient days.

—The August Sale of Linens demonstrates it. Since all of that is fact we heartily suspect that the pent-up desire of women for linen and related merchandise is going to break with a fell swoop on this August, 1921, Linen Sale.

—There have been months of preparation, of skillful buying backed by the courage to take enormous quantities. We have scored at every turn.

—Now, this event has always meant much to the women at the helms of house-holds in Atlanta, Georgia and all Dixie. It means more this year than ever. It brings certain and large savings in merchandise of quality and character, and it brings many prize-things, beauty pieces at prices unheard of in recent years.

—For example, the famous "Gold Medal" linens are reduced 40%. Fleur de lis Irish Linens at new low prices—and so on.

—It is broad, it is all inclusive. It begins tomorrow and it continues throughout the month.

—Table Linens. —Rich's Silver Bleach sheets and pillow cases. —Madeira Linens. —Bed Spreads. —Towels for face and bath. —Blankets and Comforts.

—Send for catalogue of the August Sale of Linens.

Final Drastic Reductions on Summer Dresses

—Forgetting their real worth, we have gone through our stock of summer dresses and with an unswerving hand marked them at mere shadows of their former prices. We have them, we must get rid of them. Fall shipments will soon begin to arrive. The clean-up must be made quick—final.

Prominent Columbus Woman Discusses City Federation

Mrs. Charlton E. Battle, of Columbus, is so much to the club woman that she can easily be tempted into talking club even when she is taking a vacation from all her home activities and is enjoying the leisure and beauty of the mountains while at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C. with Judge Battle.

Asked about the City Federation of Women's Clubs of Columbus, which Georgia club women know has one of the best records of achievement of any federation of women in the state, it was easy to see that the question was not an unimportant one to Mrs. Battle.

The subject came up as a result of a reference to a story told at a recent district meeting in Georgia about Sunday movies in Columbus. Because of the proximity of Camp Bessie and the great number of soldiers who come into the city on Sunday afternoons, Mrs. Battle headed a group of club women who sponsored Sunday movies. Incidentally, they made out of them goodly sums for scholarships and charity.

An organized movement soon developed to close the operation of the movies on Sunday and a test case was made. Mrs. Battle, accompanied by Mrs. W. R. Blanchard, now president of the City Federation, went to court to testify for the defendant, Judge Battle, one of the leading lawyers of Columbus, offered his services, but the ladies graciously thanked him and declined.

"I am sure we won't need a lawyer," said Mrs. Battle.

Arrived at the courthouse, the ladies found a brilliant array of the legal talent of the city gathered to lend their aid, as Judge Battle had proffered his. But the ladies decided to leave the matter to the Lord and the jury.

The operator testified and then Mrs. Battle explained the purpose of the movies: to supply needed

Message to Federated Women From Mrs. Robert Berner

Wood, for a long time superintendent of the kindergartens of the public schools. Columbus, you will remember, was the first city in Georgia to incorporate kindergartens as a regular part of the public school system.

"The federation provides an extra public health nurse in addition to those maintained by the city and Red Cross. Ours is especially for baby welfare work. We maintain a free ice and free milk fund as well as baby clinics at the kindergartens in the city schools and the mill districts. The best physicians in Columbus give us their time and science for this work. Among these is a woman, Dr. Moses, who is as well known in Georgia for her philanthropic as for her professional superiority.

"There are seventeen clubs in the federation, these including study clubs, music clubs, parent-teacher clubs and charity organizations, although each federated club does some charity work. The C. T. is also affiliated with us. There are 800 women members of the federation.

"Mrs. W. R. Blanchard is president; Mrs. Mary Tigner, secretary; Mrs. Morris Buhler, treasurer; Mrs. C. C. Hudson and Mrs. William Worley are the head of the child welfare work.

"In the last Near East campaign the City Federation secured the adoption of twenty orphans and sent twenty packages of clothing. The Orphans club of the federation has promoted artist concerts of great value and has provided tickets with a passport to draw attention to the orphans' home, where they are given when the pictures are worth while.

"The reports of every federated club are sent to every committee, and give you proof of substantial work done by all of them.

Mrs. Stevens Makes Report On Tallulah Industrial School

The following is the report made by Mrs. T. C. Stevens, chairman of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school and memorial committee, at the annual meeting of the club, which shows a splendid work along educational lines accomplished by the committee.

Report of Tallulah Falls Industrial School and Memorial Committee.

Atlanta Women's Club.

Mrs. T. C. Stevens, chairman; Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, vice chairman; Mrs. L. C. Matthews, secretary and treasurer.

The committee submits the following report with a degree of satisfaction in its accomplishments for the year.

The outstanding work of the committee is for the support and endowment funds of Tallulah Falls Industrial school and the Celeste Parish memorial scholarship fund. Aside from these the committee has furnished a room at the club to be used as a library, placing there the following furnishings:

Library table, $75.00
Chest, $10.00
Curtains, $12.31
Shades, $10.00
Sander, $25.00

Mrs. and Mrs. Rhodes' Gifts.

Through the interest and sympathy of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rhodes in this work a new industry has been added to the Tallulah Falls Industrial school—that of millinery. Besides a large shipment of braids, hat frames, ornaments, etc., to inaugurate a school of millinery, Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes have given a scholarship in millinery to Miss Eliza Shirley, one of the mountain girls who teaches in the school. They used for this purpose the couple is a scholarship of $100 for the school, $100 for the millinery fund, and $100 for the Celeste Parish efforts of Mrs. Rhodes one complete set of Chambers Encyclopedia, and 142 new and choice books for the adults and children has been added to the school's library.

Auditorium Fund.

Through the efforts of the committee $1,000 has been given in cash and pledges to the club auditorium fund.

Meetings.

The committee has held three business and social meetings during the year and two called meetings. The club members and friends who have been most generous in their contributions to the following worthy causes are:

Cash Donations.

December 30, 1920, received from former treasurer $156.50; paid out by former treasurer 1920-21, $102.31; Mrs. J. R. Otley, $20; Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, $25.00; Mrs. Howard McCall, Sr., $2; Mrs. Irving Thomas, $5; Mrs. William Rawlings, $5; Mrs. Harry Hermance,

Federation Of Clubs Will Legally Adopt Song

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will stand sponsor to legally adopt a Georgia state song, and Mrs. James E. Hays, president of the federation, is very desirous of having the federation endorse a song that can be submitted to the legislature for adoption and that will be known as "The Georgia Song."

Mrs. W. P. Bailey, state chairman of music, announces that a contest for the selection of this song is now open and will be conducted under the following rules:

1. The contest for the composition of a state song is open to any person in Georgia.
2. The words and music may be written by one person or two persons may collaborate.
3. The words of the song should be typically suggestive of the natural beauties peculiar to the state.
4. The song should consist of three verses (8 lines) of two verses (8 lines) and chorus.
5. Five competent judges from different parts of the state will select the best three songs from those submitted.
6. Four copies of the completed song must be sent to Mrs. W. P. Bailey, 212 West Hall street, Savannah, Ga.
7. These songs will be sung by a selected chorus at the state convention which will be held in November at Savannah, Ga., and will be voted on by the delegates assembled in convention.

It is hoped that a great many will take advantage of this interesting opportunity to make history and compose a state song that will live forever and bring lasting fame to some loyal daughter or son.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN BEAUTY LAND

The Inside Story of the Beauties of the American Stage

Pretty Face and Good Figure Not Enough to Make a First-Class

Chorus Beauty—How Five Thousand Pretty Aspirants are Sifted Down to Sixty Super-Beauties—The American Woman Will Ruin Her Complexion if the "Rouge and Kalamine Craze" Keeps Up—The Ideal Chorus Beauty of Today, as Described by a Beauty Expert of Twenty-five Years' Experience in Theatrical Production.

Editor's Note: Where the American chorus beauties come from was the subject of Mr. Ziegfeld's first article in this fascinating series which began in last Sunday's Constitution. Illustrating his narrative with hitherto unpublished stories of famous stage beauties, the acknowledged leader of experts on American beauty compared the various cities of the land for their beauty crop yield, and revealed the astonishing fact that nearly half of American chorus girls come direct from the home to the stage without previous employment of any kind. Mr. Ziegfeld also told of the dramatic discoveries of certain beauties in public walks of life, and of their meteoric rises from obscurity to the bewildering limelight of national popularity.

"The chorus beauty," he asserts, "has been grossly misrepresented for many years. It is my purpose to reveal the truth about her. If my story punctures a number of popular illusions about her life, habits and workaday conduct, I can only hope that the American public—always fair and just when it really knows—will be glad to hear the facts from one behind the scenes who is in a position to speak."

Selecting the Super-Beauty

ARTICLE II.

You are sitting at a table watching while a line of five thousand girls goes passing slowly by.

Not this many miscellaneous girls, scooped up haphazard from any crowded street, but five thousand young and pretty girls—all chic, piquant, radiant, some of them astonishingly beautiful.

There are all sorts of types before you: blondes, brunettes, and Titian-haired maidens with dancing eyes. As they pass, you see "southerner" plainly written on the personalities of some. Others swing easily by with that lithesome carriage that so often betokens a rearing in the free and open places of the west. From every state they have come.

They are virtually the cream of the Irish beauty of the whole United States, these 5,000 girls before you. And it is your job to select from this large, distracting field of loveliness, a chorus of sixty super-beauties who will charm the nation individually and collectively.

"What is the recipe for a chorus beauty, anyway?" somebody asks.

"That is simple," says the man on the street, "a pretty face and a good figure."

And that is exactly where he is wrong, for this question of beauty is, a very complex one—and mere prettiness and symmetry of figure are far less essential to the successful aspirant to the beauty chorus than most people imagine.

I have been actively interested in the production of musical comedies and revues for over twenty years, the last being my greatest successes, "Sally" and the Follies of 1921. In that time I suppose I have watched more than fifty thousand candidates for beauty choruses pass in gay parade before the inspection table. And out of my experience I have gleaned what might be termed an effective preliminary test for beauty.

Flo's Beauty Test.

1. The eyes. They must be large in size and soulful in expression. In color they should be blue, brown or black, for gray eyes that have fire and animation are the exceptions rather than the rule.

2. The nose. It should be straight and shapely and in proportion to the rest of the face.

3. The teeth. They should be regular and pearly in whiteness.

4. The hair—so often referred to as the crowning glory of womanhood—should be thick and lustrous. Moreover, it should be natural in color. It is true that occasionally a girl with artificially dyed hair is accepted for a beauty chorus, but for my part I dislike any attempts to improve on nature.

5. Feet and ankles. Both should be small and trim. Broken arches and flat feet are almost irreparable bars to true beauty.

6. A buoyant carriage of a well-proportioned figure. It is possible for a beautiful woman to weigh as much as 150 pounds so long as the weight is evenly distributed and does not interfere with graceful walking and dancing.

These things, roughly speaking, may be said to constitute beauty. I should say that they were essential. A girl might not have these characteristics and yet have wonderful charm, even brilliant and attractive power on the stage. But if we are to call a girl beautiful, in the ordinary sense of beauty, she must have these six things at least.

The Short Upper Lip.

"Isn't it true," a man from St. Louis asked me, "that a short upper lip is essential to true beauty in a woman? Wouldn't you add that to a preliminary test of good looks?"

"No," I answered, "although I confess it is a mistake which a person might easily make."

It does seem plausible, because when you reflect, you realize that probably three-quarters of the beautiful girls who have won beauty choruses distinction during the last few years have had this feature.

Mary Hay, the little 19-year-old El Paso, Texas, beauty, has it. She is small, slender and has blonde hair and brown eyes. Dolores, of "Sally," an English girl of entirely different type, has it, too. The latter is almost six feet tall, has blonde hair, gray eyes and an altogether regal personality, contrasting with the piquant, diminutive grace of Mary Hay. You will also find it evident in those excellent types of natural blonde beauty, Irene Marcellus and Gladys Bowie, whose pictures are shown on this page.

Here, for example, are two girls from different sections of the country—Miss Marcellus, from Boston, where she had been employed as a stenographer and was supporting her widowed mother, and Miss Bowie, from New York city, where she had been a telephone operator up to the time of seeking her fortune in the beauty chorus. Both have regular features, glorious blonde hair, good teeth, etc. The soul of Miss Bowie's beauty lies in the shades and depths of slumberous brown eyes. In the pensive blue eyes of Miss Marcellus the careful observer will find artistic temperament indicated by the white of the eye showing beneath the pupil. And both have the short upper lip.

The black-eyed brunette beauty, as represented by Miss Lillian Woods, of Cincinnati. According to Ziegfeld, the salient beauty characteristics of this type are the snapping black eyes with long lashes and the perfectly formed mouth.

The brown-eyed blonde type, represented by Miss Gladys Bowie, of New York. She was a telephone operator until achieving success in the Ziegfeld beauty chorus. Remarkable regularity of features and an abundance of glorious golden hair are her most striking characteristics.

The pensive, blue-eyed blonde type, represented by Irene Marcellus, formerly a Boston stenographer and now a chorus beauty. The white of the eye showing beneath the pupil indicates artistic temperament.

Altogether different types of beauty, you will admit. It might seem to indicate the essential importance of the short upper lip, but it does not. A girl can be stunningly beautiful without this feature, as for instance, Miss Barbara Dean, of Cincinnati—a young lady of classic beauty whose proper proportion of features would mark her as one woman in fifty thousand in any country of the world. Her facial beauty does not depend upon an upper lip shorter than the average. This cannot be entered upon the list, therefore, as an absolute essential to be classed with the six points I have just mentioned.

A Second Test.

Not every girl in the five thousand on inspection who meets this preliminary test, however, would be selected for any famous beauty chorus. There is a second test, numbering nine questions which you must ask yourself about each applicant who has passed the preliminary one.

IS SHE TRULY BEAUTIFUL, OR HAVE YOU BEEN MISLED BY HER EXUBERANT YOUTH AND GLOWING HEALTH?

One evening, just as I was about to go home, a young girl came into my office to apply for a position in a beauty chorus. She evidently had come straight from the train and was somewhat bewildered by the rush and turmoil of New York. It was easy to see that she was from the country. Her eyes were clear as crystal, she had a marvellous complexion, unspotted by powder, and the roses in her cheeks were not artificial.

In spite of her dusty, travel-worn clothing, she appeared to be in that wholesome state of health and exuberance which the public so admires. As she stood there, she seemed much more radiant than she actually was. I was so impressed with her that I thought I had discovered a new beauty, and I asked her to report the following noon for a try-out in the company of other girls.

It proved to be a wise step. Next day, surrounded by other girls of varying types, the country maiden turned out to be merely healthy looking. She was pretty, perhaps, but she was not a real beauty.

IS SHE INTELLIGENT?

I was talking with one of my directors once about this.

"Now what shall we do about Molly Bye?" he said, referring to a raving young beauty who had been retained up until the final out of a squad of several hundred.

"I'm afraid she hasn't any brains," I replied, "but she has real beauty."

"Take my advice," he said, "and drop her. I've made desperate efforts to teach her how to think on the stage, but she seems to be thought-proof. There's one principle I always follow:

"Never give a girl a job in the beauty chorus if she hasn't intelligence."

And that just about sums it up. Of course, there are exceptions.

We sometimes make a place for a girl without brains if she is just so lovely in face and form that you can't pass her by. But we never give such a girl an important part in the activities of the chorus.

This popular notion that the chorus beauty is a light-headed, giddy young thing who merely displays herself is wrong. To be an attractive chorus beauty is a complex job. Beyond a certain point of good looks, intelligence weighs far heavier in the deciding balance than physical beauty.

Illustrating Point 9 of Ziegfeld's Beauty Requirements. Perhaps one of the most striking exponents of "personality" on the stage today is Dorothy MacKail, a New York chorus beauty. Note the magnetism and charm of her unstudied pose.

DOES SHE WALK WELL?

In testing out girls it has been my invariable habit first to eliminate those whose facial beauty does not meet requirements; next to discard those too slender or too stout; third, to make them walk across the stage to music. A very simple test, but one that eliminates a great many real beauties who have not that very essential thing called graceful bearing in action.

CAN SHE DANCE TO MUSIC?

By this I do not mean that each girl is expected to be a highly trained, expert dancer. That training—a wonderfully interesting process in itself—is given to her after she is elected to the final squad. But she must have the dancing instinct. She must naturally take to expressing her beauty in graceful and rhythmical movements.

CAN SHE WEAR BEAUTIFUL FROCKS LIKE A GENTLEWOMAN?

Of course, ninety-nine out of a hundred American girls think they can, and I am bound to admit that our American women are the best dressed, generally speaking, in the world. I think that it is the opportunity to wear beautiful clothes that attracts so many pretty girls to the American stage. Fine feathers usually do help to make fine birds, even when the subjects are beautiful to begin with.

Most girls in a well-costumed show are prettier on the stage than off. But it is only one in fifty that can really wear marvellous gowns as if "to the manor born." Freedom from self-consciousness is the determining factor here.

There is no better example of the "show" girl than the queenly Dolores, whose presence and general personality display to astonishing advantage the most beautiful stately creations of the modiste's art. I have seen this girl come upon the stage from the rear at the moment in the performance when principals occupied the center of attention—and in a trice the eyes and thought of the whole house have switched and become riveted upon the stately figure of the beauty of the chorus as she swept forward, regal in a gorgeous gown and train.

"Heavens! how that girl can wear clothes," you hear on all sides—from men as well as women, for while the "show" girl and her beautiful frocks and costumes make their strongest appeal to the feminine part of the audience, it is vividly apparent even to the average man.

"Can she wear beautiful clothes?" is, therefore, an important question, but at that it is not so important as the next point in the final test.

Someone asked me the other day if the wholesome type of girl was liked on the stage, meaning by that the girl who looks genuine, sincere, natural or "nice." Yes, she is. Of course, she must be pretty, too. But if she is pretty and nice, she will arouse plenty of admiration.

GIRLS, DON'T BE VAMPIRES.

A great many girls come into the offices of theatrical managers in the United States and make the absurd mistake of trying to imitate the vampire type, which is supposed to have been so popular. Most of these girls are not vampires by nature, any more than a kitten is a hyena. But for some reason or other a very large number do try to be "vamps." My advice to them is to forget it. The vampire is not a popular household pet. The girl with bounding health, and a wholesome, youthful appearance, with not enough real beauty, however, to get into the super-beauty chorus, would do better to rely on her natural charms and not attempt the suicide of imitation.

IS THE CONTESTANT FOR BEAUTY HONORS NATURALLY COMELY TO A DEGREE THAT SHE CAN DISPENSE WITH COSMETICS?

Ninety-five percent of the girls of America seem to believe that paint and powder are an infallible aid to beauty, and it seems to me that this excessive use of cosmetics is likely to ruin the complexions of American women if it is not checked. As for exaggerated make-up which we see on the streets nowadays, it is positively repulsive. There is no doubt but that women all over the country—in the theater and out of it—have been going through a period of "kalamine craze" which has reached the limits of sanity. It has been so extreme that there is bound to be a reaction—and I, for one, will be glad to welcome it.

So, while it is true that the blinding glare of the footlights and calcium demands a certain amount of stage make-up to prevent a beautiful girl from looking ghastly on the stage, it is not true that the girl should rely on it for her beauty. She never can and get into the super-beauty chorus.

DOES SHE STAND AS STRAIGHT AS A LANCE?

I knew a girl who came all the way from the Pacific coast to New York to try for a position as a stage beauty and failed only because she did not have a free and erect carriage. She was beautiful when seated in a chair, but unfortunately there is no demand for passive beauties on the stage. She did not stand well. This was a strange case, too, for the girls from the west usually have had outdoor life and athletic training to develop a graceful bearing.

The Butterfly Girls.

CAN SHE MAKE EXOTIC STAGE COSTUMES SEEM A NATURAL AND LOVELY ADORNMENT?

Self-possession! That is what is required in the wearing of ordinary pretty clothes and besides it—imagination.

For instance, in my latest production, "Sally," I paid out thousands of dollars for beautiful butterfly costumes—artistically painted and bejeweled.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD'S NINE POINTS FOR SUPER-BEAUTY.

- 1—Is she really beautiful, or are her good looks merely youth and health?
- 2—Is she naturally comely to a degree that she can dispense with cosmetics?
- 3—Does she stand as straight as a lance?
- 4—Does she walk well?
- 5—Can she dance to music as though a part of the melody?
- 6—Can she wear beautiful frocks like a gentlewoman?
- 7—Is she intelligent?
- 8—Can she make exotic stage costumes seem a natural and lovely adornment?
- 9—Has she personality?

DIMENSIONS OF THE AVERAGE CHORUS BEAUTY.

Compiled by a noted New York theatrical costumer, who has fitted over 14,000 chorus girls in the last eighteen years.

Height—5 feet 4 inches.
Weight—130 pounds.
Bust—34 inches.
Hips—36 inches.
Thigh—23 inches.
Calf—13½ inches.
Ankle—7½ inches.
Foot—Size 4.

"WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY"

Scenes from "Without Benefit of Clergy," Kipling's famous story as presented on the screen by Pathe. Virginia Brown Faire, beauty contest winner, makes a charming Ameera. Thomas Holding a convincing John Holden, and Nigel de Brulier as Pir Khan, and Evelyn Selbie as Ameera's mother are also excellent in their roles.

Kipling's Famous Story Makes Striking Photoplay

"Without Benefit of Clergy," Kipling's immortal love epic of east and west, and perhaps the most popular of all his short stories, has been made into a photoplay by Pathe, with excellent results, for all the dramatic interest of the story has been retained, and in addition the setting is given with such attention to details that the picture is a graphic representation of life in India.

Virginia Brown Faire, beauty contest winner and an artist of great talent, takes the role of the Indian childwife in a most sympathetic way, and Thomas Holding, an Englishman himself, who has lived in India, is excellent as "John Holden," the English engineer.

In the street scenes of the production-tourists are seen riding in Victorias and phaetons, while the native still clings to his rude ox-cart with its clumsy wooden wheels. In striking contrast to the modern sign of the apothecary shop in the east of the Hindu dwelling, the "God of the Threshold," which appears over the door of the Hindu dwelling.

World travelers who saw the settings erected for the production declared them marvelously accurate, and Hindus and Mohammedans from the Oriental quarter of Los Angeles who worked as natives in the picture sent many photographs of the sets to the friends in India as evidence of the faithfulness with which the environment of Lahore has been reproduced.

Kipling wrote the scenario for the picture, and after he had viewed the film wrote the following letter to the producer:

"Bateman's, Burwash, England, May 6, 1921.—Dear Mr. Randolph Lewis: I am just back from Algeria and France, to find the photographs of the film waiting for me. They are superb, and more correct in impression of detail than I could have imagined. The street and courtyard scenes are especially good, and I am very much amused to see how you managed to get the native cart—the ekkā—in the foreground. I have, as you know, no experience in these matters, but it seems to me that it must be the most carefully-worked film that has ever been staged.

"As to the characters, I find them extremely good. Pir Khan is, as far as make-up and pose goes, quite perfect. I am glad to see the baby wears the little gold cap. The study of Ameera against the night that is to cover her is a really splendid one.

"I wish that you were here that you might have heard all that was said about the film, but, since that cannot be, I want you to give every one concerned in the work, which has been done, my very best and heartiest thanks. Very sincerely,

(Signed)

"ARE YOU MARRIED?" GRAND HEADLINER

Cato S. Keith and Company Have Comedy of Many Surprises.

Atlanta theatergoers will find a varied and interesting array of vaudeville and fine feature pictures booked for the opening engagement of the week at Loew's Grand.

The bill includes five acts of Loew vaudeville, while the film program is headed by one of the most notable productions of the year.

Cato S. Keith and company, an able organization of players, are one of the prominent attractions on the vaudeville side of the entertainment.

They will enact their famous novelty playlet, "Are You Married?" a comedy episode crammed with laughs and surprises.

An interesting musical number will be found in the act of "The Street Urchin," a vagabond troubadour who sings and plays the violin.

Fletcher and Terre, in another laugh hit, "You Know Bill," will speed up the show materially.

Strawbridge and Clothier, in a novelty number, and Richard H. Macy and company, in "La Maison Rouge," will complete the vaudeville program.

A splendid adaptation of Harry Leon Wilson's brilliant novel and play, "The Spenders," enacted by an all-star cast, including Niles Welch, Joseph Dowling, Claire Adams and Robert McKim, leads the film menu.

Sennett's "Home Talent" Starring Ben Turpin Is Rialto Attraction

Mack Sennett's latest and greatest multiple-reel comedy for Assorted Producers, "Home Talent," will be shown at the Rialto theater this week. Many who have viewed this much-talked-of comedy spectacle in which the genius of the best productions that has emanated from the Sennett studios.

The episode in which the genius of Abbe, as a "still" photographer converted to "the movies," is revealed, relates to a story of the slave mart of ancient Rome, and in this is shown the ensemble and individual beauty of the Mack Sennett feminine corps of pulchritude.

This part of the picture, it is claimed, will be a revelation to picture patrons as well as to picture experts.

Phyllis Haver appropriately, has the leading feminine role and is supported, in the beauty contest, principally by Harriet Hammond, Mildred June and Kathryn McGuire.

"THE GREAT MOMENT" AT HOWARD THEATER

Gloria Swanson Plays Lead, Ablly Supported by Milton Sills.

Gloria Swanson, star of the American stage and screen, will be seen at the Howard theater all this week in her first Paramount star picture, "The Great Moment," which was written by Mrs. Elmer Glyn.

The famous author of "Three Weeks, One Hour" and many other soul-stirring stories. This picture presents Miss Swanson in her very best style and contains all the thrills that even a lover of melodrama could ask.

Monte Katterjohn, who has a record of achievements in the adaptation of feature stories to the screen, is responsible for the picture version.

Sam Wood, assistant for years of Cecil B. De Mille and who has since directed Wallace Reid in some of the biggest Paramount pictures, is the director.

The leading man is Milton Sills and the many admirers of this screen star do not need any further comment. The entire cast is of great strength and ability.

The story begins at a Russian orgy in St. Petersburg, when Sir Edward Pelham, an English aristocrat, meets Nada, a gypsy, and marries her. Nada dies and passes out of the story, but in her place comes Nadine played by Gloria Swanson.

Nadine is a girl of infinite beauty, of wonderful charm and of loveliness beyond compare. She at once becomes the hope and despair of every man of marriageable age in London.

Nadine meets an American of immense wealth, but loving romance, she fails to care for him, and despite her father's pleadings, will not do more than be civil to him.

Pelham finds reasons to visit America, and with his daughter and the millionaire makes a trip to the North American continent.

In Nevada Nadine meets Bayard Delaval, a mining engineer. Love comes at first sight, but while Bayard is about to ask her to become his wife a rattlesnake bites her. In order to save her life he carries her to a secret retreat, and to counteract the poison sucks it from the wound, and then piles her with liquor. Then he is surprised that she, the story's heroine, the Mack Sennett feminine corps of pulchritude.

In Vaudeville

Adelaide Allen, at Loew's Grand theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mary Thurman in "A Broken Doll" Forsyth Feature

Allan Dwan's newest comedy-drama, "A Broken Doll," which comes to the Forsyth theater on Monday is replete with thrills and attractive bits of excitement.

The action takes place in one night and particularly beautiful night effects of a rain-storm carry out the mood of the story.

The story concerns a chap who sets out to buy a new doll for a little girl whose toy he has lost. He is mistaken for an ex-convict and finds himself in all sorts of difficulties, but as one trouble piles on top of another, his only thought and desire is to get a new doll. It is full of charm and droolery and contains no end of fun.

Romance, excitement, pathos and humor are some of the ingredients which Allan Dwan has mixed in his most skillful manner. Some of the thrills show the hero throwing a wild steer just as it charges down upon a tiny child; a leap from a cliff onto a horse and rider who are passing below, and a dash off of a bridge by a horse and its rider.

The story is such a clean, refreshing and amusing type that it will please all ages and send them away with a smile. It is likely to send them away with eyes which have been washed with tears, too.

Monte Blue and Mary Thurman take the leading parts.

A Burton Holmes Travelogue and News Weekly will also be shown.

T. Roy Barnes will be Ethel Clayton's leading man in her forthcoming Paramount picture, "Exit the Vamp."

Ann Forrest's last work as a Famous Players-Lasky luminary was for "The Great Impersonation," featuring James Kirkwood.

Jack Gilbert, Fox star, is to be featured in a Clarence Buddington Kelland story, "Hidden Springs."

Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna" is to be the first picture shown at the Shakspeare Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon.

David Warfield will film "The Music Master" and "The Return of Peter Grimm" at the Metro studios in Hollywood, Cal.

KIPLING'S INDIA ON METROPOLITAN SCREEN

"Without Benefit of Clergy" Depicts Charm of the Writer's Style.

No longer is the land of Rudyard Kipling—the luring "somewhere east of Suez"—found in the printed page alone. No longer is the wondrous charm of Rudyard Kipling's India an indefinite conception of words. No longer is the ewing, the spirit of the great poet measured by meter and rhyme.

For, in the picturization of "Without Benefit of Clergy," Rudyard Kipling has put his spirit upon the screen. As a gorgeous sunset eludes the colors of the greatest painter, so the lure of Kipling's India would elude the craftsmanship of the greatest directors had not Rudyard Kipling himself written the scenario and given to it the touch of genius which is his alone.

Thus, in the accurate screen interpretation of his own story, Kipling is doubly immortalized. "Without Benefit of Clergy" was produced by Robert Brunton and directed by James Young, under the supervision for Mr. Kipling of Randolph Lewis.

The picture comes to the Metropolitan theater tomorrow for an engagement that has aroused the interest of many Kipling readers, and many who find in worthy pictures the most wholesome entertainment to be had.

"Without Benefit of Clergy" is the screen's first pure lyric. It is a poem of love, interpreted with tenderness. A lovely young girl, Virginia Faire, has the role of America, the Hindu girl, and Thomas Holding plays the part of Holden, the British engineer. They are ideally suited for the roles.

The announcement of the engagement of "Without Benefit of Clergy" has created interest, and it is certain that the engagement will be one of significance.

Two interesting short subjects will complete the program—the usual Kinograms news weekly and one of the Kineto Reviews, entitled "Combating the elements."

Dave Love has revived Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill" for the overture, and a member of the Metropolitan orchestra, "Tim Merrill," will play a cornet solo, "The Rosary."

Marshall Neilan is figuring on filming Booth Tarkington's great kid story, "Penrod."

"Shots" From Peak Of Mt. Whitney for Paramount Picture

"Shots" from the top of Mount Whitney, highest peak in America. Titles wireless from miles out at sea.

These have been two interesting features in connection with the making of Cecil B. de Mille's new Paramount picture, "Fool's Paradise," to follow "The Affairs of Anatol."

Alvin Wyckoff, head cinematographer for Mr. de Mille, was the hero of the first exploit. Nearly a week was occupied in climbing the almost 14,000-foot mountain—and on arrival forty feet of film comprised the picture making activities!

But that majestic 40-foot vista will show in a certain vision scenic beauties never before placed in a dramatic motion picture.

"I thought of these between sword-fish strikes," he said in his airgram, "and decided not to wait until I returned."

Both instances are especially interesting in that they exhibit to an unusual degree the extent to which natural and scientific resources are utilized in the making of a modern motion picture.

"I am thy woman, and thou art my man"—

In its power to exalt the heart, "Without Benefit of Clergy" is matchless.

In its ability to purify the feelings "Without Benefit of Clergy" is supreme.

In its gift to endow your personality with a new soul thrill, "Without Benefit of Clergy" is unequalled.

In its mystery, color, atmosphere, acting, direction and presentation with music, "Without Benefit of Clergy" stands like the Venus de Milo, far above and beyond the masterpieces in the world's gallery of lofty accomplishment.

It is Kipling made doubly immortal.

Star Dust—The story of an American girl. The writings of Fannie Hurst in one form or another have become familiar to all readers—and that Fannie Hurst can write what people read has been an undisputed fact for years. She has the power of filling even one paragraph with both laughter and tears, and she has also the power of leaving away the veil, thick or thin, and displaying the public mind to a truly human that there are thrills and thrills as the knowledge becomes clearer and clearer.

Fannie Hurst can write and she dares to make with a fearless pen standing statements of the undercurrent of life's pathway, whether it be the East side or the West side. "Star Dust" is Fannie Hurst's first novel, and though novel writing has become very popular in the past few years, by short story writers, the question is being asked, "Why did she write 'Star Dust' at this time?"

It is the story of a young girl who was ambitious to become famous and she preferred to be a queen of song. She craved the love and the admiration of the world, and she was willing to sacrifice every happiness if she could only be the leading star of some great opera company. Lily Becker was the only child of good western parents on whom they lavished all their love and money. She was not an ordinary child, and as the years brought her nearer young womanhood her dream of fame increased its hold on her, and though her parents gave her no encouragement, she still hugged closely to her heart the thought that some day she would be a great singer, that she would have a career beyond that of any girl of her home town, etc.

Why she married Albert Penny is a question that even she could not answer without it was the destiny of girls at that time to marry and settle down to a humdrum existence. Just a month after the marriage Lily and her husband were in a desperate and fled to New York, though leaving no message behind that she had gone to this great metropolis—the city of dreams come true. How few young artists but think as they stand on deck and watch the Goddess of Liberty as she beckons to them that the torch in her hand is their individual inspiration predicting fame.

Lily finally had an opportunity to sing before the great Americans, who very slowly pronounced her voice "verry nice," and it was when she knew that her house of dreams was nothing more than a mirage, and other attempts to become famous in the world of song she began to transfer all her ambition and aspirations to Zoe, whose name meant life. It was then that the young mother who was standing alone in life's highway began to fully experience the real meaning of life, not until Zoe has reached young girlhood and she was knocking at the gate of the autumn glow.

And to the future of her young daughter, around whom she throws every tender, loving thought, she sacrifices her dream of life, of love, she pledges her all to the happiness of Zoe, and she is a great singer some day.

Did Lily win through? Did she reach the success, the triumphs for which she worked? Was her life one of failure and sorrow? Her life in the creation of Lily Becker, whose life was spent entirely in the shadows, though she had the sun in her work of endowing her heroine with a human capacity for making all the thorns and passing the roses on so that another might enjoy their fragrance.

The question is still being asked why did Fannie Hurst write "Star Dust" (Harper Brothers, New York).

THE PASSING OF THE FLAPPER. Fannie Hurst in a recent interview anticipates the passing of the flapper and also the passing of women will soon become adjusted to their new freedom.

This is an interesting article and those who feel that the much discussed flapper is soon to be a thing of the past, will be interested in what Fannie Hurst says.

"The girl of tomorrow will regard the flapper as we regard the mid-Victorian era of silk and lace and awnings."

The conversation had turned to Fannie Hurst's latest novel, "Star Dust," and then, as if by force of gravity, to the flapper.

In the eyes of the flapper, Lily Becker is a high conservative," said Miss Hurst, "just as the flapper of today, who stands on the brink, as it were, of the new era, is a high conservative, will be the old-fashioned girl of tomorrow."

The interest of the flapper is the result of her being the girl between the millions. There is just enough of the old generation and enough of the new to make her a person of interest to all.

"It is not entirely a case of off with the old and on with the new, but a sort of compromise between the two."

The creator of Lily Becker explained the flapper, the various emancipations, such as suffrage, industrial revolution, and education, woman has been elevated from chattel to individual.

"Lily Becker," she said, "is the standard bearer for the first generation which can emerge from the chrysalis of womanhood and freedom."

"The flapper condition of today is not a maladjustment. It is the inevitable result of the life of years of suppression and repression."

"The flapper is merely a new vehicle. She suddenly finds herself a possession of her own liberties that she sometimes turns into license, merely because her various emancipations have pushed her head, turning it. The flapper will soon get her bearings and she will be a new person on new conditions, after she once accepts them, her new status will become a matter of course and not of newspaper headlines."

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA. History of the University of Virginia—1819-1919—"Lengthened shadow of one man," the late Alexander Bruce, author of many historical books, has spared neither time nor pains in the development of this history which covers 100 years of its existence, and which is a true history of the University of Virginia.

First, as an annual, with an inflexible fidelity to the flow of events from year to year.

The conversation had turned to Fannie Hurst's latest novel, "Star Dust," and then, as if by force of gravity, to the flapper.

In the eyes of the flapper, Lily Becker is a high conservative," said Miss Hurst, "just as the flapper of today, who stands on the brink, as it were, of the new era, is a high conservative, will be the old-fashioned girl of tomorrow."

The interest of the flapper is the result of her being the girl between the millions. There is just enough of the old generation and enough of the new to make her a person of interest to all.

"It is not entirely a case of off with the old and on with the new, but a sort of compromise between the two."

The creator of Lily Becker explained the flapper, the various emancipations, such as suffrage, industrial revolution, and education, woman has been elevated from chattel to individual.

"Lily Becker," she said, "is the standard bearer for the first generation which can emerge from the chrysalis of womanhood and freedom."

"The flapper condition of today is not a maladjustment. It is the inevitable result of the life of years of suppression and repression."

"The flapper is merely a new vehicle. She suddenly finds herself a possession of her own liberties that she sometimes turns into license, merely because her various emancipations have pushed her head, turning it. The flapper will soon get her bearings and she will be a new person on new conditions, after she once accepts them, her new status will become a matter of course and not of newspaper headlines."

The Gleaming Linens in Exquisite Order on the Shelves of the Cedar Room

"MY LIFE"

As Told By MARY PICKFORD
To HAYDEN TALBOT

Mary refused a million dollars for a year's work—proving she was a good business woman.

And here's something else for you to know! Miss Pickford seldom stays up later than 9 o'clock. But before she retires she makes everyone else comfortable for the night, for she is, as one of her workers expressed it—a true "mother-woman."

Hayden Talbot, to whom Miss Pickford narrated her life story, sums up the little characteristics that go to make up her charm as a woman and her super-success as a movie star.

Once upon a time the very energetic, self-confident representative of one of the most important film companies in America told me that in New York that he was positive he could induce Mary Pickford to sign a long-term contract and make pictures for his concern.

At that time, it was about three years ago, Miss Pickford was just finishing her contract with Famous Players—and as a box office attraction had established herself at the very top of the heap. To get her signature to such a contract would be in itself a certainty of tremendous profits.

Wherefore the film magnate dispatched his representative across the continent.

For three months the very energetic, resourceful gentleman tried his best to arrange an interview with Miss Pickford in vain. Meanwhile his expense account was giving his chief in New York no little concern. It might be added, parenthetically, that when it comes to the fine art of divorcing visitors from their available cash, Monte Carlo runs a bad second to Los Angeles.

Finally telegraphic advice reached the employee that if he did not produce results within 24 hours he could consider his 90-day vacation permanent—without salary therefor.

Thus stimulated, the would-be signature producer managed to obtain Miss Pickford's consent to receive him. At the meeting which took place that evening at the Pickford home were present, besides the two principals, Doug Fairbanks and an old friend of Mary's, Mr. Fairbanks.

Mary Refuses Million. After the usual preliminary fencing the representative of the big film concern finally made his maximum offer—$1,000,000 for 60 weeks of Miss Pickford's services.

And Miss Pickford refused! Incidentally, she refused it because Fairbanks advised her to do so.

And the film concern's representative found himself out of a small child or the largest grown-up.

Farm Animals. There are twelve acres in the grounds, and it is interesting to note that the road winding up to the house takes the form of a heart. There is a truck farm, stables, kennels and garage. All of the animals, as well as the automobiles, are used in both the Pickford and Fairbanks' productions.

CONSTITUTION'S PRIZE CONTEST FOR SNAP-SHOTS BRINGS INSTANTANEOUS RESPONSE FROM KODAKERS

$1,000 in Prizes Proves Tempting to Amateur Photographers Over the Entire Southeast. Atlanta Dealers Coaching Amateurs.

Following the announcement last Sunday of the details of The Constitution's $1,000 Snap-Shot contest, in which 115 kodaks and cameras will be given for snapshot pictures taken by amateurs, the contest editor has been flooded with entries for the competition.

Early Sunday afternoon the pictures began to come in, and it has been one endless stream since. Many of those entered have prize-winning possibilities, but there are enough prizes to encourage other kodakers everywhere to enter the contest.

The local firms whose ads appear on this page are co-operating with The Constitution in every way. All of them have been busy this week coaching and advising amateurs in the use of their cameras. This free instruction will prove of value to all amateurs, and is being appreciated by the thousands who have availed themselves of the opportunity this week. Every kodaker may enter as many prints in the contest as desired, and are urged to avail themselves of this opportunity.

RULES OF CONTEST ADMIT ALL KINDS OF "SNAP-SHOTS"

Broadest Possible Field From Which Amateur Photographers May Select Their Subjects.

CHILDREN TO HAVE EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

Simple Rules, and the Factors to Be Considered by Judges Give Children Equal Chance.

Contest is open to all amateur photographers, except Constitution employees. Each contestant may enter as many pictures as desired. Two prints or enlargements of each picture must be submitted. To the back of one (only) of each pair of duplicate prints, must be attached "entry blank" properly filled in. (This entry blank is reproduced on this page each week for your convenience.)

All pictures submitted must be mailed postpaid to "Snap-Shot Contest Editor of The Atlanta Constitution."

Contest closes at midnight, October 15. Winners will be announced and prizes awarded as soon thereafter as possible.

Some of the best pictures submitted will be published in The Constitution's Sunday Magazine Section during the contest. (Duplicate prints are required so that one may be published and one reserved for the criticism of the judges.)

Kind of Pictures Wanted.

Amateur photographs, taken anywhere on the globe, at any time since July 1, 1921, and eligible to enter the contest. What is wanted most is interest—pictures that will interest our readers enough to warrant our publishing them. Atlanta kodakers, who take their kodaks with them on their vacations, motor parties, picnics, and outings will have a splendid opportunity to snap pictures that will interest a large number of persons, and will stand a splendid chance to win one of the coveted high prizes.

Interest is the first requirement necessary to win. No factor could be broader. It permits the free use of the imagination in posing and snapping the pictures to be submitted.

In general, any picture that interests its owner will interest others. Unposed pictures of children probably have a greater appeal than any other class of amateur pictures and are easily secured.

Pictures of animals, natural scenery, and points of historical interest also have splendid prize-winning possibilities.

Pictures of picnics and outings also have a universal appeal, for all the world enjoys an outing, and is interested in the outings had by others when properly photographed. There is no end to the pictures within the easy reach of every kodaker that will win the high prizes.

No great technical skill or knowledge is necessary to win the prizes. The school children with inexpensive cameras have an equal chance with others, for professionals are barred from the contest.

Contestants are urged to bear in mind that it does not require a high-priced camera to produce pictures which are desired except where light, speed, distance, is unfavorable. The owner of the small box camera, when conditions are favorable, has an equal chance with

The Cone Drug Stores.

The Cone chain of drug stores has a national reputation for their originality and the very particular attention they give to their customers in the point of personal service.

Their large business has been developed along the line of supplying the trade well-known advertised products without suggestion or persuasion to change a customer from what they had in mind when they entered a Cone store.

Naturally these stores were selected by the Eastman Kodak Co. to become one of their distributors.

The Cone stores sell exclusively photographic goods made by Eastman—a guarantee to the child or adult of always obtaining the Eastman fresh fast Yellow label film, so essential in producing the best negatives.

Slogans.

The slogan originated by the Cone Stores "A Good Drug Store" has been widely copied both in the drug and other lines. Coupled with the above is the service slogan, "satisfaction in every transaction," which means all it implies.

Out-of-Town Kodakers.

A postal card request will bring samples, price list and many helps to encourage the amateur. The Cone stores inaugurated the practice of returning all mail orders postpaid.

Visitors are invited when in Atlanta to call at any of Cone's three central stores, located at 61 Peachtree street, 60 Whitehall street and Pryor and Decatur streets, and visit their Kodak department. If not convenient and exact particulars of their safe, quick mail order plan is wanted, a postal card request will bring full details together with a sample print.

Kodak Department.

The Cone stores are thoroughly departmentalized. Experts are in charge and particularly in this true of the Kodak business, which requires men and women of artistic as well as practical training.

Velox Paper Prints.

Velox paper is the highest photographic type of paper and is used by the Cone Laboratories, which in part accounts for the popularity of the prints produced by them.

Their prints preserve all of the soft, gray contrast tones of the original negative when made on an Eastman film, and it is such prints that have an artistic value, best secured by the selection of Velox paper, carefully printed on a grade of this paper to best bring out the details of the negative.

Contest Service.

Many times a small print has possibilities if slightly enlarged. Experts at the counter and in the laboratory will advise with constant whether or not in their judgment it has prize-winning possibilities.

TAX VALUATION SHOWS DROP IN HALL COUNTY

Gainesville, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—The tax receiver reports, just completed, show that tax valuation in Hall county has slumped $197,533 as compared with last year. The total valuation of taxable property is $10,240,254 as against $10,437,787 for last year.

BODY OF EUGENE BALES BURIED IN GAINESVILLE

Gainesville, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—The body of Eugene Bales, who died in France from a wound received in battle in 1918, has reached here, and was buried yesterday afternoon with military honors. He entered the service as a member of the Cavalier Horse Guards, afterward Troop F, and was the first Hall county boy to make the supreme sacrifice.

Bank of North America was the name of the first bank of a national character incorporated in this country. It had a charter for ten years from 1781, from the confederation, but doubt as to its legality led the bank to seek and obtain a charter from the state of Pennsylvania in 1789. In 1785 this latter charter was revoked, but in 1787 it was renewed. It was located at Philadelphia.

Masons to Raise $102,000 For Hospital Endowment

PIEDMONT SANITARIUM.

Material addition to the existent humanitarian projects in Atlanta will have been made when the Blue Lodge Masons of the city have raised the $102,000 endowment fund with which they propose to make the financial basis of illness and misfortune easier for some at Piedmont sanitarium to be known thenceforth as Piedmont Masonic Sanitarium.

The campaign is already under way. Bayne Gibson, prominent Atlanta well-known in fraternal order circles, is chairman of the movement and expressed confidence that all Masons of the city will join in this movement to better the condition of the town's unfortunate. It is also significant that the large endowment of the Masons will begin operation at the same time the increased facilities of the local sanitarium are ready for occupation and use. The handsome annex to the capital avenue institution is already ready to receive patients and it is predicted that it will be ready for opening January 1.

The present capacity of the hospital is approximately 75 beds. The increased facilities will give the accommodations that the capacity will run from 125 to 135 beds. The new plan, however, does not make Piedmont sanitarium a charitable institution. Patients who are able to pay will still be accommodated, and the endowment fund will only provide quarters, medical attention and food for those whose earnings do not allow them the sometimes expensive privilege of expert care and attention during their days of illness. The staff of physicians at the institution has agreed to give the services free to the patients who come in under the provisions of the Masonic fund. The only expense which will obtain from the endowment are for food, medicine and such necessities as arise during the patient's occupancy. The approaching expansion of the hospital will offer an opportunity for high school graduates who wish to become graduate nurses. Something like 60 student nurses will be able to find training in the school there after January 1. The standards of training and the high quality of the staff at Piedmont sanitarium has always made it a desirable place for the three-year training which is required of graduate nurses by the state board. A strict examination is given applicants to take advantage of this high school education and high mental and physical qualities.

Wants Girls to Apply.
Miss Miriam Hipple, superintendent of nurses at Piedmont, is anxious that all girls of the state who wish to take advantage of this training opportunity communicate with her at the earliest possible moment, so that the procedure of application, classification and acceptance may be completed before the actual expansion of the institution takes effect.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

The Atlanta Urban league is co-operating with junior chamber of commerce in its "No Accident Week" August 7-12. Secretary Campbell has arranged with Secretary Robinson of the chamber of commerce to hold a series of meetings during the safety first campaign, to distribute literature and interest the people generally in this movement. Dr. Plato Durham will be the principal speaker at the Butler Street Y. M. C. A. meeting this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Secretary Trent is urging a large attendance upon this meeting. This special invitation is being extended to the women of the city to hear Dr. Durham.

The Auburn avenue branch of the Carnegie library was opened Monday under most pleasing conditions. Hundreds of colored citizens inspected the building and expressed themselves as pleased with the library appointments. On Tuesday, a stream of children appeared at the library to secure books. Librarian Carey is guiding the children in the proper selection of their reading matter.

The Atlanta Urban league and Cashier W. J. Sh. of the Atlanta State Savings bank, are urging parents to have their children at Ashby street school Monday for the purpose of paying their Christmas savings account regularly during the vacation. This request comes to the students of Ashby Street, Mitchell Street and Roach Street schools.

Executive Secretary S. S. Abrams, of the Atlanta Negro Business league, reports increased donations from white and colored citizens toward the entertainment fund of the National Negro Business league, which meets here in Atlanta, August 17, 18. Additional funds, however, will be needed to guarantee the proper care of the delegates and visitors from Secretary Abrams is urging that contributions be made toward this fund from time to time. In this connection, he is in position to entertain delegates during the convention. Phone 174 2615.

A summer camp, sponsored by the Atlanta Urban league, is being planned for poor negro boys and girls. The camp, which is to take place within a radius of fifteen miles of Atlanta, will be conducted from August 21 to August 29. To finance the outing are being solicited.

themselves to apply and extend the principles of the health crusade movement. Secretary Campbell, of the Urban league, has been invited to address the Crusaders, August 12.

The Atlanta Urban league is seeking to interest city hall authorities in repairing Auburn avenue, between Butler and Hilliard streets, before the meeting of the National Negro Business league. This section of Auburn avenue is very much in need of repairs.

During the past week the 34th anniversary of Dr. P. James Bryant, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist church, has been celebrated with services each night. This afternoon a great platform meeting and home coming addresses will feature the close of these anniversary services.

The Atlanta Urban league's public health department, under the direction of registered nurse, Willie D. Lee, continues its work of administering to the sick and creating a splendid sentiment in favor of preventive medicine. This department of the league's work is being supported by a number of insurance companies, churches and fraternal organizations. Services of an additional nurse are much needed at this time.

Recreation Provided.
Tennis courts and basketball court are among the recreations offered the student nurses who come to the Piedmont sanitarium under the expanded plan. It is planned to give them every possible diversion and pleasure to repay them for the long hours of study and practical application which even the layman knows to be the lot of a girl who is studying to become a trained nurse.

The Scottish Rite Home for Crippled Children is a Masonic institution which is known the world over. And in the Piedmont Masonic Sanitarium the Masons will give Atlanta another institution where deserving adults of meager means may be treated for their ills.

Just now the Masons are concentrating on an intensive educational campaign preparatory to the actual raising of the $102,000 fund. Mr. Gibson is confident that the proposition will find favor among all members of the order and that the fund will be raised without great difficulty.

Give Masons Interest.
The endowment fund will give the Masons an interest in the hospital, which is now owned by prominent Atlanta physicians. The institution will operate for the convenience of the charity patients on the interest and proceeds of the Masonic investment. Something like 5,000 Masons in the city, it is estimated, will raise the desired funds willingly and without trouble.

W. G. Hastings, past master of the Gate City lodge, outlined the plan of operation recently at a gathering of the Blue Lodge Masons, telling of the work Dr. Michael Hoke has done in this direction. Mr. Hastings also pointed out the fact that there is no free hospital in the city which is non-denominational, except, of course, Grady hospital.

By endowing this institution with $10,000 we insure free hospital training for the people of Atlanta for 5,000 years, Mr. Hastings pointed out. "Dr. Hoke has seen the opportunity to turn his institution into a great benevolent hospital through the help of Atlanta Masons, and he has given us the opportunity."

"Our Masonic club has on various occasions been in danger of serious failure because we have done nothing besides trying to have a good time. It is up to us to do something for Atlanta that will make Masons appreciated as a benevolent organization."

"If Americans can raise half a million dollars to see a prize fight surely they can raise $100,000 to insure relief from suffering of the poor sick."

During the past week the Atlanta

Urban league has succeeded through the board of health, in improving insanitary conditions, reported at the league's office. Prompt attention was given each complaint filed with the board of health.

The many friends, white and colored, of Dr. E. R. Carter, venerable pastor of Friendship Baptist church, will be pleased to learn of the great oration which he received at the famous Baptist college, Manchester, England. A clipping from an English newspaper chronicles the magnificent address delivered before the college and the outspoken demonstration of approval, which Dr. Carter received at its close. Dr. Carter will be sailing from England August 6 and will reach America in time to fill his pulpit third Sunday in August.

"Deep River," Professor B. T. Harvey's latest pageant, will be rendered at the Auditorium-Armory, August 23. "Deep River" is up to the standard of "Choosing the Better Part," written by Professor Harvey and rendered so satisfactorily at the Auditorium-Armory a few years since. Professor Harvey announces that the receipts from "Deep River" will be given to worthy charitable organizations here in the city.

That the public is still in a highly receptive mood regarding lower prices, no matter what the article may be that is affected in the lowering process, and that they respond immediately to the price inducement is especially true in the case of those products that are being well advertised and that have a national reputation which has been built on advertising.

Well advertised products have a standing in court. Not only their merit—and merit they have, invariably, or they could not have stood the test of competition and the discriminating judgment of the consuming public—but their price is established in the public mind. The result is that when a price reduction comes with such products, the buying public knows that the lower price means more for the money. And that means increased sales in every instance.

A case in point is the recent reduction in price of the two leading products of the Anheuser-Busch people—Budweiser and Bevo. Only a week ago the reduction was announced by the A. J. Long Distributing company, local distributors for Anheuser-Busch products. Budweiser went down from 20 to 15 cents and Bevo from 15 to 10 cents a bottle in the city of Atlanta. Of course, at the lower price the profit is necessarily less per case, but the statement made Saturday by L. F. Long, manager of the A. J. Long concern, regarding the effect on sales of the price reduction was that the increased volume of sales had more than offset the loss to his company.

Considering the element of service that enters so largely into the distributing business in these lines, the heavy cost of this any sudden increase must be handled in order not to cause dissatisfaction with customers, this experience resolves itself into a subject that might well be studied by merchants in many other lines of trade.

The advantage of the well advertised article is unquestioned. This fact was proved time and again during the period of climbing prices. When a well-known brand or product was advanced in price the public accepted the raise in the best of faith. The unknown brand was always under suspicion.

It may be of interest to advertising men and merchants, as well as the public, to know that the reduction in the Anheuser-Busch products mentioned above resulted in an increase in sales of over two hundred per cent during the past week.

—all 32 inches wide, smooth and sturdy, fast colors, too. Beautiful plaid effects and all the popular checks in all sizes and colors 39c

An Opportune Value for Vacationists

Fibre Silk Sweaters

$5.75

IF YOU HAVE LONGED for a smart little silk sweater—the very apple of the eye of Fashion—and found the price beyond you, now is your opportunity! For, who ever imagined a silk-fibre sweater, of good heavy tricolette at that, for as low a sum as $5.75—such sweaters being at the very height of the mode?

Ordinarily they would cost far more at the mill, but we were lucky enough to secure part of a manufacturer's samples and floor stock at a very low figure, and this is the result.

They are all Tuxedo styles that only need a white skirt to make a delightful costume. The colors are navy, black, Copen, honeydew and tomato.

See them in our window, but please don't ask us to send them C. O. D., or to fill mail orders, for we have just about enough to supply those who come for them Monday.

THE COUNCIL ELECTION.

With the municipal primary election only thirty days distant it is time for the voters of Atlanta to begin lining up the candidates and separating the sheep from the goats.

No community is entitled to better representation in council or in any other law-making or administrative body than it demands, and if the people of Atlanta demand the right kind of representation in council they can get it.

If the forthcoming election leaves the city in the hands of political opportunists, the people will have nobody to blame but themselves.

Unless the law-respecting, public-spirited, right-thinking people of Atlanta bestir themselves now to ascertain the character and personal attitude and affiliations of the various candidates, and then take a determined and aggressive part in the election, they will have neither reason nor right to expect anything better in the way of civic conditions in the future than they have received in the past.

Those conditions, as asserted by three consecutive Fulton county grand juries and by council's own special investigating committee, have been such that professional gamblers and bunco operators maintained for a long time a stranglehold upon the police administration of the city by reason either of incompetence, or of conviction, or as was the case in some instances, of both!

In the forthcoming election the people of Atlanta should be vigilant and let no man slip into the canvas.

They should see to it that every man who gets in enters in broad daylight and through the front door!

Between now and election day every candidate should be called upon to STAND UP AND SHOW HIS COLORS.

It is gratifying to note the interest the women and other good citizens of the various wards are manifesting to this end.

All they have to do to insure the sort of government they want is to give every candidate to understand that he must come out into the open and state point-blank whether or not, if elected, he will countenance a continuation of the conditions that have been condemned by three consecutive grand juries, and PROVEN by an investigation by a committee of council to have existed for three years.

Every candidate should be asked to flatly state his position, without equivocation, without dodging, without evading the issue.

The women of Atlanta have the power to determine the character of administration that shall govern this city during the next year; and to the extent to which they use that power will depend very largely the protection of the city from the shameful conditions that have recently existed in Atlanta.

next few years. If your winter coal is in, now is the time to lay in your diamond supply.

TIME TO START OVER.

Recently the governor of Michigan refused to honor the requisition of Georgia for a negro wanted in this state for murder, and arrested in Michigan, until he could be satisfied that the prisoner would be given a fair trial and not subjected to lynch law when returned to the scene of the alleged crime.

The Michigan executive declared that he had reason to suspect a conspiracy in this state to lynch the negro, and that not until he was satisfied that such was not the case would he consent to turn the prisoner over to the Georgia authorities.

Commenting editorially upon this incident The Detroit Free Press said:

"It is not a pleasant thing for one state in the union to manifest a doubt whether another state is fit to have custody of its own citizens when they are charged with crime.
It was not a pleasant thing for Governor Groesbeck to refuse the request of the governor of Georgia because of that suspicion. But neither this state nor its governor can be accused of violating those principles of civility which guide the states in their intercourse when Georgia's lynching record is remembered. The true cause of Georgia's humiliation in this affair arises from the failure of the state to restrain those of its own people who keep the state constantly at the head of the list when the statistics of lynching are published."

Just so long as Georgia continues to head the list of states in lynching it may expect from time to time to be subjected to this sort of humiliation—often unjust, if, as no doubt, it was in this instance.

It is only natural for people at a distance to judge the character of a state by its record; and so long as Georgia's record for lynching is such as it is, its standing in the outside world will suffer accordingly, whether justly so or not.

It is time to turn over the leaf on that record, and to start over.

COTTON POSSIBILITIES.

That the south, has nothing to fear from the future, that the cotton slump is only temporary, and that all this section needs to do is to hold on to its courage, "wake up" and create new and additional demands for their staple "money crop," is the encouraging opinion expressed by Roger W. Babson, world-famous business diagnosti-cian, in a recent issue of a weekly "Barometer Letter" to merchants, bankers and investors.

In a signed discussion of "The Farmers' Future and Business," Mr. Babson calls attention to the fact that—
"When wheat sold at $3 a bushel,
I said it would sell at $1.50 in 1921.
Although I was fiercely criticized for this forecast, it has already sold down to $1.15 and is destined for still lower figures before 1921 is over."

Then he goes on to make a prediction as to the future demand for cotton and other crops produced in the south, and to counsel the business men and farmers of this section in a way that ought to be helpful.

"The world is short of manufactured cotton goods," he says, and—
"As soon as the south wakes up and creates—through education and advertising methods—new uses for cotton, it will be in demand again.
Cotton has great latent possibilities—these opportunities. These same comments could be made relative to certain other agricultural products."

The truth is that the south is at the threshold of its possibilities.
Science, investigation, experimentation, the application of technical skill, are constantly finding new uses for the staple, and it is undoubtedly true that the future will reveal many more uses for cotton than those now known.

As the possibilities of this wonderful product become more and more fully realized, the demand will increase proportionately; and as the demand increases prices will follow suit and the inflow of wealth to the cotton-producing districts will be bound to keep pace automatically.

To facilitate this process of development is one of the cardinal purposes of the Georgia School of Technology!
Babson's argument, applied locally, is the most convincing argument in behalf of Tech that could be written!

And, says Babson, speaking of the "great latent possibilities" of cotton, "these same comments could be made relative to certain other agricultural products," which is as forceful argument in behalf of the State College of Agriculture as what he says of cotton development is in behalf of Tech.

And yet, instead of increasing the appropriations for the support of those two worthy and invaluable institutions, the state legislature is considering a policy of still further starving them!

There is no state in the union that stands more in need of development, or in which there is more room for development "through education and advertising!"
And all that the legislature, the business men and the general public of Georgia can do to further those two paramount development factors—by supporting our public educational institutions and by sustaining and co-operating with our organized instrumentalities for the systematic advertising of our resources and "latent possibilities"—will be in the nature of a distinct service to Georgia such as will hasten the coming of an unprecedented era of state-wide prosperity.

THE ST. SIMONS ROAD.

There is something magnificent in the undertaking of the city of Brunswick to make direct causeway and bridge connection with St. Simons Island, the story of which is presented in a full-page illustrated article in the magazine section of this issue of The Constitution.

The undertaking is a big one, it is true; and yet, if anybody had said five years ago that Brunswick and Darien, by co-operative effort, would acquire the railroad bridge across the Altamaha delta and made a splendid highway of that six-mile stretch, providing direct highway communication between Brunswick and Savannah, it would have been declared to be an impossible task.

But the business men of Brunswick and the business men of Darien, with characteristic enterprise, got back of the movement and put it over.

The highway is now complete and the success of the effort is an example before the whole state as visible proof of what vision and enterprise and determination will do!

The St. Simons causeway and bridge project is just as feasible.

That it will be completed in due time there can be no doubt.

This will bring the great St.
Simons ocean beach, and the wonderfully fertile land resources of the island, within direct vehicular reach, not only of Brunswick, but of the entire state which will watch with interest the completion of the undertaking.

St. Simons Island is one of the most historic spots in Georgia and the southeast.

Upon it is located the ruins of Georgia's first capital, Frederica, and upon it also was fought the historic battle of Bloody Marsh, which, by the triumph of the British troops under the masterful generalship of Oglethorpe and against tremendous odds, made Georgia a British instead of a Spanish province.

Had General Oglethorpe lost that battle the dividing line between the Spanish and the British possessions on the Atlantic coast would have been the Savannah river, instead of the St. Marys, beyond which the Spaniards retired when Oglethorpe established his dominion over all of the territory between those rivers.

Here, on St. Simons Island, the great Wesleys, John and Charles, pioneered the way in the establishment of Methodism in America.

So, from every viewpoint—historical, sentimental and practical—this great project to bridge St.
Simons to the mainland abundantly merits the attention it is receiving, not only from the state of Georgia, but from the country at large.

With Brunswick and Glynn county concentrating their efforts upon this enterprise, aided as they are being, by the state highway department, its completion is a foregone conclusion.

TOOK THE CITY ALONG.

When President Harding, Thomas Edison and Henry Ford went to the wilderness of the Blue Ridge mountains recently for a restful week-end, they made one big mistake: They took the city with them!

They were pictured as camping in the open—"near to Nature's heart," but one looked in vain to see the smoke of a campfire curling to the clear mountain sky, and no empty cans, pans, kettles and coffee pots were in evidence. There was little outside of the scenery, to indicate that they had gone to the country for "a change."

There were cooks from the city;
refrigerators packed with fine
"city eating;" electric lights to read by and city servants at their beck and call.

And imagine the amazement of the birds, singing all around them, at the competition of the players who had along!

It would have been more in keeping with the surroundings if an old-time Virginia darkey had "picked" a banjo for them, or a mountain fiddler had emerged from the shadows and reeled off rollicking old tunes—such as "Old Dan Tucker," "Nelly Gray," "Shortnin' Bread" and "Going to the Huckleberry Picnic!"

The testimony of the president was that he had "a great old time," and we'll have to let it go at that. He wasn't annoyed by the office-seeking bunch, anyway, and the mountain winds were fine for cooling off purposes.

But there's but one way to thoroughly enjoy a day or two in the country.

plain, old-fashioned country, and that is to do as the country does.
That's the way "Teddy" Roosevelt did on every away-from-home trip; and all the wild freedom and joy of it were his.

No doubt President Harding himself would have more enjoyed the simpler outing—old-time tales told by the flickering light of a campfire; water dipped from a mountain spring, with an ample gourd; camp-cooking in the friendly frying pan, and the amateur cook letting the coffee "boil over!"

But—fancy city-dressed eatables, Japanese chefs, electric lights and piano players plus the picture of a week-end in the woods where everything is as heartily simple as the good Lord made it.

It won't do to take the city with you there!

FADED GLORY.

In King Alfonso's declaration of Burgos the other day that "Spain is not imperialistic" there is a distinct note of pathos.

Back of that statement—which would have been more precisely true had the Spanish king used the phrase "no longer" in place of
"not"—is a long and sad story, illustrating the truth in the Gibbonian deduction that "empires rise, empires flourish, empires decay."

It is a story of pomp, splendor, ambition, imperial power, injustice, tyranny, intolerance, oppression;
of persecution, of human suffering and death.

It is a sad story of imperialism;
failure—the failure of an empire that was for many years the greatest political power in the world.

The contrast between the Spain of today and the Spain of the early part of the sixteenth century has been likened to that which might be supplied were Great Britain to lose all of her territorial possessions outside of her own native isles.

Spain may not be now imperialistic, but if so the change in her purpose has taken place within the last few years. And it was brought about more, perhaps, by circumstances which Spain could not control rather than by any change in the Spanish heart, for not until Spain had been defeated on the high seas and on the battlefield by practically every other political power of any consequence on the face of the earth did she recede from her traditional policy of imperialism and conquest.

As a matter of fact, to her victories of almost constant warfare and to the wide geographical scope of her aggressiveness, the decline of her power is attributable more than to the strength of her adversaries. For generation after generation she selected her best blood for slaughter in sanguinary imperialistic campaigns in all quarters of the globe.

The ultimate consequence was inevitable: Physical losses and depletion of energy from which recovery was impossible!

Thus, just as Spain's boldness and military splendor and glory was never exceeded, her imperialism proved suicidal.

There is a lesson in Spain's history that might have been read with value by Germany prior to the summer of 1914; and the fact that "Spain is not Imperialistic" now stands as a beacon light that might well be serviceable to all the world today.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

The right kind of philosophers, who make the best of rain and shine and glimpse something of good in everything, are few and far removed. They seldom come in groups.

But communities are fortunate that can boast even a scattered few of them, for their attitude of making the best of things puts heart and hope in others, as evidenced by the following editorial note in the Moultrie (Ga.) Observer:

"The rains have been coming a little fast. The farmer is getting behind and the boll weevil is getting ahead. It may be for the best, however. The rains will make a good hay crop, help along the potato crop, hurry along the peanuts and velvet beans, save the summer vegetables, prevent farmers from pulling fodder, which many think should be prevented, and will make grass grow for the hogs, cattle and sheep. Cotton will suffer, but even cotton may profit by the rains in the long run. It would be a ruinous loss if the water were to stop today. A small crop of cotton will give a chance to market that which was brought out from last year, and will also enable the farmer to get out of his crop made this year."

That's a far better view to take of a rainy day situation than the reverse of railing at seemingly unfavorable conditions and "out-thundering thunder," as someone puts it, over what can't be helped.

It is making the best of what ever comes that keeps this old world going right and gets it safely over the rough places.

And more of that kind of philosophy is needed in the country today.

Rumors of a western "bootleggers' benefit society." Won't be long before they'll be bold enough to ask police protection!

The World-Lover

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I'm a-settin' here a-thinkin' of the up-bound train;
Preacher's been to see me—prayin' hard to ease my pain;
Talked of 'Over Yonder,' an' the golden streets, an' all.
An' how it's hunky-dory if you're ready for the call.

But I say—I say:
'Tis my tribulation day,
An' I'm in no fix to travel
When I'm hurtin' thisaway!
An' this world where we're a-livin'
Is a fine place to stay!"

"Since you have to go," he tells me, "if you've read yer titles clear
To the sweet fields of Eden—O you'll rest up over there!
You'll never know no sighin', an' yer pain'll pass away,
An' here, jes' all you're leavin' is yer tribulation day."

"That's the place, for which we pray
From dawn to dym' day!"
But I tell him: "I ain't doublin'
That it's all jes' as you say,
But this world where we're a-livin'
Is a fine place to stay!"

O we constant wince an' worry—we're makin' of our moans
When we're old an' gray an' tired an' the misery's in our bones;
When the friends we loved have left us for to bear the bitter load
An' the Dark is all around us, an' we're lonely on the road.

But still—still I say:
'Tis it's winter or It's May,
The darkest storm that's strikin'
Has a sort of rainbow-ray,
An' this world of tribulation

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, July 30.—A slim young fellow with a boyish expression, a Nordic blond, eyes of blue and eyes of the dreamer. And he is the most impractical sort of dreamer.
Dresses rather Broadway-wise and most of the time goes around hatless.

Readers, meet Earl Carroll! Perhaps you know he used to write songs. And then you heard he wrote plays. "So long, Letty!"
"Canary Cottage" were his. Last year he wrote and produced "The Love Lady" at the New Theatre.
And he also wrote broke.

Last December he couldn't buy a Stumpy breakfast. Child's. It is true he had his starling bungalow, a beautiful home atop skyscraper Broadway, and 4th street.
But he was as free of money as "Tommy Rags," the Broadway wit, inexhaustibly it, as a flea in a crutch.

Carroll, dreaming youth! Broadway pitted him and in its usual style discarded him with the rest of the failures. A good fellow when he had it! And all of the old humor.
They patted him on the back when he turned to new ideas to improve them.

A year ago—that is all, Earl Carroll was smiling and still dreaming, from the ashes of failure with one of his new plays, "The Love Lady." It is to be the Earl Carroll theater, located on Seventh avenue and 4th street—just a block from the starling bungalow, in whose gardens the dreamer lived.

In this theater Carroll will produce his own plays. He isn't with the theater trust or syndicate or whatever they call them.
He doesn't care. If one of the syn-dicates would accept him, he would say: "Young fellow, you're going to lose your shirt."
"I'm a damn fool!" And go on his dreamy way. He is just 30.

Notes About Georgia Law

Compiled for Constitution

Bills and notes and chattel mortgages are the subject of bills introduced in the Georgia legislature. The Constitution provides that Johns & Johnson, attorneys of Rome,
Ga. The notes follow:

Bills and Notes.
One who has given a check can not, in the absence of fraud or mistake, countermand payment of same without incurring liability to payee under a note in full thereof. 17
Ga. App. 48.

Ordinarily, there can be no recovery on a note in the absence of a written instrument, though an amount appears in figures on the margin.
18 Ga. App. 13.

A promissory note under seal is prima facie to be supported by consideration. 12 Ga. App. 67.

Where a note is made by a maker and administrator, to plead want of consideration, the maker must show a negotiable note, executed by maker without consideration, and that the parties to the note were payable to indorse it to third person as collateral for a debt, and that the maker was without assistance from maker, is a mere accommodation paper. 23 Ga. App. 417.

One who can read much and show a legal excuse for not doing so when he signs a note alleged to be fraudulently represented to be an application to purchase, and fraud which will relieve a party who can read must be fraud preventing him from reading. 20 Ga. App. 123.

Where several sign a note reading, "We, or either of us, promise to pay," etc. it is a promise jointly and severally, and the holder may sue any one of the parties without suing the others. 18 Ga. App. 123.

A note reciting that it is given under hand and seal of each party and that the parties are corporations, followed by the word "Free," is a note of corporation, and not joint note of corporation and president individually. 18 Ga. App. 123.

When a note is payable on a day certain at a bank, the maker has until the expiration of banking hours to pay it. 18 Ga. App. 558.

Where joint principals on a note sign a general note in full thereof, without any additional consideration, they were joint principals on the renewal note in the absence of any agreement that one should be principal and the other surety. 14
Ga. App. 22.

A note which on its face is subject to the terms of a contract between the maker and the payee is not a negotiable instrument. 20 Ga.
App. 560.

That note is overdue does not destroy its negotiability. 21 Ga. App.
560.

Under Civil Code 1916, section 4273, a note payable to a named person is negotiable only by his indorsement.
20 Ga. App. 123.

Resurrected From the 1871 Files of

The Simplicity Of Suicide.

We learn that a negro, who is known as a bad man, committed suicide, when he went into the business house of Mr. T. M. Speer at McDonough in Henry county and provoked him until he had to shoot.
The wounds proved fatal.

A Civil Engineer And Then Some.

Col. B. W. Woodruff, a civil engineer of established reputation and long connected with the department of public works in this state, has purchased a neat cottage residence at McDonough in Henry county and moved there. We welcome the Colonel into our midst and congratulate him upon his good taste in selecting a home upon a street so popular and handsome as Mc-Donough.

Cruel Constabulary Curbs Cupid.

Yesterday evening an incident happened in this city, demonstrating not only that the course of true love does not run smooth but that there's a nip and a twist in the cup and the lip. A young lover had made an engagement to take his beloved to a dance at the Casino after exhausting the tonalities of society and dust of out streets, but his company perhaps more so than his love, had been refused.

He arrived at her residence, made a flying leap from the buggy, threwing the reins to a little boy he hit, and immediately proceeded to the parlor to catch one glimpse of those eyes whose brilliancy has charmed a score of admirers. With high hopes swelling in his breast, he starts with his lady love to the dance. A crowd of negroes, who and buggy are gone and a policeman stands ready to say "Go along with me." It's time you and I were gone." O heartless policeman, didst thou know that those who never have love's young dream Couldst thou thus, so ruthlessly tear

the brimming beaker from his lips and dash his bright hopes to the ground?

Nature certainly intended Major Dale Orme for big purposes. While he rivals Daniel Lambert or the Fat Boy in obesity, he is as active and

GENERAL TRADE—Atlanta—Known Nationally as the Center of the Wholesale Millinery Industry of the South

Atlanta's "Place in the Sun" In the Millinery World

ATLANTA'S phenomenal growth in the wholesale millinery industry during the past few years has placed her in the position of being the only market in this line in the south—and one of the half dozen great markets of the entire country.

Geographically, Atlanta is ideally situated as a distributing center. Ample railroad facilities, with trunk lines radiating to all sections of the southern states. Millinery goods shipped by express tonight will reach their destination tomorrow morning.

The law of comparison has been a most important factor in the upbuilding of our market. Merchandise carried by Atlanta wholesale houses is especially adapted for southern trade. New ideas are shown as fast as they are originated.

The old idea that buyers just must go to New York, Chicago or some other far-away market has been exploded. The southern buyer realizes today that the selections to be found in Atlanta houses compare most favorably with the best shown in other markets.

There is a vast difference in the manner in which individuals view present conditions and the view of the individual usually has the effect of impressing the listener with the idea that the man who is doing the talking is expressing the general opinion of the community in which he lives and moves and has his being.

Recently while in a large northern city I was seriously impressed with the opinions of those with whom I talked—in so far as these opinions seemed to reflect conditions in the millinery business in their city and territory. Incidentally, the city referred to is steadily losing its wholesale millinery business to Atlanta.

How is business? I would ask. Then with their best soap-box attitude they would give me an extensive and expansive and interminable tale of woe regarding the rottenness of things in general.

Can't you get tired of all this gloom the pessimistic bad news carriers are continually dishing out to the public at large, every time they get a chance? Most of these men have never had a business and never will as long as they keep up this most disagreeable jargon.

In striking contrast with this I met a man yesterday who was effervescent in his energy and evident good humor. Satisfied and gazing up at the silver lining that he saw peeping through the rift in the cloud.

Ten minutes in this man's company was a real tonic to me. I asked him why all his enthusiasm? He attributed his good feeling to a culmination of the past season's work, stating that his firm had made a fair return on their volume of business for the past six months, collections had picked up and customers were all over the south.

He was in the wholesale millinery business in Atlanta, Ga. Hard times are not here, just easy times have gone.

The Atlanta spirit aroused all my interest and the wholesaler of other markets who have lost their nerve will some day wake up to find that the few customers they once had in the south now belong to Atlanta.

Why Atlanta Is Great Center of Millinery Trade

Both Manufacturers and Wholesalers Have Built With the Atlanta Spirit.

BY JOHN T. CLARK, Secretary American Hat Manufacturing Company.

With the exception of those who come in direct touch with the ladies' hat manufacturing business of Atlanta it is to be doubted if as many as three score and ten people in this section have anything like a proper conception of its growth.

For the past few years these Atlanta manufacturers have enjoyed a tremendous volume of business. I have watched their progress for the past fifteen or twenty years. They have grown from very small firms, struggling for their time for existence, to factories that today employ several hundred people at wages I believe greater than any other industry.

This statement may seem remarkable, but the men of this industry with vision and confidence were determined that this industry could be built up in Atlanta and its products marketed throughout the country.

They also maintained permanent offices and salesrooms in New York city. If your travels sometimes carry you in the neighborhood of 400 Broadway you cannot help but see bold signs of each of these houses.

Apparently they have tried to make "Atlanta, Ga." the most conspicuous part of the sign and by their very boldness have immediately impressed with the idea that there are really proud of the fact that their home office is in Atlanta.

Then comes the various millinery jobbing houses of whom Atlanta should be justly proud. They have almost entirely replaced the old-time purveyors of the millinery trade in the same period of time along with the manufacturers. This, however, is not the only reason why they have been in constant touch with them and have admired their complete knowledge of the business.

So this is another one of the many industries that causes the foreign trade department, is assisting in our midst so that we can talk intelligently of the make-up of Atlanta to the outside world.

"FROZEN CREDITS" IN FOREIGN PORTS BEING LIQUIDATED

Reports from abroad indicate that the large quantities of American merchandise stored in foreign ports, and private warehouses in foreign ports, are being liquidated to a greater extent than heretofore.

Many American shippers by this time have realized the fact that the goods they have shipped are being liquidated at a loss, and are automatically shut off charges accumulate, and in many cases goods deteriorate in value.

Several plans are being used to remedy the existing situation. Reports seem to indicate that the great portion of liquidations already effected have been handled for account of American shippers either by banks or by some reputable American house having a branch in the city in which the merchandise was located.

SUCCESS Investigation Proves That 84 Per Cent of All Business Failures Are Non-Advertisers—Advertising One of the Most Important Factors in American Business.

THE manufacturer who advertises is five times as likely to stay in business as his non-advertiser competitor.

This statement was made by Harold K. Ferguson, of the H. K. Ferguson company, engineers and builders, of Cleveland, Ohio, after an extensive investigation into the question of advertising as it affected his own business and the business of his non-advertiser competitor.

Mr. Ferguson found 84 per cent. of the business failures are non-advertisers, and at the same time he found that more than 80 per cent. of the Ferguson factories were purchased by national advertisers.

For the past few years these Atlanta manufacturers have enjoyed a tremendous volume of business. I have watched their progress for the past fifteen or twenty years. They have grown from very small firms, struggling for their time for existence, to factories that today employ several hundred people at wages I believe greater than any other industry.

Twenty-five-year record. While the members of this industry can well be delighted at the extraordinary growth of advertising, and the members of the allied industries who sell supplies and equipment to the manufacturers of paper and pulp can well be pleased with the growth of the advertising volume, these facts which demonstrate the utility of advertising in insuring business success should convince these business men that they themselves should advertise as much as possible.

In the pages of The Paper Mill we have advertised for more than twenty years, and have become the leading agency for the sale of the allied industries. These advertisers are still prospering, and their competitors who have not advertised have passed out of existence.

There is a great deal of discussion nowadays about the existing debt situation in the world, including the United States, but according to statements made by the great English economist, Sydney Webb, all these debts could be paid within five years if the machinery of production was turned on to full capacity and the unemployed human energies were utilized.

After our civil war the United States faced large debts, but the installation of modern machinery and the development of the far west soon turned these debts into credits.

United States became one of the most highly developed and prosperous nations in the world. In the same way the burden of debt due to the world war will be paid by the increased efficiency of production, and perhaps even more important, that by increased efficiency of distribution. It has often been pointed out by economists that the machinery of distribution has not been perfected to the same degree as has efficiency in production.

Modern salesmanship and more especially modern advertising methods will make distribution cheaper and more effective, thus cutting down the selling price. The manufacturer can no longer sell goods to the distributor without caring whether the retailer resells the goods or not.

TO ADVERTISE AN ADVERTISING IDEA MAKES AN AD PAY

As one of the commercial backwash of the convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World, held here last month, is the business being done by the Any-Day Calendar company, whose first announcement appeared in local papers during the week of the convention.

John B. Hutchins, inventor and manufacturer of the unique device by which any date almost from the days of Julius Caesar down to the end of time—can be located at a moment's notice, says that the convention brought him the big opportunity which he needs so much.

Mr. Hutchins' calendar is different from anything ever produced before in this line. Its big feature is that it does not take a certified public accountant and a staff of assistants to find what is wanted.

Mr. Hutchins says it pays to advertise—even when you are advertising advertising. Correct.

Dame Fashion Is Gay This Year In Millinery Modes

Autumn Tints, Variety of Styles—Tendency to Larger Patterns, Feature Fall Showing.

BY CAROLINE THOMAS, Advertising Manager of McClure's.

It is evident that Dame Fashion has consulted Nature in her color scheme for fall millinery. Never has there been such a riot of autumn tints where both the brilliant as well as subdued shades are for your choosing.

After selecting her colors it would seem that the nations of the world had been consulted as to styles. This season you will view Seventeenth century portrait hats, Russian and Persian toques, the Napoleonic tricorn, Spanish sombrero effects and a showing of Oriental creations.

In the main, shapes will be larger this season; many have large beretta crowns, others fantastic slashed brims forming flaring back revers or overlapped folds; baudou effects are also strong. Variety is the keynote, fashion decreeing that every type shall be pleased this season.

Materials in vogue are hatters' plush, panne and velvets, duvion, heavy faille silk, metal cloth, of which steel is in the lead; broadcloth mill cloth will also be used again this season.

Innovations this season in trimmings are very effective cockades and drooping effects. Ostrich coues, hackle and pheasant are leading in feathers. The pheasant is very effective in natural and parrot shades; glycerined ostrich with jet spangled tips form a graceful, drooping effect.

Long glued straightened ostrich is also good. Cired and steamed feather pompons are decidedly new. Heavy satin, crepe and grosgrain ribbons will be used in huge pompons and cockades. Narrow tinsel edge ribbons or ribbon-aine and metallic ribbons of gold and silver thread designs will be deftly used in finishings.

Other trims are metal cloth flowers, novelty pins, rings, and iridescent bead ornaments of dangling earrings effects and cabalons, also steel and jet mail heads.

The designer will have a wide scope in which to play her artistic ability with a season where variety and individuality which is so dear to the feminine heart hold full sway.

With economy in view tin containers with labels embossed in the metal instead of paper ones have been invented in Australia.

New Postal Rates With Spain

During the past month Spain, through the minister of foreign affairs, has ratified the postal convention between Spain and all the nations of North, South and Central America, except Canada, signed on November 30.

Letters, postcards, printed matter, commercial papers and samples may now be forwarded between Spain and these countries at internal postal rates.

According to advices from our office in Barcelona, Spanish newspapers are pointing out the advantages from the convention just at the time when other European countries almost unanimously are raising postal rates. They argue that commerce between Spain and North, Central and South America, should shortly feel beneficial effects through this decrease.

THE FALL MILLINERY OPENING.

The coming week will witness the regular semi-annual "millinery show" in Atlanta—an event that each season grows greater for this city and the territory which it serves.

Not only the large local wholesale millinery houses, but many of those from the large northern centers of the industry will have their autumn lines on display—the Atlanta houses at their own establishments and the outside exhibitors at the Kimball house. It is the event of the summer with the buyers of millinery in the south and hundreds of them will be in Atlanta during the month of August purchasing their goods for fall business.

In special articles in this section by those who know this industry from the ground up, something of Atlanta's greatness in the millinery industry is told—well told and convincingly told—but to the average Atlanta citizen whose activities do not lead him along the road to the millinery market, the progress that this city has made in this line may be of small interest. It should be otherwise.

Only a few cities in the United States have become noted because of their millinery business. Atlanta is one of them. It is a great and growing industry and one that brings thousands of dollars of advertising to the city that has grown to be one of the big markets. The importance of the "millinery show" in Atlanta is second to but few, if any, of the big conventions for which we go out and spend much time and treasure, and yet this event comes twice each year to this city, without the expenditure of effort or money or even thought, on the part of those of our citizens who are not directly interested in the millinery business.

It would be well for Atlantans to read the splendid articles referred to above and to take stock of this event, which means so much to this city's welfare and its fast growing industries.

ATLANTA'S MILLINERY MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY.

In addition to the fact that Atlanta is the only city in the south where big semi-annual millinery openings are held—the one big central market of the south for wholesale millinery—this city is the only point in the south where millinery is manufactured. By this is meant the manufacture of the ready-to-wear hats and millinery supplies which only the big jobbers buy.

In the illustrations shown above as part of Atlanta's exhibit of industries in the millinery line, the American Hat Manufacturing company and the Novelty Hat Manufacturing company are in a class by themselves. These concerns do not sell their products to retailers, no matter how large the firm. They are manufacturers for the jobbing trade only.

Outside of Atlanta only about five cities in the United States have similar industries. These are all large northern cities. But the feature of this business which most Atlanta people are totally unaware of is that Atlanta has become known in every large city in the country for the quality and style of the millinery manufactured here. Both of the concerns referred to maintain large sales offices in New York city and their products reach practically every millinery jobber in the land.

Each does a large import business, the base of their supplies coming from China, Italy, Japan and other far distant countries. Not only are the goods themselves made here in Atlanta, but the style is made in Atlanta also. Designers and fashion artists, as good as any in the country, are constantly working out their artistic creations in these large establishments, and the proof that Atlanta style and workmanship in the millinery world are recognized as the best, is the fact that fully 75 per cent of the output of these big concerns is sold to the great jobbers of the north.

This is one of Atlanta's almost unknown industries, locally, but one which carries the good name of this city on a high standard to the outside world, and even into foreign lands. Another instance of what the Atlanta spirit will do when properly applied.

Largely through the determined efforts of the Merchants' Association of New York to cope with pilferage from ocean shipments, there has been formed the "Trade Protective Association, Inc."

The loss to shippers from this source amounts to many millions of dollars annually, and it is hoped that the new association will be able to cut the evil and reduce the present almost prohibitive insurance rates against theft and pilferage.

SEEING OURSELVES AS OTHERS SEE US

How Crop Diversification Replacing the One-Crop Plan in South Impresses Outsiders.

It is always interesting, sometimes irritating, frequently exasperating and occasionally inspiring to know what the other fellow thinks of us. Some of us are too touchy or hardheaded while others of us are probably too chesty to get the good lesson which comes with constructive criticism, and then again there are those of us who are inclined to get the swelled head if the comment on our affairs or characteristics is of the laudatory kind.

Last week two men of national reputation in their respective lines of endeavor handed out some comment on the south which may do us all good to read. Archer Wall Douglas, vice president of the Simmons Hardware company, of St. Louis, wrote an article for the Philadelphia Public Ledger on crop diversification in the south, and Richard Spillane, editor of the business section of that noted publication thought it was good enough to call attention to it in his daily talk on "Men and Business."

What Mr. Douglas Says.

"It is a matter of surprise to many people in the east that crop diversification in the southern states is no longer a thing of theory and hope, but one of actual accomplishment. It was not from chance but from actual necessity. Nor was the necessity of recent date, but something which trained students of agriculture, those of the Department of Agriculture and the State colleges of agriculture, had long known and perceived."

"It was hard to convince the cotton planter that the practices of a century were awry and out of joint and that the most economical and efficient method of cotton culture was comprehended in raising first all the food needed on the farm for man and beast and then plant cotton on what was left. For what should it profit the farmer if he spent much of the revenue which cotton brought him to buy food at higher prices when he could grow this sustenance for himself and his livestock much cheaper? None the less were the preachments of the wise students as the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

What Mr. Weevil Does.

"There came along the boll weevil, and the labored fabric of southern agricultural life fell into sudden and general ruin. For the predatory boll weevil threatened to make cotton culture a thing of desperate uncertainty and a mere gamble with fate wherever he prevailed in sufficient numbers."

"So raising the food necessities of life for man and beast in the south became no longer a virtue but a necessity. For there was no certainty that cotton was a sure-enough crop to furnish revenue, as in the past, but to buy these same necessities. That was the beginning of diversification. And in the last quarter of a century, with occasional lapses, it has progressed far and is fast crystallizing into a habit."

"Let a progressive state, such as Alabama, suffice as an example. Eleven per cent more acreage in corn this year than last, and accompanied by 30 per cent less cotton planted. More peanuts, much more hay and velvet beans. Very much more cow peas, sweet and Irish potatoes, sugar cane, soy beans and oats, and so on to the end of the chapter in the way of food for human beings and forage for livestock."

"Along with this has naturally gone a corresponding increase in livestock, cattle and hogs for the only way the farmer can raise them successfully and economically is to grow, not buy, the feed for them. So diversification is fast changing agriculture in the south from the one-crop methods to well-balanced, orderly and intelligent farming of all the requisites of agricultural life."

What Mr. Spillane Says.

"Archer Wall Douglas, who, as one of the vice presidents of the Simmons Hardware company, of St. Louis, travels up and down and over and across these United States month in and month out, year after year, and always keeps his eyes open that he may know of changing conditions, makes it plain in a short article he has written for this paper that the south at last has really come to diversify its crops."

"It has taken a longer time. Cotton was money. It always was saleable. Merchant or banker always would advance money on cotton to be planted or that was planted, while he was loath to lend on anything else."

"It wasn't common sense but the boll weevil that changed the south from dependence on cotton. Not until the pest threatened to eat the crops did bankers and planters fight intelligently—and that was by diversification."

"A one-crop country is unsafe. It never is safe to put all your eggs in one basket. The south now raises corn, oats, hogs, cattle, sheep, peanuts, vegetables and fruits as never before. Its cotton acreage this year is abnormally low, owing to the great drop in price of cotton. There will be a greater acreage put to the south's staple later, but never again, perhaps, will the south be a one-crop country."

"That is a great step forward. To honor a pest is unusual, yet in one of the county seats in Alabama a grateful people have put up a fine monument to the boll weevil."

Now after you have read what two commercial high-brows say about us what do you really think of it?

Unfilled Orders Reduced by 2,200 Since First of Year—Hundreds of Lines Changed to Give Relief.

With the completion of extensions and additions amounting to $330,000 during the past six months the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company has reduced the number of unfilled applications for service in Atlanta to 3,437 as compared with 5,631 on January 1.

The transfer Saturday night of hundreds of lines from the Main to the Ivy office and from the Ivy to the Hemlock office will afford some further relief, although most of the waiting contracts are held up by a lack of cable facilities.

Large expenditures have been made for cable extensions and work now in progress and planned for the remainder of the year will amount to $350,000, making the total for the year in Atlanta approximately $680,000.

This does not include the new building nearing completion on Auburn avenue at a cost of more than $500,000, which with its equipment to be installed next year will represent an expenditure of $1,300,000.

The new directory which has been distributed for use Sunday contains more than a thousand changes and additions and shows that there are now 34,773 telephones in Atlanta. This is a gain of 1,626 since January 1.

To make this gain 8,950 telephones were handled, of which 5,238 were installed and 3,692 were removed. During the same period 3,700 telephones were moved or changed and 6,000 were repaired when lightning and rainstorms damaged them.

While this construction, removal and repair work has been in progress the telephone operators have not been idle. They are handling an average of 37,000 long calls every day and telephone officials declare the service is better than it has ever been.

ing and repair work has been in progress the telephone operators have not been idle. They are handling an average of 37,000 long calls every day and telephone officials declare the service is better than it has ever been.

Other Extensions Approved. Additions and extensions amounting to $157,400 have been approved and will be started right away. Most of this work will be completed this year and includes underground cable on Virginia avenue, Ponce de Leon avenue and West Peachtree street and cutting lines from Ivy to Hemlock at a cost of $60,000; cable in the Franklin office area costing $115,000; additional cable in the West office costing $22,000; additional cable facilities in the Park section costing $25,000; additional subscribers' equipment in the East Point and Franklin offices.

District Manager Bowden says that cable is being installed as rapidly as possible and that there will be some delay in providing service in certain districts.

Resolution to Probe Texas Ku Klux Klan Tabled in the House

Austin, Texas, July 30.—By a vote of 69 to 54 the Texas house of representatives voted Wednesday to table the resolution offered by Representative Patman asking an investigation of the Ku Klux Klan and calling upon the governor to submit a measure strengthening the law against such organizations.

Representative Nebitt, opposing Patman's resolution, said he knew whether or not Patman had any knowledge of the Klan and whether or not he knew these were true. Patman said he had received several letters regarding the Klan.

Representative Merriman asked Patman what religion he professed. Patman replied that he was a member of the Primitive Baptists. Asked by Merriman if he is a member of the Knights of Columbia, he replied that he is not. "I just wanted to locate you," remarked Merriman.

BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL $1,933,822

Building permits totaling $1,933,822 were issued in the month just closed by City Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. This is a record breaking the previous high July marks.

The number of new dwellings was a feature of the report, showing that permits have been issued for the erection of 131 residences. The number for July brings the total this year up to 741 homes that are under course of construction.

Winsome Mary Says She Loves Babies; Has to Wear Curls

San Francisco, July 30.—Introducing Mary Pickford: Came to town today. Going to take scenes for a new picture.

Shakes hands like a hard-fisted boy, laughs like a little girl, philosophizes like a wise and world-knowing grandmother.

Corsets, divorce, babies, bare knees! She talks them all with easy grace and ready tongue. "Doug" hovers about.

"Corsets?" Up went the Pickford hands in horror. "Terrible!"

"I never wear them!" "Of course"—a wistful look—"for matrons or fat women they might be all right."

"Quite comfortable, I'm sure. I have to wear curls; the public wants them."

"Shocking! I don't approve of them." "Short skirts?"

"All a question of beauty and not morality. If a woman has prettiness and neatness, short skirts are the thing."

"Babies?" The Violet Pickford eyes widened. "Wonderful!"

"A household. Four children a minimum; two boys and two girls." "Glamorous women?"

"Why, what has the sex to do with it?" "Career for women?"

"Well, I'm old-fashioned. Home, husband, babies should come first." "At 40 to 50 the woman who has chosen a long path is likely to regret her choice."

"They are useful, but I have no time for them, my work, French lessons and husband take all my time."

At Birmingham old road paving blocks have been converted into wood gas with equally satisfactory results.

Cotton Marketing Meetings Resulting In Signup Pledges

Of fifteen of its twenty-seven meetings scheduled during the past week, of which the headquarters of the Georgia Cotton Growers' Co-operative association has received a report, the palm for the most cotton signed pledge was at an experiment with the result that wood gas has been definitely adopted as an illuminant until the price of coal comes down.

At Birmingham old road paving blocks have been converted into wood gas with equally satisfactory results.

Another meeting held at Carnesville on Friday, registered 1,000 bales signed up and of the meetings held in heretofore unsigned territory, a 72-bale sign-up at the courthouse in Winchester Thursday afternoon holds the lead.

In all more than 7,000 bales of cotton it is reported, have been signed at the meetings held from, and reports had not come in from the meetings held in the southern part of the state on Friday, or at any of seven points on Saturday.

The actual cotton signing that is going on," said an official of the organization committee Saturday morning, "is more or less of a surprise. For the most part, our speakers are working in heretofore untouched territory, and through the organization committee work in the various counties of the state will be carried on in a series of this they have been most successful, and at the present time they are going, there will be a sign-up of our meetings on August 6, no less than sixty-five counties of the state in which we will have some cotton actually signed and a well-equipped organization committee in the field to take up the actual sign-up campaign."

DR. CALEB RIDLEY TO SPEAK FRIDAY ON "AMERICANISM"

Dr. Caleb Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church and chairman of the Dixie defense committee, will deliver an address on "Americanism" in the auditorium of the school house at Smyrna next Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

The address of Dr. Ridley will be delivered under the auspices of the citizens' committee of Smyrna, of which H. C. Russell is chairman. The speaker will be introduced by Senator Herbert Clay, of Marietta, president of the Georgia state senate. Invitations have been issued by the citizens' committee to citizens of all the counties adjoining Cobb.

Under the general topic of "Americanism," Dr. Ridley will discuss the Dixie defense committee, how and why it came into existence, the work it has accomplished and the work it intends to do. He also will discuss the activities of the committee on inter-racial relations and the pamphlet recently issued dealing with the negro in Georgia. The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, its aims and purposes and principles they will be dealt with by Dr. Ridley.

Henry Ford's Star In Ascendant; May Seek Presidency

United News Staff Correspondent. Washington, July 30.—Political astrologers, with whom every up-to-date administration these days is adequately equipped, announce discovery of an important phenomenon in America's political and industrial skies.

They see Henry Ford moving increasingly rapidly and ever more brightly through the path of their vision. They further report that the Ford star is showing marked attraction to numerous other bodies, such as the agricultural element and labor.

From one of these students, whose name is not given, would emanate this prediction: "1924 will see Henry Ford a potential Presidential candidate, enjoying an almost if not completely united support of farmers and a very large measure of the laboring class."

Politically Independent. The fact that Ford personally is politically independent and always has espoused ideas rather than party platforms, naturally tends to strengthen him with the two most important sections in the American body politic, the farmers and industrial workers.

Both of these classes are generally feeling uneasy, unhappy and more or less distrustful. Into this situation comes Ford, playing yet the following card: "Against the big bankers, for whom both labor and the farm element are fighting, I stand."

Because of their conditions, Ford recently has won a spectacular victory in the eyes of the laboring class. He has accepted Wall Street's help and going ahead to prove that such help was not necessary. His big Detroit plant was the first to "turn the corner" away from industrial depression and today is said to be turning out more cars every 24 hours than at any time in its history.

2. Evidencing the following card: "Peace and prosperity promised as a result of international armament limitation, a cause enthusiastically endorsed by farmers and workers throughout the country," Ford has announced his purpose to turn the spotlight of publicity on those bankers and others who might seek to block the success of the armament conference.

Nitrate Plant for Farmers. Having given to the farmers a cheap automobile and a cheap tractor, Ford now proposes his unprecedented bold project of taking over the great Muscle Shoals nitrate plant in order to supply cheap fertilizer to the agricultural section.

Further proposals to place agricultural machinery on the direct board of his plant, to see that his personal profit is limited to 8 per cent.

4. Having purchased one small railroad and promptly lowered freight rates, Ford is now planning to acquire a large railroad, to give fruit growers, he contemplates getting additional railroad property and the application of the plan that agricultural organizations at several points have wired President Harding urging Ford's appointment as director general of railroads.

In conclusion, this political prophet pointed out, Ford is becoming increasingly wealthy and is becoming powerful. The late J. P. Morgan left a fortune estimated at $20,000,000, yet Ford's annual income now exceeds that Morgan fortune.

So those whose business it is to watch political straws for the present administration, have a new bet to make. They are betting on the political possibilities in the jockey king's last activities.

SKULLS OF THIRTY REDS EXAMINED

Phrenologists Say That Executed Terrorists Were Not of Type of Born Degenerates.

Budapest, July 30.—Hungarian phrenologists who have made a careful study of the skulls of thirty notorious red terrorists sentenced and hanged after the fall of communism in this country have just reported that "bolshhevik terrorists, though exhibiting signs of abnormality, seem not to belong to the type of born degenerate criminals."

All the thirty were members of Bela Kun's fearful bodyguard called the "Lenine boys," all were found guilty of numerous murders and robberies and examined in their lifetime by the same doctors when under trial.

"The skulls," runs the report, "are prognathic characterized by an exceptionally low forehead, deep eye caves, big mouth, sharp protruding jaws, deficient dentition. When compared with the skulls of notorious common murderers preserved in the museum of the police they show the signs of degeneracy in a much less degree."

The only exception is Joseph Csarny, the leader of the group, whose skull is easily first among the worst and most deformed specimens of human degeneration. When examined during his trial his savage cruel look of his small evasive eyes startled even the professional doctors.

Other industrial facts cited by the trust company's agents to show the betterment of conditions are: Coal production has risen 80 per cent of the pre-war output. Salt production has increased until there is 15 per cent surplus for export.

In the metallurgical industries, 46,000 workmen are employed as against 36,000 a year ago, and 6,000 in 1918.

Production of sugar, textiles, alcohol and tanned leather—the latter one of Poland's chief exports—before the war—have also shown a tremendous revival, although the mining business is still present suffering from the dismantling of shops and the lack of hides.

WHOLESALE BOOKS STILL POPULAR WITH CHILDREN

Boston, July 30.—The adventures of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" are still eagerly read by the children of this country. The popularity of these books is a tribute to the quality of the literature that has invaded the field.

Miss Alice I. Hazen, supervisor of the children's department in the St. Louis public library, in addressing the fifth annual meeting of librarians, held here recently, said the well-thumbed tomes in which a dozen generations have found pleasure as to practical habits were still read with the unwavering stare of concentration that needs not the dinner bell.

She added that moving pictures had had no evil influence on the children's reading; in fact, more children every month were coming to visualize the greatest adventures of all time between the covers of a book.

She advocated a more widespread introduction of foreign history stories for children and advised that they be taught to read stories and biographies of American life.

SINGING CONVENTION IN SESSION IN DUBLIN

Attendance Estimated 3,500.
Larger Number Expected
Sunday—Officers Elected.

Dublin, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—The Laurens county singing convention assembled here this morning for two days' session. The visitors, conservatively estimated in number at 3,500, includes some of the most noted singers in the south. Sunday's crowd is expected to be not less than 5,000.

President D. M. Kersey called the convention to order at 10 o'clock, and a brief business session was held, during which the election of officers for the coming year was taken up. Kersey was re-elected president for the sixth time in as many years, and J. T. Grimesley was elected secretary. E. G. McClelland

A CAUSE OF WOMEN'S ILLS

WOMEN OFTEN THINK THEY HAVE HEART TROUBLE, INDIGESTION, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, ETC., WHEN IT IS THE IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

Many women believe they are weak and nervous as a result of age, worry and overwork; they think that their disturbed digestion, headaches, heart palpitation, shortness of breath, pains across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when these women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change from a poor, watery fluid to a rich, healthy one. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you do not get the strength out of it.

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron—at once. You will be sure to get it right and not the talc iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on iron filings. Organic NUXATED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, gentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, worn-out women in two weeks' time.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters "N. I." on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturer if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. For sale in this city by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., and all other drug stores.—(adv.)

GANTT NAMED TO U. S. PROHIBITION JOB

Will Be Assistant Field Supervisor in Southeastern District.

Washington, July 30.—Commissioner Blair announced today appointment of Daniel J. Gantt, formerly federal supervision prohibition agent at Atlanta, to be assistant field supervisor with supervision over the southeastern district.

Mr. Gantt had received no official notification Saturday from Washington of his appointment, but expressed himself as pleased with the news which came in the dispatch from the nation's capital. He said that he is glad to remain in the service of the government and pledged himself to continue the energetic work toward the enforcement of the prohibition statutes which has made him a well-known figure throughout the southern states. "I suppose they want me to help out with affairs in the southeast for a while," he said, "and I am at their service."

The title of assistant field supervisor, it is believed, will mean that Mr. Gantt will continue to supervise the work of the federal prohibition agents in the southeastern district. It is Mr. Gantt's expressed hope that he will be given the supervision of the four prohibition districts which have been abolished in the hands of the state federal supervisors. Major James A. Fort, of America, has direction of this work in Georgia, and the prohibition officers who have been working with Mr. Gantt will take up their duties in the office of Major Fort Monday.

Mr. Gantt has been in the federal service for twenty-nine years and has during his connection with the revenue department filled every office from stenographer to supervisor. He became supervising director for the Gulf division in September, 1915, and has since that time supervised the states of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

Ku Klux Denies Ordering Chaffee To Leave Savannah

Klan Representatives Ask
Sister of Contractor to Notify Him to Return.

Savannah, Ga., July 30.—A number of people, some of whom, it is declared, represented the local Ku Klux Klan, today denied that they had ordered Walter A. Chaffee, a well-known contractor who left Savannah for Los Angeles, Cal., where he lived before coming to Savannah, to return to Savannah at once.

The visitors declared the Ku Klux had nothing to do with the notice sent Chaffee, who is now en route to Los Angeles, Cal., where he lived before coming to Savannah. Mrs. Dodge said she would not leave as she had intended doing, and would advise her husband to return to Savannah. Chaffee received a week ago through the mails a notice to leave town or suffer visit to the Ku Klux. His friends declare he became unduly alarmed as they looked upon the threat as the work of an individual. Alleged friendship for negroes was given as the reason for wanting Chaffee to leave.

METHODIST YOUNG PEOPLE TO CONFER ON MISSION WORK

One thousand members of Methodist Young People's Missionary Society of Georgia will hold a missionary conference at Indian Springs, Ga., from August 8 to 11. Several hundred Atlantans are expected to attend.

Missionaries of wide experience will deliver lectures. A course in Bible and mission study will feature the meeting. The Bible hour will be conducted by Dr. L. J. Miller, a Bible teacher and evangelist of Nashville, Tenn., while Dr. C. G. Houshelt and Mrs. H. R. Steele, educational secretaries of the Methodist board of missions, will lead the inspirational hours.

Twilight addresses at the tabernacle will mark the evening sessions of the conference. Singing will be conducted by Rev. N. M. Levein, while the pianists will be Miss Evelyn Sewell, of Atlanta, and Harry Waller, of Macon. A feature on the musical program will be the Baraca quartet, of Dublin, Ga. The Chaffee tent, a pageant, will be enacted by the young people of Jackson, Ga., on the opening day.

GIRLS ARE FINED

Roughhouse in the Stockade Aired in Court.

Eleven girls from the stockade were haled into Recorder Johnson's court Saturday morning charged with disorderly conduct following a disturbance in the stockade Friday night.

According to Superintendent Tom Lanford, of the stockade, the girls started a roughhouse, after an attempt to escape had failed. They began demolishing the furniture and destroying everything not nailed down until the arrival of reserves put a stop to the fun. Lanford said.

Nine of the girls were fined $1 and the cases against two others were dismissed.

SCOUTS HONOR COURT TO MEET AT CAMP FRIENDLY

Colonel Edgar E. Pomeroy, president of the Boy Scout court of honor, has called a meeting of the court for Saturday, August 6, at 4 o'clock, to be held at Camp Friendly, the Atlanta Scout Council camp, near Gainesville.

It is hoped that each member of the court will attend this meeting, as there is a large number of members of the court who have been busy during their stay at camp passing up the various merit badge tests.

BOY SAVES COMPANION FROM DROWNING DEATH

Wytheville, Va., July 30.—E. Lee Trinkle, Jr., young son of Senator E. Lee Trinkle, of Wytheville, democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, saved Lawrence Stevens, 8 years old, from drowning on the afternoon of July 28. It became known here today that Young Trinkle and his comrade were members of the local Presbyterian Christian Endeavor society's picnic on Reed's creek, near here. The Stevens boy had gone swimming in the creek and was struggling when Trinkle went to his rescue.

NEGRO WOUNDED, LIVELY BITTEN IN ROW OVER DOG

Enraged at the efforts of William Lively, dog catcher, to impound a stray dog near his home, James H. Brewster, 15, negro, 5 Winslow alley, attacked the dog catcher Saturday morning and in the resulting fight bit Lively a number of times about the face and neck. In endeavoring to protect himself from the negro, Lively drew his gun and shot twice, one of the bullets lodging in Brewster's leg.

According to Lively, the dog did not belong to the negro, but the latter took it upon himself to represent its capture and started an argument. Lively said the negro threw a piece of pine at him and that he drew his gun and in the scuffle for possession of it, it was discharged.

Both were taken to Grady hospital, where it was found that the negro was not seriously injured. Lively's lacerations were also attended to.

SENATOR NORRIS REPORTED WORSE, AFTER COLLAPSE

Washington, July 30.—The condition of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, today was reported less favorable. Since his collapse in the senate Thursday after a long address, Mr. Norris, it was said, had taken virtually no nourishment.

A specialist was consulted today as the senator's friends expressed considerable concern over his condition.

Five-Minute Talks To Feature Meeting Of the Lions' Club

"What three things have made Atlanta great?" "What are the three most attractive features of Atlanta?" "What are Atlanta's three greatest needs?" These subjects will be discussed in five-minute talks by members of the Lions club at their regular meeting on Tuesday, August 2, at the Piedmont hotel. Speakers will be chosen to take part in the division of the club, to be drawn by number, with two speakers on each subject.

The entertainment committee is hoping to have also as an added feature Mohammed Kahn, the Hindu wizard who is stopping in the city, and whose feats of legerdemain have bewildered audiences all over the country. If he is in the city on Tuesday he will attend the luncheon.

The meetings of the Lions are held in the grill room of the Piedmont hotel at 1 o'clock, and all Lions are urged to attend this Tuesday meeting.

Dr. LaPrade, Georgia Bird Authority, Speaks To Emory Woman's Club

Dr. W. H. LaPrade, Georgia bird authority, will lecture on "Nature Birds of Georgia" Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, before the Emory Woman's club in the Emory university theological building. Members of the Atlanta Woman's club are invited to attend. Dr. LaPrade will also exhibit his collection of Georgia birds.

BUTTERFLIES GIVEN TO ATLANTA SCHOOLS

Fred T. Naumann, a patriotic citizen of Atlanta, who is greatly interested in the welfare and improvement of the Atlanta public schools, has presented School Commissioner Carl P. Hutcheson a selection comprising several hundred butterflies. Commissioner Hutcheson has turned over these butterflies to Superintendent Stationer, with instructions that they be fitted in a large glass case as an exhibit for study in the biological department of the schools. Mr. Naumann has recently removed his business to Miami, Fla. His large circle of friends here regret his departure.

FARMERS INDORSE UNITED MARKETING

Barnesville, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Dr. Truman McCoy and J. T. Wise, in addresses today, presented the cause of the co-operative cotton marketing plan to the farmers of Lawrence county. A large number of them to join in the plan. The prospect is that many of the farmers will approve the plan and sign contracts to market their cotton through the agency of the association.

PELLAGRA REPORTED INCREASING RAPIDLY IN SOUTHERN STATES

(From St. Louis (Mo.) Star.)
The United States is said to be menaced by pellagra. The disease is said to be spreading at an alarming rate, particularly in the South, according to a statement issued today by the Public Health Service.

In one state, the number of cases for May aggregated 1,817, as against 687 for May last year.

Financial distress of the poorer inhabitants forcing them to a limited diet of salt pork and one of two other staples is the cause of the disease, the health bureau stated. It is not considered contagious or infectious.

If you, suffer from pellagra you are requested to write to a friend and LET ON PELLAGRA, and how to treat it. It will help you in your case and to others. Write to the American Compound Co., Box 2003, Jasper, Ala.—(adv.)

The Beauty Whose "Make-up" Has Lasted 8,000 Years

Remarkable Discovery in Egypt Which Shows That Rouge and Lip Sticks Are Very, Very Old.

THEY found her in Egypt. She is over 8000 years old. She was "made-up" before the pyramids were built. And then they found her not only was her skin "wonderfully preserved," but her make-up was where it had been placed in all the artistic detail of the toilet sophisticates of a vogue when she was young.

Dr. W. M. Flinders Petrie, who found her and has carried her to the Egyptology Section of University College, London, marveled at the perfect preservation. Other people marvel at the revelation that modern beauty doctors could have taught nothing to Cleopatra and her sisters of Egypt. The exiled beauty is over five thousand years older than Cleopatra.

There are indeed, signs that the modern girl, with her rouge pots and lip sticks, is several thousand years late. Modern chemistry has developed the science of cosmetics to assure, and improved these preparations in many ways but the principle remains much the same. An Egyptian beauty of the time of the pyramids after "making up" must have looked not unlike the up-to-date American girl, so far as color was concerned.

Not only was rouge and other toilet preparations common in ancient Egypt, but many toilet articles were used which after this vast space of years appear strangely familiar. Take for example ancient Egyptian vanity boxes. They are found today in a great variety of designs, and a fine collection of them has been brought to America. They are made cheaply of wood and elaborately of ivory and silver. Evidently the boxes were in very common use, since they were made cheaply or expensively to suit ladies rich and poor. The ivory boxes with their elaborate carvings belonged, of course, to queens or the wives of rich merchants, while the little wooden boxes must have been cheap enough to be purchased by people of moderate means. One of the most elaborate designs is carved out of ivory. The box is beautifully modelled and was closed by a lid which could be turned to one side. When closed, this vanity box could be carried conveniently. The lid is decorated with a design which is still clear after so many centuries. Another box was designed in ivory to look like a dog.

It is amazing to find the wooden vanity boxes so well preserved. They are usually very neatly made, showing that the designer was an excellent workman. From the appearance of the boxes it is clear that the little lids must have been opened and closed thousands of times. The dents made by the nails of the ladies who used them are in some cases clearly seen on the soft wood.

The commonest cosmetic carried in these little boxes was a fine black powder used for coloring the eyebrows. It was made usually of finely powdered coal or graphite. This was applied by a brush or the finger-tip. The beauties who lived on the banks of the Nile thousands of years ago must have understood clearly the effect of well-modelled eyebrows in displaying their eyes to the best possible advantage. Dainty boxes were also used for rouge. The lip stick, or its equivalent, is older than the Egyptian obelisks. The Egyptian ladies were fond of very vivid colors in their make-up, and colored their lips a bright vermilion.

The vanity boxes of the Egyptian vamps contained at least one preparation unknown to their modern sisters. It was a dark green coloring matter and was used around the eyes. It was supposed to be good for the eyes in protecting them from ophthalmia, which was common then as it is today on the Nile.

Evidence has been found that the beauty specialists of ancient Egypt were very skillful in the use of false hair. The coiffures of the Egyptian beauties were very elaborate, as frescoes and carvings of the period clearly show. The Egyptians not only made wigs and hair switches, but were specially clever in preparing false locks and curls to match the hair.

Played Joan of Arc and Won a Husband

Pretty Virginia Madigan Never Dreamed When She Posed for Her Picture That It Would Lead to a Romance With a Man She Never Even

By Ethel Thurston

FRIENDS of Marcus Daly Boorman, a lawyer, society and clubman, of Roundup, Mont., declare that it was all brought about by the psychological effect of flashing a pretty girl's face on the appropriate screen of a "brown study." Imagine the thing yourself. You are at the club, your feet comfortably resting on a soft hassock, your body snugly huddled in one of these great leather chairs strategically placed in the well-appointed clubhouse. The monotonous drone of subdued conversation, the distant clicking of billiard balls, the clouds of blue smoke from the fat perfecto curling overhead, all accentuating the languidness and indolence that such environment generally engenders.

Quite naturally the ennui comes, and, with it, its handmaiden, lonesomeness. And the solitude of bachelorhood, not at that moment brightened and dissipated by companionship, becomes emphasized. You never felt how "single" you were before. You seemed to be in a world without anyone but yourself, you and the big chair and the curling smoke and the distant sounds of talking and billiard playing.

Love's Shaft Travels Far

All at once, abstractedly, you reach for the rotogravure section of a newspaper lying on the table close by. You open it. Your mind is still far afield. And then, with laughing face and interesting eyes, a girl looks at you—from the newspaper supplement—and seems really to spring right into that emptiness, that mental vacuity which your own blue thoughts had a moment before created.

The chances are, bachelor reader, if this happened to you the effect would be the same as that which resulted from the photograph flashed in front of Mr. Boorman's pensive features. It gave him such a shock that he turned from the single-track, narrow-gauge roadbed along which he had been traveling and entered the broad, double-track route from which, at intervals, little switches are apt to shunt.

But that's getting a bit ahead of the story

Marcus Daly Boorman and His Bride Leaving St. Patrick's Cathedral After Their Wedding.

Miss Virginia Madigan as Joan of Arc Being Carried in Triumph Into Rheims.

To return to the narrative. "By Gad!" he ejaculated, staring admiringly at the beautiful girl garbed as Joan of Arc, as she appeared in a pageant given 2600 miles away in New York City. "She's a beauty." He became ruminative. "New York City," he soliloquized. "Well, it's a long trip, but she's worth it."

"Sir?" He dropped his paper. There, behind it, was a negro funkier who had approached unheeded.

"Did you speak, sah?"

"Did I?"

"You did, sah!"

"Well, it's a bad sign. However, here's a half-dollar. Run along."

That's how it began, the romance of this Montana attorney and the former Miss Virginia Madigan, New York society debutante. For she is no longer Miss Madigan. The logical sequence was the wedding, April 27, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City.

But there is another angle to the romance, which weaves mysticism about it and indicates that perhaps the spirit of the Maid of Orleans had something to do with this strange love message carried in the picture published in the rotogravure section of the metropolitan newspaper.

Over in Westminster Cathedral, in London, about the time that Miss Madigan was posing as Joan of Arc, in the beautiful and spectacular pageant given by the girls of Fordham College, throngs of reverent persons were visiting a shrine where rested the armor breastplate of the celebrated woman martyr. Thousands kissed it. More thousands tenderly caressed it. It came from the collection of M. R. de Bourbon. By a strange coincidence—the superstitious might believe that there was something of the occult about it—the guardians of the historic bit of iron decided to send it to America where it will be received as a perpetual reminder of the liberty-loving girl, representative of the best of the patriotism of the nation with whose destinies the United States seem so often to be closely linked. Some friends of the principals in the Joan of Arc romance declare that the decision to send the relic to America was reached on the very day that the bridegroom from Montana reached his decision in the matter of a 2500-mile trip to meet the girl whose picture so completely enraptured him.

The task of locating his picture bride was by no means easy. The caption under the photograph, which has been reproduced on this page to allow the readers to form their own judgment of the beauty of the girl in the Joan of Arc pageant, gave only meagre information. It did say, however, that the pageant had been performed at Fordham and, acting on that clue, the love-stricken swain set about to reach his lady love.

The Luck of a Lover

In the lexicon of love there is no such word as difficulty, as Mr. Boorman set about to prove. He penned a clever little note to the Dean of Fordham, asking for the name of the girl who played Joan of Arc. He fabricated a specious explanation that the girls of Roundup wanted to stage a similar pageant and one was desirous of communicating with the leading character.

Luck and love were with him. He secured the name. He even secured the lady's address. And, having made these steps forward, he took the next train from Roundup and started on the long transcontinental trip to reach the light of his eyes.

The trip seemed interminable. The ties, also, seemed to be singing a refrain with a mocking sound concerning the old adage. "He travels fastest who travels alone." The way that train stopped and stopped, never making more than 120 miles an hour and never leaving a station ahead of time, made him wish he could lay his hands on the man who first uttered that absurd epigram. It seemed to him that heaven would get to New

The Legal Test for Insanity

THIRTY years ago, clever author wrote a book in which he tried to show that the geniuses of the wild had all been insane. Today there are doctors who are going further, and are propounding a startling theory that few, if any, people are entirely sane! Mental specialists are also failing foul of the legal test as to what constitutes insanity as regards the responsibility of each of us for any breach of the law we may commit.

The law holds that in order to entitle a person charged with a crime to be acquitted on the ground of insanity, it is not enough to show that he was suffering from mental instability or mental disease; or, in other words, was insane, at the time he committed the act, but that the defense must go further, and satisfy the jury that the mind of the accused was so diseased that he did not know what he was doing, or, if he did know what he was doing, that he did not know it was wrong to do it.

The law inquires into the degree of the insanity and its effect upon the specific action of the accused.

A person who is without intellectual faculties—a congenital idiot, or who is permanently or totally insane—is not criminally responsible at all, for he cannot have had a criminal intent.

A person who is only partially or only temporarily insane is not responsible for an act done during and in consequence of a phase of mental incapacity. For example, a man suffering from delirium tremens, which so affects his mind that he is not conscious of the nature of an act done by him in one of his paroxysms, is entitled to a verdict of guilty but insane; which means that he will be detained until he is cured.

It is these partial or occasional darkenings of the mental faculties that are the most usual and that give rise to the difficulty of determining

York and when he did (quite on time), instead of feeling thankful he actually criticized the railroad for not having a special cross-country air line service. Frankly, he wondered how the millionaires in New York City could possibly permit such a beautiful girl to remain single. He feared he would find her married.

At the station he sprang into a taxicab and was whirled to the residence of Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, his half-sister. She was agreeably surprised to receive him. But he did not even shake the dust of travel from his trouser cuffs before he was burdening her with his romance.

They Met—the Old Story

That night the telephone girls wished they could get a new job. The wires leading from the Whitehouse residence fairly buzzed. For the swain was seeking his lady and he sought to find her by locating a friend of his half-sister, who would be acquainted with her. He made call after call and finally—the reward of his perseverance—he discovered a party who was acquainted with Miss Madigan and who assured him that she would speedily bring about an introduction.

It seemed to the love-stricken swain that that meeting never would eventuate. He would sit around the house now consulting the calendar, now watching the clock. It seemed that the brief wait of a few days encompassed an eternity. Finally, as the reward of patience and as the fates would have it, he met her. And at the very moment of the meeting he made an astounding discovery. The camera had falsified. She was not as good looking as her picture. She was a heap sight better looking! He stood there taking in her beauty like a hawk gazing for the first time at a masterpiece done by one of the old school of artists. He—well—

Why burden the reader with further details? The rest would be quite redundant to anyone who had a tinge of romance in his marital experience. Of course, when they finally met, she blushed and he stammered and felt rather awkward and talked and talked of the weather and the Einstein theory and a lot of other things far, far from the issue. And they kept doing this for several weeks and several months, until finally the swain made bold enough to ask the question which elicited such a happy reply. So, we will end it all as Grimm would say:

"And so they were married and will live happily ever after."

whether a person is or is not responsible in law for his act. For something done during a lucid interval, an occasional lunatic is considered to be as much responsible as an entirely sane person.

A partially insane person, such as those who suffer from delusions, but who, apart from the delusions, are of capable understanding, can only be considered irresponsible for what he does in consequence of his delusion. If A, for example, has the insane delusion that B is seeking to kill him, and that in self-defense he must kill B, and does so, he will not be guilty of murder. But the fact that A fancies he is the Cham of Tartary will not secure his acquittal if he poisons his wife. Doctors contend, however, that one delusion is sufficient to corrupt the whole mind, and it is absurd to say that a man with a delusion reasons and acts in a logical way.

Nearly akin to the defense of insanity is the defense of drunkenness, as to which it may be said that a drunken man must be presumed to have intended the natural consequences of his act, unless the jury is satisfied that his mind had been so affected by drink that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was likely to inflict serious injury. A case in point in which it had to be decided the liability of a man while drunk, had murdered a girl. It was such that temporary drunkenness, weakening the mental powers of the prisoner, was no defense, and that the criminal must be hanged.

It may be admitted that the legal test, then, is perfectly satisfactory, but they have been citizens at after long experience, and so far that breadth, have not succeeded in framing an alternative, would be at all practicable. It must not be forgotten, too, that in criminal cases the accused person has the protection of a jury, and the jury gives the prisoner the benefit if there is any real doubt as to whether he was sane or deranged at the time he committed the act, above

Gates to Open to Georgia's Isle of Romance

Highway Being Planned to Link Beautiful St. Simon's, Rich in Hallowed Traditions, With Mainland at Brunswick

Federal Aid Seems Assured for Causeway and Bridges Survey to Start Soon.

BY ST. ELMO MASSENGALE.

Hallowed traditions of Georgia, splendidly abundant in a spot which is destined to become the playground of the southland, will be more closely knit to this commonwealth when St. Simon's Island has been girt to the mainland and the network of highways which traverse it from every nook of the nation. This condition, often dreamed of, is no longer theory—active minds are planning its physical consummation.

There is no place along the whole wide sweep of the Atlantic coast, from the fisheries of Newfoundland to the keys of Florida, which is more blessed with memories of sturdy pioneers and scenes of worthy deeds. The sheer beauty of the isle, its flawless beach, its luxuriant vegetation, makes it an off-set earthly paradise worthy of treasuring these things. Climate, beauty, situation, glorious history—all these things make it an ideal goal for seekers after wholesome life in God's outdoors and at the same time have made it one of Georgia's greatest natural possessions.

It has been a slight disadvantage in accessibility, most likely, which has made Georgians unaware of their treasure there. A boat trip from Brunswick, the Glynn county port—not a long trip, but one which creates a complexity in schedules with railroads from the state's interior—is now needful for the man who reaches the island. The plan of linking the island to Brunswick and the Glynn mainland by a causeway tangent to the Dixie highway will solve that, the only difficulty. That consummation reached—an Atlanta business man may breakfast in Atlanta and reach the island for late dinner, or may dine in Atlanta and have breakfast with his family at their summer cottage on the beach.

FEDERAL AID FOR PROJECT PROBABLE.

The survey of the project, which is tentatively outlined in a map appearing on this page, is just about ready to begin. Thirty days. It is estimated, will be required for the survey's completion. The best routes available, the most feasible disposition of the problem of crossing the expanse of marsh and the intervening rivers, the number of bridges necessary and the probable cost of the plan—these are things which will be threshed out in the intensive survey.

Constant Miller, chairman of the Glynn county board of commissioners, is confident that federal aid will be secured in building the highway. Mr. Miller recently conferred with authorities of the government against the proposition, and was assured that the project was considered of paramount importance to the state.

Though the decision is not definite, it is believed that road bonds for the project will be voted by the county of Glynn on completion of the survey. One possibly deterrent factor, which has been mentioned by Glynn countians, is that the county recently voted $350,000 in school bonds and may not be able to float the road issue.

It augurs great things for Georgia and for the southland, however, this imminent opening up of a natural treasure-trove, a wholesome playground. One cannot fail to be intrigued by the history of St. Simon's Isle—"the island," as it is affectionately known by those who have known its cooling breeze and its quiet, soothing qualities.

There is not a moss-bug, gray-bearded old oak on its expanse which does not yet whisper of deeds and men—James Edward Oglethorpe; John and Charles Wesley, patriots and pioneers of Methodism; Major Pierce Butler, Aaron Burr and scores of others. Sidney Lanier has limned the glorious beauty of what surrounds and is on the island in his "Marshes of Glynn." Owen Wister, known to modern days for the stern and virile beauty of his novel, "The Virginians," felt the impress of the island on his early-formed opinions and tastes. It is a wonderful place, a place which woos once and wins forever.

REPORT IS MADE ON PROJECT.

Glynn countians are alive to the highway need. The same wide-awake city of young men which made the bridge across the Altamaha at Darien possible are now concentrating their energies on a causeway to St. Simons. This calls for an engineering project of size, but not of complexity. It may be that the county of Glynn will vote bonds to sling the causeway across the marshes from Brunswick's outskirts. If that is not done, then there is ready an open corporation which will complete the project. This body of men are interested in the accessibility of St. Simons to the south and are organized to assure it. Engineers have gone over the ground and have pronounced the plan feasible.

According to unofficial, but authoritative estimates made on the project, a highway may be constructed and bridges installed—using creosoted piling and first-class cypress decking, strictly high-grade material—for approximately $214,000, or, built under state highway specifications, with reinforced concrete piers, at a cost of about $400,000.

This will be done, Georgians might as well know what this will give them.

It will give them, for one thing, a place in which the climate of Georgia, at its best, its very best, may be enjoyed amid scenes wild with the sort of dreamy beauty that the Creator, in His greatness, placed there.

Close to the gulf stream, St. Simons possesses a temperature equally moderated against the heat of summer and the chill of winter. All the semi-tropical fruits, flowers, trees and shrubs abound in riotous confusion. Satsuma oranges, the exotic pomegranate, the grape of California, Smyrna figs, raspberries, strawberries, dewberries, blackberries and succulent fruits grow to perfection and the broad beaches of the isle bound potential fortunes in these things. Animal life thrives—chickens, hogs and cattle would offer media of fortune-winning on the island.

The gentle breezes of the gulf stream are both conducive to the health of the human body and conducive to the sturdy and rapid growth of plant life. A well-distributed annual rainfall keeps the island shimmering with green the long year round and aids in moderating that climate which is so marvelous for that one who seeks the invigoration of St. Simons outdoor life. The fact that a large number of America's richest men have selected Jekyll and Cumberland islands for their homes—as spots in which nature has done her greatest work—is a testimonial enough, for they lie within a short sail of St. Simon's, both visible from St. Simon's shores.

SECTION SELECTED BY MILLIONAIRES.

Here it is that the Carnegies, the Goulds, the Morgans, the Rockefellers, the Cranes and dozens of others whose family names are international by words have established their homes. Jekyll Island club, with its 100 members, is probably the most exclusive and the best known rich men's club in America.

The flowing artesian wells on the island furnish an abundance of pure water and enable truck farmers to irrigate their land—if this expedient should ever become necessary. Sea Island cotton is another valuable product, which the St. Simon's climate grows in rare plenty. The isolation of the island and the fact that there is no cotton on the mainland nearby combine to the elimination of the boll weevil on the island, and the cotton that is now being grown there sells for from three to four times as much as the upland or short staple cotton. Another tribute to the healthfulness and perfection of the climate is the fact that the United States government is considering St. Simon's as a location for a colony of disabled soldiers being trained vocationally for agricultural pursuits. It is planned to place these world war veterans on approximately ten acres of land, where, owing to the year-round climate and the adaptability of the soil, ten acres will produce a livelihood for a sizable family.

The beach on St. Simon's has no peer in America; its broadness and its unspoiled smoothness is unsurpassed. Prominent Georgians from Atlanta, Macon, Brunswick, Waycross and other cities of the state have their summer cottages there. Their loyalty to St. Simon's is immutable; "the island," as they affectionately know it, is their shrine for the worship of earth's wholesome things. Maxfield Parrish, world-famed painter, master of color and effect, keeps an establishment there. Several hotels operate the year through.

HISTORIC POINTS OF INTEREST.

Silent and impressive above the estuary of the Altamaha river, on St. Simon's, stands the oldest historic ruin in Georgia, Fort Frederica. The date, 1735, still bears witness and recalls to memory the things done here before even Savannah had emerged from the wooden shanty stage. Close by stood Oglethorpe's home and although the vestiges of the town which once dignified this spot have crumbled away, the atmosphere still reminds the thoughtful and patriotic Georgian of that humanitarian. Fittingly, there is now an orphan's home on the island, reminiscent of the philanthropy which brought James Edward Oglethorpe to Georgia to found the colony for oppressed countrymen of his.

Between the old fort and the sea was fought the picturesque battle of Bloody Marsh. Here it was that Oglethorpe, backed by a handful of the bravest of the brave, stemmed the tide of the Spanish invasion, thereby dedicating America to Anglo-Saxon traditions and privileges of race.

Methodism was born on St. Simon's—the eloquence of the Wesleys and the goodness of them both—John and Charles—filled once the sacred chapel of Christ church, Frederica. It was here that John preached his gospel and Charles sang his holy hymns, though it was some years later in London that the great Wesleyan movement was formally and determinedly launched.

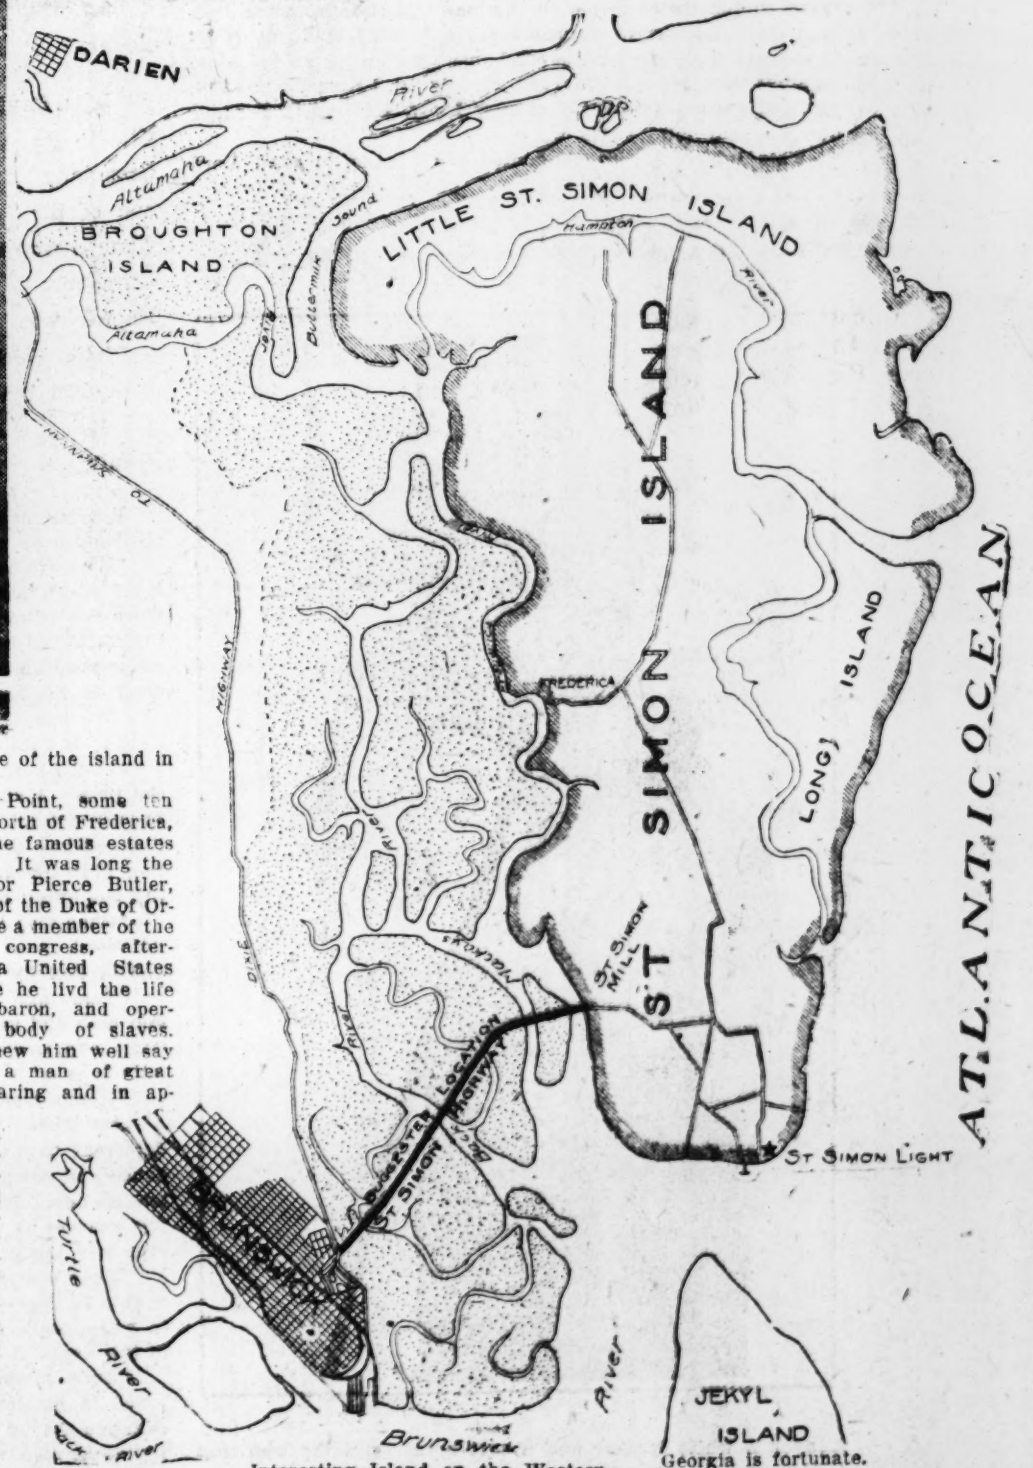

A recent brief history of St. Simon's and its traditions, compiled by Lucien Lamar Knight, state historian and author of many valuable volumes on Georgia lore, tells an interesting tale of the island in this wise:

"Hampson's Point, some ten miles to the north of Frederica, was one of the famous estates of the island. It was long the home of Major Pierce Butler, a descendant of the Duke of Ormond, one time a member of the Continental congress, afterwards twice a United States senator. Here he lived the life of a planter-baron, and operated a large body of slaves. Those who knew him well say that he was a man of great dignity of bearing and in appearance a typical soldier. He was trained in the English army and sent to America, was stationed at Boston. But, resigning his commission, he settled in a plantation, where he vigorously espoused the cause of the colonies.

"But other memories invest Hampton's Point. To this secluded spot on the Georgia coast came Aaron Burr. It was during the days when his political fortunes were in eclipse and when an asylum was sought by the ill-starred man of genius who once held the high office of vice president of the United States. The duel with Hamilton had proved his undoing. But despite there was nevertheless a warm welcome for the old statesman under the roof of Major Butler's home on St. Simon's."

Another man who knew St. Simon's to love it well was the late Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., whose beautiful description of the island can be found in his book, "The Most more than 100 prominent men who compose the St. Simon's Development company, and their holdings are incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000. W. Jennings Butts is president of the corporation. R. L. Phillips is its vice president, and F. M. Twitty is secretary and treasurer.

In the upper left, shown shrouded amid the gray old oaks, is Christ church, Frederica, founded in 1735 by the two Wesleys, John and Charles, beginners of Methodism. At the upper right is pictured the old fort, built by Oglethorpe in 1735. Fort Frederica, the bulwark that aided in stopping the Spanish invasion. In the center, at the left, is shown the wide sweep of beach on Long Island on St. Simon's, and at the right is the proposed site of the bridge which will connect St. Simon's with the mainland—the Long Island entrance. W. J. Dabney, mayor of Decatur, and Ray White, Atlanta journalist, stand in the giant oak at the lower left to demonstrate the size of trees on the island, and just to the right is shown the marble slab which marks the field of the famed battle of Bloody Marsh.

The map below, the work of Knox T. Thomas, of Atlanta, gives the best impression of the proposed link which will connect Brunswick, Georgia, and consequently America, with the island. It is now necessary to round the marsh west of Brunswick and through the Brunswick river reach the island by boat, landing just east of St. Simon's light.

Interesting island on the Western Hemisphere—the title a tribute which is significant and which is another reason why this volume should be known by Georgians.

The historic old Butler plantation at Hampton Point comes under the plans embraced in the island's development. An 18-hole golf course is mapped out, a hunting and fishing club is in the progress of organization—an organization to be limited to 500 families, each owning its own lot and home.

Long Island, already purchased by the St. Simon's Development company, has a five-mile stretch of beach which is 500 feet wide at low tide. The stretch of beach here is perfect; wide boulevards and extensive landscape gardening will create here a new Eden. There are Georgia is fortunate. First, because she possesses such a spot on her coast; and then because the wide-awake county of Glynn and its thriving citizens, the state of Georgia and citizens throughout its length and breadth, and a federal government are coming to the realization that St. Simon's, girt to the Georgia mainland by a causeway which will make it the whole state's property, not just that of those who have the time to reach it, will be an asset above valuation.

Its climate will soothe away the ills of man, its beauty will delight the most aesthetic. Like Paris, there is within its extent some spot, some quality to suit the every mood of man, something to satisfy,

How the Picturesque Revival of the "Code Duello" Is Imperilling the Stability of Various Domestic Triangles by Forcing a More Sudden and Conclusive Ending to Affairs Where Honor Is Involved Than Orderly and Slow Moving Judicial Methods Have Been Able to Produce

By Thomas B. Sherman.

WILL the Code Duello replace the Divorce Court? Will affairs of honor be submitted hereafter to private combat rather than judicial arbitration? A serious suggestion to this effect was advanced a few days ago in England by Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny, hereditary knight of a and lately conspicuous by virtue of having challenged his kinsman, Lord Kenyon, to mortal combat.

At about the same time the European press carried an article telling of a duel between two Parisian students in the Bois de Boulogne; the American newspapers told of how two Pennsylvania women had fought a duel to the death with pistols over a man, and an American tourist lately returned from England declared that the story of a private duel between a British M. P. and a London barrister was the talk of London though it had never appeared in print.

Furthermore, though no one of any prominence has come out openly in defense of Sir Claude's advocacy of duelling, a number of jurists have taken him seriously enough to denounce the suggestion as barbaric. And there is reason to believe that these jurists were right when they contended that Sir Claude's example might have a widespread effect upon the minds of romantic and emulous youth the world over.

However that may be, there seems to be no doubt in anybody's mind, that Sir Claude meant what he said when he called for the return of the duel and also when he challenged Lord Kenyon.

Sir Claude is now 75 years old and he is still active. His career has included service in the British army and navy, in the German cavalry during the Franco-Prussian war, duty in South Africa and numerous private adventures. His affair with Lord Kenyon goes back two generations and had its inception in the disposition of his estates, which Sir John Tyrrel, their common ancestor, made in his will.

Wrote Insulting Letters to Kinsman

Sir John was the last of his line and he had no male children. One of his daughters was Lady de Crespigny, mother of Sir Claude. Another daughter married a man named Tufnel. Sir John neglected Lady Crespigny altogether in his will, much to the surprise and the chagrin of Sir Claude, and left the bulk of his property to Tufnel. Upon the death of Col. Tufnel, son of Sir John's eldest daughter, the property passed into the hands of Lord Kenyon, the grandson of Lady Harleek.

This further enraged Sir Claude, especially when it was made evident to him that he was no longer welcome at Bortham Hall, the Tyrrel ancestral home, and he made no effort to conceal it. He wrote several insulting letters to his kinsman but they were all ignored. Finally Lord Kenyon, in 1916, married a daughter of Col. Henry Lloyd Howard C. B., and about a year later twins were born to them.

This interesting event incited Sir Claude to mail Lord

"An Affair of Honor," the Famous Painting by Emile Bayard, Said to Have Been Inspired by the Sensational Duel with Rapiers as Weapons, Fought by Mme. Duchesne and Mlle. Borand in Paris at a Time When the Duel was an Established Institution.

Kenyon a white feather and a curt note reminding him that the father of newly arrived twins was certainly vigorous enough to fight his country's battles even though he was 50 years old when the war broke out. But Sir Claude's anger reached its climax one day when he was strolling through the Burlington galleries and discovered a painting of Lord Kenyon in which the latter was dressed in khaki and carried many medals on his breast.

Sir Claude straightway sent Lord Kenyon a savage letter, denouncing such a display on the part of a man who had "neglected his country's service" in the world war and who had never earned anything but "Piccadilly medals." All of these communications and the challenge to mortal combat were persistently ignored which fact perhaps, may account for Sir Claude's lamenting the "decline of manners and honor" in the British empire.

Without attempting to gainsay the benefits of advancing civilization he sorrowfully holds that chivalry has departed.

"We have lost much," said Sir Claude in the recent statement which attracted so much attention. "Manners are no more the unflinching practice of life; no gentleman is permitted to uphold his honor as a gentleman should—by the duel; our schoolboys no longer fight; while a woman's name is bandied about in the clubs and the defenders of her honor are few.

"We have become ultra-refined and too much refinement is bad; it robs us of courage, one of the highest of the virtues. The namby-pamby, that is what we are heading for all the time. A stand-up fight at a public school occurs perhaps once in a term. Differences of opinion are subject to arbitration. When boys fought out their differences with bare fists they grew up into men. Many a fight in my young days meant the beginning of a lifelong friendship.

"Gone also are the powers by which a woman's honor was defended, gone are the chances for a gentleman to obtain satisfaction for an insult.

"Years ago a distinguished gentleman walked into a London club and said: 'Gentleman, dueling has been forbidden.' Some one answered him at once: 'Sir, then no small man's wife is safe.'

"It was true. In the good old days a woman's honor was a great trust. Today it is as nothing. Then the duel was a deterrent to men who would attack the prestige of a man's house and compromise his wife. Today the divorce court deters no one. What personal satisfaction can a man gain from the wearers of wig and gown? Indeed, how many of us can even pay the price of entry into the courts of law.

"They are inadequate places, these courts of ours, totally unable to deal with personal matters. There is only one way to settle such matters—the old-fashioned way—by recourse to the weapons of gentlemen.

"Society would be cleaner and finer today if a man injured in his honor were thus to seek redress. And if the example set by cultured society improved, the actions of its imitators also would improve. Instead we witness a series of disgusting scenes, such as a fight in the park between a nobleman and another in the presence of their lady friends, or an outburst of thrashing in the most famous club in Piccadilly. Surely such occurrences must give rise to the question as to whether the abolition of the law of duelling has been an unmixed blessing."

Sir Claude evidently was at great pains to inculcate his ideas of honor in his children—and a particularly exuberant example thereof was his eldest son, also Sir Claude, or better known as Capt. de Crespigny. If it were possible, the younger Crespigny was even more intrepid and adventurous than his father, though many of the actions that marked the latter part of the younger man's career and the final act of suicide are commonly attributed to a tragic love affair—tragic on both sides, for the girl had also killed herself.

Capt. de Crespigny was silent about women and the story of his love for the wife of his cousin, Loftus le Champion, has never been revealed in any detail. But carrying out his father's idea of honor, he challenged Loftus le Champion to a duel when he heard the latter had visited indignities upon the woman he loved—even though the woman happened to be le Champion's wife. A compromise between the two was finally reached whereby they fought it out with their fists. This fight, which was much more sanguinary than many a duel with lethal weapons, took place at Hurlingham Field, where the American polo team recently played, during the progress of a match.

A short time afterward Mrs. le Champion brought suit for divorce on the grounds of cruelty. Her husband filed a counter suit naming de Crespigny as co-respondent, but lost the action. A month later Mrs. le Champion killed herself with poison.

After that Capt. de Crespigny's life was one continuous gamble with death.

Performed Many Brave Deeds

Was there a man-killing horse within five hundred miles of London? De Crespigny, as soon as he heard of it, started off to ride and conquer the animal or be conquered. He always conquered. At the outbreak of the Boer war the young officer immediately went to the front with his regiment, the Second Life Guards. It became apparent from the first that he was inviting death—but he was too good a sportsman to kill himself then. He wanted to give his Fate a fair chance.

Invariably he rode in advance of the battle line and always upon a white charger. In addition he constantly brought into play a pair of silver-mounted field glasses, which glinted in the sun like a heliograph.

Wounded once, he returned to his troops with the wound still unhealed and walked out between the lines to rescue two private soldiers. On this occasion he was shot three times and left for dead on the field. He was miraculously saved by surgeons who finally located him.

After the war he returned to London and continued his reckless adventures. He joined a fire brigade and risked his life many times in the flames. He went to India and made a practice of tracking down big game with an automatic pistol. He was wounded several times in this simple pastime and later, in 1903, he took the chance of fighting savages with the West Africa frontier forces. The story of how Crespigny with only an automatic and a rifle held back for hours four or five hundred tribesmen armed with poisoned arrows is still one of the legends of Africa. He was wounded severely and again sent home.

In 1910 De Crespigny came to the United States with the British polo team and played at Lakewood, N. J., where he was the guest of George Gould. It was on this trip that he tried to persuade Blondin, the tight-rope walker, to carry him across Niagara Falls on his back. Blondin refused. A month later, in beautiful Northamptonshire, De Crespigny killed himself. It was exactly fifteen years after the death of the woman he loved, during which period he had courted death many times.

He was last seen alighting from a train at Kingscliff. His body was found near a woodland bench. Being unable to win any other way he had clogged the dice.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that he had shot himself while temporarily insane from illness and past wounds, but his friends knew better. It was at Kingscliff that he first met the wife of his cousin before she was married. It was his last duel and he preferred to give the contest to his adversary.

Though duelling was primarily a French institution, it flourished in England during the pristine days of knighthood and for many years after the trial by combat was abolished. Naturally it was brought over to the American colonies and was the invariable means by which gentlemen of the early days of the republic settled points of honor. Statesmen and politicians had frequent recourse to the code and there was hardly a prominent public man of the latter part of the eighteenth and the first part of the nineteenth century who hadn't at least received a challenge.

The most celebrated duel in American history, however, was that in which Aaron Burr killed Alexander Hamilton. The result of this duel was a profound shock to America and to England as well and really marked the decline of dueling in the states.

The causes of this duel, as of most of the encounters of that time, were political. Hamilton had been secretary of the treasury, had been appointed ambassador at Paris and aspired to the presidency. Hamilton was also the recognized leader of the Federalist party, which was then rapidly giving ground to the newly-risen Democratic party led by Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, who was then vice president. Burr also aspired to the presidency.

Hamilton's attacks on Burr are conceded to have been unusually bitter. One of his statements about his opponent was printed in a pamphlet issued by a Dr. Cooper. A quotation was to this effect: "Gen. Hamilton and Dr. Kent say they consider Col. Burr a dangerous man and one unfit to be trusted with the reins of government."

Burr called on Hamilton for a retraction. Hamilton countered by saying that his animadversions on the political character of his opponent had been many and it would be futile and undignified for him to try to recall every speech he had ever made. Burr still insisted that Hamilton should issue a general denial and when Hamilton refused on the ground that the statements had been political and not personal, Burr sent his seconds to call on his enemy.

It is perfectly clear from the records that Hamilton did not want to fight the duel and that he had determined, if forced into it, that he would make no effort to harm his adversary. He asked Mr. Nathaniel Pendleton to act for him and he gave Mr. Pendleton a statement in which he again declared that he had meant no strictures on the honor of Mr. Burr. Mr. William P. Van Ness, who was acting for Mr. Burr, refused even to look at this statement, declaring that any attempts at reconciliation should have been made prior to the issuance of the challenge. This action of Van Ness was widely condemned after the duel.

When Hamilton saw that a meeting was inevitable he drew up another statement to be handed to his wife in the case of his death. In this he made it clear that he was going into the duel very much against his principles and his inclinations;

Duel Displace Divorce?

The Duel Between Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr. (Reproduced from an old print.)

His religious and moral scruples were against dueling that his duty to his family and his creditors dictated that the act. Nevertheless, he felt that his honor and future usefulness demanded that he go on with the affair. The duel was fought July 11, 1804, in the valley just below Chawken Heights, N. J. Principals and seconds came up on foot. When they faced each other Hamilton never raised a hand, at least not until he had been struck. He gave a hand plunged forward and as he did so the twitching of muscles discharged his pistol, the ball clipping the tops of nearby trees.

It was obvious from his action that Hamilton had no intention of firing on Burr. This was confirmed in the letter to his wife, in which he said: "I will reserve and throw away my first fire." Burr on the other hand took deliberate aim.

Afterward declared that he felt confident of killing his opponent and let it be known that nothing less than Hamilton's death would have satisfied him.

Both participants were criticized—Hamilton for going on with the duel when dueling was against his moral principles; Burr for deliberately prosecuting the affair in the face of Hamilton's evident desire for a reconciliation.

Burr afterward became involved in plots against the government which were considered reasonable. He was tried and convicted of this charge at Richmond, Va. He died a disgraced man.

Though Hamilton was known to be against the practice of dueling, he previously served in one as the second to Col. John Laurens when that officer fought with Gen. Charles Lee. It was that Col. Laurens took exception to remarks that Lee had made about Gen. Washington, following an episode at the battle of Monmouth when the commander in chief had censured Gen. Lee. This episode is known as one of the few occasions when Gen. Washington resorted to lurid language.

Gen. Lee never retracted his remarks about the commander in chief but merely contended that they were meant as technical criticism and did not indicate a lack of respect. The principal in this duel fired a shot which failed of effect. The seconds got together then and agreed that honor had been satisfied and the meeting should be called off, which it was. Another pathetic and ironic circumstance connecting Alexander Hamilton with the institution of the dueling was the fact that his son, Philip, had previously been killed in a duel the self-same spot where his father fought. Philip, it is noted, objected to remarks made by G. J. Baker, one of his father's political opponents. He attacked Baker in the lobby theater in New York. The challenge and the duel followed.

Faints On Hearing of Son's Death

When the elder Hamilton heard of the meeting he started the scene, but news of the result reached him before he lived. It is said that he fainted when he heard that his son was dead.

There were many challenges and many encounters after that, but after a while it became more and more the custom for public men to refuse challenges. In this they were supported by public sentiment which was beginning to hold that institution was barbarous.

Long after duels had been forbidden by law in England, France and the United States, affairs of honor were frequent. Though of late years they were mostly bloodless and winked at by the authorities. Occasionally, however, mortal encounters took place.

The celebrated Caillaux case, according to general opinion, would have ultimately resulted in a duel between Joseph Caillaux, minister of finance, and Gaston Calmette, editor of the Paris Figaro, had not Mrs. Caillaux taken affairs in her own hands by shooting Calmette.

The Figaro's attacks upon Caillaux's administration of his office were exceedingly bitter and as is the custom in France were not confined to Caillaux's public acts. His private life, and particularly his relationship with Mme. Caillaux before they were married, were brought in. This, it was generally believed, was what finally inspired Mrs. Caillaux to take the step she did.

The Caillaux trial was the sensation of Europe, not only because of the flagrant details made public concerning the amours of Mrs. Caillaux, but because Calmette had openly charged Caillaux with holding secret traffic with the Germans. This was just before the outbreak of the war in 1914.

At one stage of the trial a dispute which arose over the admission of love letters from Mrs. Caillaux to her husband when the latter was married to another woman, became so heated that one of the judges sent his seconds to wait upon the other. Judge Louis Albanel, the presiding judge, moved an adjournment at the point when it looked as if the letters would have to be admitted. First Associate Judge Dagoury leaned over and said: "Sir, you are dishonoring us."

The next day Judge Albanel challenged Judge Dagoury. Friends of both, however, prevailed upon them to abandon the encounter although several publications accused the presiding judge of favoring the defendant.

Madame Caillaux was not the first French woman to take what she considered an abrasion of her honor in her own hands. A Madame Duchesne, one of the ladies-in-waiting at the court of Louis Philippe, called out a Mlle. Baraud because of a slur on her character, but, according to the story, when Mlle. Baraud pinked her adversary on the wrist and saw the flow of blood she became so unnerved that she fainted. Honor was satisfied, however.

This affair leaked out and caused much comment favorable, unfavorable and satirical. It was said by some mocker that the ladies of France had established a precedent in fighting and had written a new article into the Code Duello by fainting at the same time. As a matter of fact, formal duels between women was no new thing to history.

In Denmark during the early middle ages it was the custom for women to take up arms against any one, male or female, who impugned their honor. In other countries, however, especially in the more exalted circles, it was the custom for the lady to yield the privilege of defending her honor to some favorite among her suitors.

A curious revival of the women's duel occurred recently in Pennsylvania when Mrs. Careta Noey and Miss Turley of Edenborn, Pa., met in the presence of a man whose name hasn't been divulged—a man whom both women loved. The man, it appeared, had called upon Mrs. Noey at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rane. Suddenly, Miss Turley appeared. After a heated argument the two women, both of whom had evidently come prepared, withdrew to a fixed distance and opened fire upon each other. Mrs. Noey dropped to the ground with a bullet near her heart. She was sent to a hospital in Uniontown and died without making a statement.

Though many historians have contended that dueling is as old as man and seek to prove their contention by referring to celebrated encounters such as that between David and Goliath, the formal meeting with seconds and under the provision of a code is a comparatively recent institution.

Undoubtedly it was the outgrowth of the judicial trial by combat, an early and rather crude method of determining the guilt of any accused person. It is recorded that in the year 501, Gondebald, king of the Burgundians, passed a law authorizing the wager of battle and giving as his reason the belief that God would give strength to the contestant who was in the right and therefore make the result infallible. Trial by combat persisted in many European countries until as late as 1385 when, after a man named Legris had been defeated in one of these judicial combats and hanged—the guilty person confessed. This was in France. Thenceforth, the duel in France ceased to be an appeal to Heaven and became a satisfaction of wounded honor.

But whereas trial by judicial combat got its start in Germany, the Code Duello was born in France where it never has as a matter of fact died out completely.

Will France come out openly with its duels that are now fought under cover? Will English gentlemen abandon the court of law and go back to lethal weapons? Will American women follow the example of the Danish maidens and their more recent sisters in Pennsylvania?

The frank avowal of Sir Charles Crespieny, the frequent duels which have taken place in several European countries and the startling case of two American women make the question at least seriously debatable.

The INFERNAL MACHINE

By F. Britten Austin

Jake Bravinsky, Anarchist, Sits In at the Game of Death and Reaps an Ironical Reward.

IN that busy quarter of an hour ere the great liner—steam strident from the exhaust-pipes high up against the vast funnels, donkey-engines running for a preliminary test as they took up the slack of the cables to the attendant tugs—cast off from the landing-stage but few of the preoccupied passengers noticed the handcuffed man hurried by two detectives up the third-class gangway into the ship. Those that did shrank back uncomfortably. He stumbled up like a man on the way to execution, pale, haggard, withdrawn into himself, faculties numbed by the imminence of his fate. His eyes stared without seeing.

The two detectives hustled him below, into the depths of the ship, along electric-lit corridors where the light of day never came. A steward preceded them as a guide, indicating at last a cabin on the lowest berth-deck. The door was opened and he was thrust into the tiny apartment dimly lit by a porthole close under the roof, the river-water lapping green along its glass.

The prisoner stood stock-still where he was pushed, bereft apparently of voluntary motion with the limbs that shook helplessly as in an ague. His mean little face was immobilized almost to imbecility. One of the detectives stood over him, looked into his vacant eyes.

"Now! no nonsense, Jake—or we'll have to keep you tied up all the way," he said, imperiously. With that he unlocked the handcuffs. The prisoner's arms, freed, fell limply pendant. The detective turned and went out of the cabin.

The prisoner watched his exit with lack-luster eyes that stared in a vague and increasing horror as the sound of the key turning in the lock penetrated slowly to his consciousness. Suddenly, as though full perception released a spring in him, he leaped at the door.

"Let me out! Let me out! Let me out, I say!" he screamed at the top of his voice, hammering violently at the door. "Police!—police!—police!—Ere! Ere! Ere!—Come back!—Come back!"

His cry rang out on a piercing note of almost maniac terror, of extreme urgency of appeal. "I've got something to tell yer—I've got something to tell yer! Don't let 'er start! Don't let 'er start!—Oh, Gawd, don't let 'er start!—Ere! Ere! Come back!—Police!—Come back!"

He exhausted himself with a whirlwind of blows, hands and feet battering upon the closed door, with a flood of agonized appeals mingled with bloodcurdling curses that dropped suddenly to whispering humility and broke out again in a renewed fury of vehemence.

None answered him. The door remained closed. As he recoiled from it, gasping in despair and terror, he heard the shriek of the liner's siren in its last warning, the clank and rumble of cables paid out, the first thrub of her engines awaking to life. A swirl of water in motion darkened the glass disc of the porthole.

He sank down to a seat upon his bunk, breathing heavily as from wear and overstrained lungs, his pinched face a ghastly gray. His eyes fixed themselves, fascinated, upon that porthole which the disturbed water obscured from instant to instant. They had cast off, were moving out upon their voyage across the ocean.

The reaction from his intense effort left him gripped in paralyzing certitude of isolation, of abandonment, of utter impotence. Pinned here in this narrow steel cell far below decks, like a prisoner in an oubliette to be forgotten, cries and noise were alike useless; if heard, were only to be contemptuously ignored. Numbled to the core of him, he ceased to make a sound, sat vaguely staring before him into flitting mental pictures where his conscious intelligent intervened only by fits and starts.

He saw himself in the dilapidated parlor behind the boarded-up saloon in the squalid street beyond the dock-gates, saw once more the white, pinched face of the deformed little German-Jew chemist light up with evil triumph as he hoisted the heavy suitcase onto the table around which the "comrades" craned forward with eager interest. He saw him open it and, in a breathless silence, draw forth—a chunk of coal! The little Jew held it up for the appreciation of his companions.

"Here you are, comrades!" He heard again the throaty, malicious chuckle of the inventor's voice. "Cast in steel—I enameled it myself—and you can do vat you like vid it." He giggled like one diabolically insane. "You can drop it—you can hit it—you can do anything, you like vid it—except burn it!"

O'Donnell had taken it from him like a loving-cup and had gazed down upon it with almost affectionate admiration. "And if it should by accident be shoveled into a liner's furnaces, comrades?" he had asked, grimly facetious, in his pleasant tones, his phraseology emphasizing, as was his wont, the fact that he was a man of education.

"It will blow de belly out of her!" the little chemist had answered with a sudden violent ferocity. "Dose explosives—dey vill blow de belly out of de biggest ship dat efer sailed!"

O'Donnell had smiled amiably and, still holding aloft the chunk of pseudo-coal like a loving-cup, had looked around upon the clustered, gaunt faces of the "comrades" as though in selection of one to whom to give it.

"Comrades!" he had exclaimed, his soft voice never more mellifluous, "we are going to strike a real blow this time—one the blood-suckers will feel and remember! They shall know that the solidarity of labor is no vain boast!"

Neither in Jake Bravinsky's reverie of reminiscence, nor at the moment upon those eager faces craned towards the thing the big man held, was there any perception of unintended irony.

A longshoremen's strike was in progress, and the white-collared brigade recruited from the desks of the shipping company's skyscraper had sworn to turn the Gargantuan round and get her to sea again, with mails, passengers, bunker-coal and some at least of mined in the glare of the purple-white arc-lamps that painted her on the night as the volunteer gangs worked feverishly at her, shift relieving shift. The long line of warehouses in the deep contrasting shadow from that blaze blackened out the bottom of the picture—a blackness to which he crept and dodged, avoiding scrutiny, a heavy object close-hugged to his breast.

Then closer, viewed from a dark angle of the warehouse wall, he saw, in a proximity that dwarfed him, the towering sides of the great liner at the quayside, her gangways busy with hurrying diminutive figures absorbed in purposeful activity.

Below, on the quayside criss-crossed by railroad tracks, locomotives puffed and smiled that was no longer enigmatic, haunted him as he dodged out of the crowd of "scabs" and sped, at a run, down the squalid streets to that little boarded-up saloon. His heart thumped heavily and unsteadily in his breast as he gave the arranged sequence of knocks upon its muddled door.

He waited. It opened not. He knocked again and again waited. Still it remained shut, no sound or hint of life behind it. A quivering anxiety came up in him—surely they would have waited for his return?—Rosa, at least? What had happened? He knocked, more loudly, yet now sure in advance that there would be no response. The house echoed under his knock like a place deserted.

torted little soul behind the pinched and pallid face. He had done 'em! They hadn't found out! No matter what they did to him, he had got his revenge! He'd show 'em!

He gloated over the thought of that carload of bunker-coal pouring into the bowels of the Gargantuan, visualized, with an unholy glee, the more satisfying in that it was perforce secret, the great liner throbbing on her course, her thousands of unconscious passengers at ease on her multitudinous decks, serenely superior to the ordinary perils of the sea, until that inevitable moment when an unsuspecting stoker—hailed and loaded stokers and stokeholds with a fierce and personal hatred—hurled the shovelful of coal on to her furnace fire.

tongue swelled in a dry mouth incapable of articulation as he watched the magistrate's pen sign the order. He felt himself turn sick.

And now here he was—he came back to himself after his half-dreaming recapitulation of the episode leading up to his present situation—shut up in the depths of the great liner throbbing her way, with a powerful, steady whirring of her turbine engines, into the immensity of the ocean.

Yes, she was well upon her course now—he was experienced enough to diagnose the full-powered evenness of the revolutions which set every plate and girder and fitting of her in subdued vibration.

Down below—in these hellish stokeholds—the half-naked firemen were shoveling the coal into the white-hot glare of her furnaces, shoveling and again shoveling until at last one lump that left their shovels for its fiery bed . . . he jumped to his feet again in a shriek of terror, banged against the door with frenzied fists.

He went mad, felt himself going more and more mad, flung himself at that locked door in a whirlwind of blind, wild energies that swept through him as from a source beyond him. Voice, feet, and fists clamored for release from this trap, as, like a caged wild animal overmastered by its instincts, he hurled himself again and again against that door which would not open. For all response he might have been alone in a world destitute of man.

His blows ceased suddenly, with that brusque reaction of the psychically unstable, as though in an exhaustion of the reservoir of force which had poured so tumultuously through the open sluice-gates of his being. Physical weakness as he also was, he sank down, his brain drugged in the stupefaction of an immense fatigue.

He slept, while that gloomy little cell about him, deep down in the mighty organism, quivered with the rush of the great liner as she hurried out to sea.

How long Jake Bravinsky lay in blessed unconsciousness at the foot of that door he did not know. He was awakened by its opening, by a sudden glare as the electric light was switched on. One of the detectives stood over him, accompanying a steward who brought food.

With dulled faculties that fumbled for definition of the vague terror he knew to be somewhere in the back of his mind—what was it?—he rose stiffly to his feet, tottered to his bunk. Then, seated, he looked up at the detective and remembered. His teeth chattered in the shiver which came over him. His lips parted as if for sudden utterance, but he could only stare dumbly. What was it?—his brain began to work again—even if they turned round now the very next shovelful of coal might . . . he balked at exact imagination of the cataclysm.

His deep lying, bitter hatred of the law and its representatives surged up in him suddenly, presented to him doubtless by his subconscious self for solace, blotting out all else. Anyway, they were all in the same boat! They'd all go up, all down, together—no warning, no chance to summon help by wireless! He almost chuckled as he thought of that stolidly superior detective dead—dead and unsuspecting until the moment. They'd all go like that, the—! He grouped them, all of them, everybody that was not himself, in an ugly word for justification of his enmity.

After a glance around the cabin, a test of the screwed tight porthole, the detective motioned out the steward.

"Not so much of that noise now!" he said, standing over his prisoner, "or we'll tie you up and gag you for the rest of the trip—you understand?" There was genuine menace in his tone. The weary little wretch shrank back from him instinctively, the blood of two generations of gutter-thieves asserting itself in this close proximity to law personified. His bloodless lips quivered, but he made no sound.

After one last nod of significance the detective left him to his God, turned the key once more upon him.

The first mouthful nearly choked him, but then, hunger awaking at the taste, he ate ravenously, was still unsatisfied when all was finished.

The dishes he put down jarred and rattled with the pulsation of those mighty engines, far away and hidden, indefatigable, so sure and steady in their unvarying whirl and yet to him so full of menace. He sat crouched upon the edge of his bunk, staring vacantly at the door, his mind fixed upon the continuance of that faintly heard humming of the turbines, of that quivering vibration which pervaded the ship. At the back of his consciousness somewhere was a perception of the steady rise and fall of the floor beneath his feet, the slightly marked lateral cant, slowly righting itself, which spoke of the fact that they were already far out at sea. But he concerned himself not with their position.

The whirr of that machinery which drove them unflinchingly onward, which might at any moment cease, held him fascinated. At each moment he expected the all-shaking roar. Yet those whirling revolutions continued until their vibrations seemed to enter into him, to set his head whirling dizzily in a spin that was coincident with their own beyond his control.

His brain worked feverishly, as with an independent will, placing before him again and again pictures that he could not banish—the uprush of a sheet of flame, the heading plunging beneath waves dotted with human heads of the great liner, decks ripped open and funnels awry—himself in the cabin clinging.

Rosa Bauermann had turned her head towards him, Jake Bravinsky—had looked right into him so that he shuddered.

her cargo. They were going to make good, it seemed, thinks not a little to the strong force of police who protected them from the none too benevolent solicitude of the awkward-like workers who massed sullenly beyond the locked dock-gates. But not one of that grim little group in the dilapidated parlor was either a striker or a worker.

Neither Chlodzky, the Pole; Lipoff, the Russian, nor he, Jake Bravinsky, the weedy degenerate product of two generations in East End, London, had ever done a day's work in their lives except under the stern pressure of necessity or the law. He, Jake Bravinsky, urgently needing distance between him and the English police, had certainly assisted to fire the stoke-hold of a freighter all the way from Liverpool to New York—and when they arrived the chief engineer had met him half way and fired him.

That was his only recent occasion of labor, and done of the others could boast of activities less remote. Yet they were not conscious hypocrites, these men. Viewing themselves in the distorted mirrors of their souls, they were rather martyrs, they who preached, with fierce energies sustained on a meager pittance from mysterious sources, the Cause, the Red Revolution that should, in theory at least, glut the poverty-stricken with the wealth of their oppressors.

Red Revolutionaries also was Rosa Bauermann, the most fanatic, the least self-seeking of them all. He, Jake Bravinsky, could never look upon her without a little secret awe—and yet her ugly great gash of a red mouth, her blazing dark eyes, her bobbed black hair, fascinated him, stirred him to the depths.

"Whose shall be the honor?" Comrade O'Donnell had pursued, looking round upon the group, his pleasant, well-bred voice in ironic incongruity with his more than shabby appearance and the terrible implication of his query. "What comrade's hand shall deal the blow?"

And Rosa Bauermann had turned her head towards him, Jake Bravinsky, had looked upon him—had looked right into him so that he shuddered—with those great dark eyes that flashed enigmas. And Jake Bravinsky's little human soul was suddenly molten as though with volcanic fires—he had caught his breath with the strangeness of it, could not, for an agonized moment where Rosa Bauermann seemed like a brooding divinity that filled the room ready to bestow itself upon him daring, cry out his acceptance.

His own voice had sounded strange to him when he uttered it. "Give it 'ere, comrade!—I'll do the job! 'Aven't I done—?" and he had boasted vaingloriously of fire-raising and sabotage. He ventured a glance towards Comrade Rosa, found her still smiling in fierce appreciation, and boasted again. And Comrade O'Donnell had handed him the lump of pseudo-coal.

And then the next picture—the funnels and upper works of the Gargantuan vividly illu-shrieked as they butted their trains of clanking freight-cars, vehicle by vehicle, to the tips. Car after car, quipped on the platform of the cages, rose its twenty feet upon the elevator, heeled suddenly and discharged its black contents with a clattering, clanging roar, down the iron chute into the bunkers of the ship. Train beyond train of coal and merchandise stood ranged upon the sidings, awaiting its turn for sling or catamaran.

Towards one of those trains, the nearest, he crept stealthily from shadow to shadow, weak kneed fear and diabolical malice at conflict within him. He cursed, automatically, under his breath, in an escape of nervous tension, as he approached it. It stood engineless, unguarded, but to his disgust not one car of it was in the shadow.

For a moment he had hesitated, his burden heavy in his arms, in a temptation of relinquishment. Then the image of Rosa Bauermann, her smile of enigma turning upon him, had come up before him—and the fierce little chemist's exultant phrase, "Blow de belly out of her!" had echoed in strange depths of him an invocation that called up a flood of his bitter primitive hatred for these phenomena of a civilization from which he was excluded, and which he himself was impotent to create. The Sioux prowling around the stockade, the barbarian bursting in upon the monuments of Ancient Rome, ground their teeth even as he, in just such a blind, jealous rage of destruction.

During long minutes he had crouched in the shadow for his spring, awaiting opportunity! Then, in a temporary complete dereliction of that stretch of quays, he leaped forward to the nearest truck, the last in the train.

In the full illumination, the white ear number, the black on white of the large label—"24518"—"Bunker Coal—S. S. Gargantuan"—were vividly distinct before his vision, on a level with his eyes. He judged his distance and hurled the thing he carried. The lump of pseudo coal fell upon the heaped-up coal of the truck, indistinguishable from any other lump.

"Blow de belly out of her!"—the fiercely vindictive phrase of the little German-Jew cripple had rung in his ears as he turned and fled into the night.

Then the great moment of relief, when, a seemingly endless period of waiting in the shadows by the dock gate suddenly terminated, he had mingled with the crowd of a shift coming off work and under the protection of a posse of policemen had passed into the street where the sullen crowd of strikers congregated. His job was done—even now perhaps that artfully dissimulated canister of steel was sliding into the depths of the great liner like a germ of death unperceived but inevitable. Now to announce it to the comrades!

Then a policeman came round the corner, approached him with the measured, unhurried step of a patrol upon his normal beat. Jake waited not for that scrutiny he never dared confront. Whelmed in a disappointment that chilled his body, he had slunk away, a bitter curse upon his lips.

He was filled with a somber anger against his confederates as he shuffled off to the miserable garret which was his home. They had better not play any tricks on him—or, sure as Hell, he'd peach! He'd show 'em whether he, Jake Bravinsky, was a man to be trifled with! He had a little vision of the group of them, Rosa included, standing in the dock, himself as State's Evidence scorning their impotent rage. A variant of this picture was the last clear thought in his mind as he drew his ragged, dirty blanket over him and sank into a sleep that was the profound reaction after the strains of the day.

He had awakened with the touch of a hand upon his shoulder. His blind start from the bed was the instinctive movement of an animal habitually under menace and now trapped. He looked up, in a pang of terror, into the face bent over him, the heavy, impassive countenance of a policeman. As he glanced around him in the chill gray light of early morning he saw that his garret was abnormally people—another policeman behind the one who had awakened him, and, near the door, two men in plain clothes whom he instinctively recognized as from Scotland Yard.

"Come quietly, Jake," had said the voice from that face up to which he stared. "We've got you."

The tightening of the grip upon his shoulder bore in upon him the hopelessness of escape. He let himself relax, resigned himself.

"What's it for?" he had asked, sullenly. He remembered now, vividly, the sudden panic fear he had all but betrayed. Was it for his last night's job? The thought drove the blood from his heart—a life sentence loomed startlingly inevitable, life or little less. He had not dared to raise his eyes.

It was one of the plain-clothes men who had answered.

"I have a warrant for your arrest, Jake Bravinsky, on a charge of arson in Glasgow last May. I give you the usual warning."

Glasgow last May! He had almost shrieked mocking laughter in the revision of his relief.

A few hours later, shrunken between the two large policemen, he had shuffled into the dock of a District Police Court just commencing its business of the morning. The magistrate had glanced up at him with contemptuous indifference, registering him evidently as merely yet another of the miserable deadbeats presented to him by organized society for temporary elimination.

The magistrate could not suspect the exultant savage triumph which filled the dis-

Absorbed in this vision, he had scarcely heard the charge as it was read over to him. It concerned something very remote from him—he had almost forgotten that warehouse in Glasgow—the real, vital thing for which he was responsible was hidden from these blind fools. He exulted childishly. And they'd never know!—for once he was certain of immunity in his war against an unsympathetic world, for once he'd done 'em. He felt savagely contemptuous of the stolid policeman who gave evidence of arrest.

Then one of the plain-clothes men stood up in the court, addressed himself to the magistrate. What was he saying?

" . . . we should be obliged if you would make an order without adjournment of this case. We hold a warrant for the extradition of the accused." He passed it up to the magistrate.

"His presence in England is urgently required for trial with his confederates already arrested. We have retained a passage for him on the Gargantuan, which sails tomorrow morning."

The Gargantuan! The name, a cymbal-clash of significance, awoke him with a shock at the heart to full realizations of the detective's matter-of-fact request. The Gargantuan! Upon the moment he stood paralyzed in an awful terror, sweat peering upon him, his tongue dry in his mouth, yet impelled, almost beyond restraint, to shriek a protest. No! No!—Not the Gargantuan! He jerked a wild, eye-dilated glance around him, as though in a dread of visible appearance of the supernatural. The irony which condemned him to his own destruction was nothing less than this to his primitive mind. He gasped for his only sound.

Sitting alone down there in that bare cabin in the depths of the ship, his hands worked convulsively in repetition of his tense clutch upon the balustrade of the dock as he lived through the scene again—saw once more the magistrate nod his calm acquiescence.

Shriek out a warning? Would they believe him? He knew only too well that they would not. He had no proof—only his word, the word of a man obviously eager to postpone the processes of the law. Would the shipping company hold up the great liner, throw perhaps a hundred thousand dollars' worth of coal into the sea in despair of identifying the fatal lump, upon his mere assertion? He knew that they would not.

The most they would do would be skeptically to warn the firemen of the ship to keep a sharp lookout for any suspicious block of coal—and he could well appraise, none better, the futility of such casual inspection. And even if they listened—even if, improbably, he dodged the voyage of the Gargantuan, he would be assuredly shot or stabbed later on for his betrayal. He knew the "comrades." Either way he was in a trap. And, had he decided to shriek out the truth, he could not physically have done so. His

HOW THE "JUG ELEVATORS" WORK

By TRENTON TOMMY.

THE author of this article is well known to the editors of this magazine. He is an convict. For fifteen years he was regarded as one of the most dangerous and successful bank burglars in the country. He has seen the bars of five prisons. He quit criminality years ago and his career since has been remarkable. An opportunity was given him in one of the leading industries and through his vigor and ability he climbed to a leading position. This man does not claim to be reformed in the religious sense of the word. He fell in with a robber gang when little more than a boy; he had been loosely brought up though of respectable parents, and the lure of adventure kept him from the truth. Then he began to think and quickly abandoned his bad ways. But respectability, while it divorced the man from his old haunts and habits and associates, hardly severed his interest from the life that once was his and those that were his comrades. Some of the men he writes about here, without naming names, were his companions, sharing with him the perils of nightly forays. He has been out of touch with them personally but not with their world, and the developments of bank robbing.)

THE figures got out by the bankers' associations and the insurance companies show a great increase in the number of bank holdups. To one who watches criminal developments superficially this must be surprising, for it is a return to the methods of Jesse James and the old bandits, and a step backward from the attack on banks by means of explosives and other scientific instruments. I don't know just what the official figures show and I don't care, for they are rarely accurate or honest. But the fact is there have been more and bigger bank stickups in the last three years than in any ten-year period preceding. In fact, there has been a gradual change, within ten or twelve years, whereby the daylight holdup has taken the place of the night attacks by explosives. The yegg had yielded place to the gun, as the underworld would put it; the burglar has been displaced by the bandit. Between thirty and forty years ago there was the diametrically opposite movement, for then nitroglycerine was coming into use among robbers, and banditry almost died out.

We must not suppose that bank burglary has died out. Far from it. It has actually increased, if one considers the amount of losses. But the number of burglaries or safe blowings has undoubtedly declined in ratio to the number of holdups. And I should not be surprised if there are now actually fewer safe jobs, even in spite of the enormous increase in crime which the country has suffered in the last four or five years. It seems to me that the "petes" of the banks around the country are not being popped open with such frequency as in the old days when I myself was responsible for the demolition of many a one. Then the bank and Post Office vaults and safes used to be ripped open nightly all through the South and West and Middle West. I can remember with sad mirth the reports of the bankers' associations in those days. They would grudgingly admit seventy or eighty or a hundred burglaries for the current year, when I could count up twice as many committed by the gangs of my own acquaintance. I remember, too, a bank from which we took about $55,000 in cash. At the end of the year the total loss was officially reported as $5,000. Such concealments have their purpose, no doubt. I merely want to show how inaccurate published figures are.

But if there is anything certain about the business of robbing it is that holdup is now the growing thing and burglary the declining. This is only the general truth. In the rural districts the nocturnal form of attack still is the more popular. In large towns and cities the holdup is the whole thing.

Here is another point: A decade and two decades ago the banks in big cities were considered absolutely immune from the attacks of robbers. No yegg attempted to break open the safe of a big city money house. But the coming or return of the holdup has changed all this, and city institutions are being attacked with considerable success. One has only to recall that Hamby, or some one else, held up a bank successfully in New York City, a thing once deemed impossible.

There are three reasons for the change from nocturnal burglary to daylight banditry. They are the Liberty bond, the automobile, and the screwdoor safe.

The Liberty bond has had the effect of increasing bank attacks of all sorts. Every financial house has some stock of these securities which are as readily convertible as cash itself, the Government having lately added to their negotiability by ruling that the responsibility to the purchaser ended with the transaction. Burglars have found it profitable to attack banks which were formerly considered not worth while, either because the amount of cash on hand was too small or the safe too good. But to-day the smallest bank in the tiniest town will have $15,000 or $20,000 on hand, counting cash and Government bonds. And the banks formerly shunned by burglars because they were equipped with too good safes are now often favorite "marks" because bonds are generally not locked in the safe but left in the vault, which is nearly always easy to "crash." In many cases burglars have contented themselves with breaking into the vaults where safe deposit boxes are kept and there torn open the boxes and made off with the bonds of the depositors, leaving the bank's safe undisturbed.

The holdup man finds the same advantage in the Liberty bonds, for he can now count on not only the usual amount of cash but the bonds in addition. Their presence makes a bold and dangerous raid well worth the risk.

The automobile, which I name as the second agency tending to increase holdups, has been generally misunderstood and misvalued as an aid to the criminal. I have read a good deal about yegg men in the rural districts or the farming States such as Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska and all the South, using automobiles, and it is possible that some rash fellows have employed motors in this way. But no really experienced bank man could sensibly use cars for his work, because he must stick to the roads for his getaway and the telegraph can head him off at a hundred places in his flight, because he can be pursued in other cars; and because every farmer along the line has some sort of machine to keep up the pursuit. Cross-country flight in a motor car is not possible. The men who are blowing the banks are still getting as far as they can on the freight trains before dawn, and then "taking to the woods." The cross-country getaway afoot is still the correct practice among burglars of banks.

But in cities it is another matter, and it is there the motor car has been used effectively by the stickup men. It is an easy matter to get lost to the police in the urban traffic, to dodge around corners, circle in and out and finally rush into some garage kept by a confederate or an innocent party, there abandoning the car and scattering the gang with the divided loot.

But the most powerful agency of all in bringing about the change in bank attacks from burglary to holdup has been the screwdoor type safe, or so it seems to me. This defensive device for banks has been coming into use for the last fifteen years and I can remember well when it began to be used and how its introduction was brought about.

Before explaining, it is necessary to say that the screwdoor style safe is practically proof against explosives and that the instances in which burglars have succeeded in attacking this type of safe are almost nil. I can recall only one. This is not because such a safe cannot be opened with nitroglycerine, but because the time required for the job is too great. It takes five to six hours to blow open such a safe and the chest inside. The nocturnal robber has not so much time. Again, because of the many castings or sheetings of steel used in the door of such safes, the robber is forced to fire forty to fifty shots of nitro against the defensive armor, and his chance of alarming the town thus becomes too great.

So the screw door safe has the burglar foiled for the time being. That is far from saying that it has the bank burglar problem solved. The robbers are rapidly evolving new forms of attack, and the daylight holdup is one of them. But I was speaking of burglarious attacks. One of these is the oxy-acetylene torch, which is no respecter of screwdoors.

I can recall how these screwdoor safes came into the South and Southwest, beginning about a dozen years ago, and how we, the bank robbers, did more than any one else to cause its introduction. I remember how it disconcerted us, for it promised our undoing.

In the period I speak of the screwdoor was already in use in cities and generally in the North, but the small banks in the West and South had not adopted it, for it is a costly piece of machinery.

I was then operating a gang in these backward sections and making hash of the old vaults, safes and chests then in use. Even the best burglar proof safes of all types except the screwdoor yielded to skillful use of the nitro—and the bankers were up in arms.

But here's what happened. Let us say we went into the town of Blankville, N. C., and there blew the bank safe and got off with a good haul. Immediately every banker within fifty or a hundred miles got a scare, inquired what type of safe we had robbed, and usually found that it was as good as or better than his own. He was appalled. Then, within the week, salesmen for all the concerns that made the screwdoor safes appeared on the scene. These salesmen follow in the wake of bank robbers like gulls following a ship.

But what of the yeggmen who had been attacking the old safes for almost a generation and making a fat living out of it? Those that knew how to keep out or get out of prison? The trouble with an effective defensive device is that it doesn't cure the criminal. It merely puts him to the trouble of inventing counter measures. So, even in my day, the yeggs who had formerly shunned all daylight jobs as something out of their line, began to turn themselves into stickup men and attack banks in this new-old way.

There is something noteworthy in this, for ordinarily the criminal sticks to his last and will on no account change his manner of committing a given crime. The more unenlightened among the old yeggmen had a fear of daylight crimes that amounted to a horror. It was a positive superstition among them—and all criminals are more or less superstitious and believe in signs and omens. The dangerous nature of their lives conduces to this. But here they were up against necessity, the only force that makes even superstition weak.

So the old yeggmen began holding up banks by daylight. They immediately translated "holding up a bank" into their own vernacular and there came to be a new term in the yegg language—"elevating a jug." If you understand that to a yeggman a bank is a jug, you can trace the etymology of the term for yourself.

I venture to say that by far the larger number of all the bank holdup men of to-day are transformed yeggs, the nocturnal burglars of other days turned to elevating jugs. The rest are young men, some of them ex-soldiers, who have been attracted to crime by the accounts in the papers and the representations in the moving pictures of such crimes. These are facts for the police to remember. If an officer has a good description of a man who has figured in a bank holdup, he had better go through the list of yeggmen in his rogues' gallery. If he fails to find anything there, let him be fairly certain that his man is a new criminal.

It is easy to see how these recruits are gathered. Take ex-service men, for instance. Criminals, actual and hard chaps, were drawn into the ranks with the orderly and virtuous, and some of these ex-service men with tough leanings offer a fertile soil for the recruiting of criminals of the violent type because these men have been in war, have been insured to lives of danger and adventure, and have learned the handling of firearms. Again, they have learned to hold human life, including their own, cheaply. That is one of the chief psychological effects of armed conflict. I suppose it cannot be helped. These young men and other young men, out of work or discontented with life, read in the papers, day after day, of bank holdups in which the criminals have made off with thousands and even hundreds of thousands of dollars. (In a Post Office holdup in Toledo recently the loot amounted to $1,000,000.) These accounts of money in great sums, got easily and swiftly by a mere display of courage and daring, inflame the minds of such chaps and lead them to imitate the experienced criminals.

It is a fact that these young beginners are often the most dangerous. The hardened robber knows that he must not kill, for by taking life he adds to the rigor and tenacity of the pursuit and exposes himself to the rope or the electric chair if caught. He kills only when cornered, and even then he tries to shoot his way out with shots aimed at the air. But these youngsters are heedless and headless. Many are of a degenerate type, mentally deficient, addicted to drugs, and what not? Some are young foreigners from countries where life is held cheaply at all times: Thus in the holdup of the Citizens' National Bank of Bay City, Mich., last December, two young Italian roughs, who had never before committed such a crime, entered the bank early in the evening, shot down the cashier and a citizen in cold blood, without the slightest need, and then made off with between twenty and thirty thousand dollars. No resistance had been offered and no attempt was made to catch the assassins, who got away cleanly, but were caught later.

The change of attacking method and its results may be clearly seen in the case of a single bank, that at Sandy Springs, Md. In this bank, which is so situated that the yeggs always considered it a good mark, there was in my day a good time lock safe of the type then considered burglar proof. Between 1905 and 1912 there were, to my knowledge, four attempts against this bank by yeggmen. The first failed because the robbers alarmed the town with their explosion. Later there were three other attempts, but all were foiled by the vigilance of the town. One man, whom I ought to know pretty well, participated in the second attempt, but his gang was driven off in a "gunning match" with the citizens in which powder was burned and no one hit. Finally, according to my information, the bank put in a screwdoor safe. Then and there the burglarious attacks stopped.

It seems to me that the public has no more understanding of the criminal problem now than twenty years or fifty years ago. We fail to recognize that there is a definite criminal population, to which, according to the estimates of some criminologists 2 per cent. of the population belong, permanently or intermittently. This probably takes into account mere misdemeanants and the offenders against sobriety and other social codes. I can't say as to these figures, but I do not know there are many thousands of professional robbers who live off society, often in certain quarters official connivance or complaisance. These must live somewhere, and they do have their special habitats outside prisons.
